* The total area of the British Empire is nearly 11,402,000 square miles, with a total population of about 410,000,000. The known surface of the globe is estimated at 55,000,000 square miles, and its total population is believed to be about 1,800,000,000; so that the British Empire occupies approximately 21 per cent., or more than one-fifth, of the earth's surface, and its population is in the proportion of 22 per cent., or over one-fifth, of the inhabitants of the globe. The total revenue exceeds £400,000,000, the debt totals over £1,500,000,000, and the trade exceeds £1,600,000,000. Railways to the extent of 92,000 miles have been opened, and 12,160,000 net tons of shipping sail under the British flag, while nearly 265,000,000 tons enter and clear annually at British ports.

(1) The United Kingdom consists of the Kingdom of England, the Principality of Wales (A.D. 1284), the Kingdom of Scotland (A.D. 1603), and the Kingdom of Ireland (A.D. 1801), with a total area of 121,377 square miles, and an estimated population of 43,659,121.

(2) The Empire of India extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia, and with its dependencies occupies a total area of 1,900,000 square miles, with a population estimated at 300,000,000.

(3) The British Dominions beyond the Seas include:—

EUROPE. The Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, Gibraltar, Malta, and Cyprus.

ASIA. The Island of Ceylon and its dependencies, the Straits Settlements, the Federated Malay States, Hong Kong and Weihaiwei, with portions of the Island of Borneo and the Island of Labuan, in the Eastern Archipelago.

AFRICA (excluding the "occupied" Ottoman Province of Egypt and the jointly "protected" Sudan Provinces). There are in the West, the Gambia, Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast Colony, Lagos and Southern Nigeria with the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria; in the South and South-East, the self-governing Cape Colony, Basutoland, the Bechuanaland Protectorate, the Transvaal, the Orange River Colony, and the self-governing Colony of Natal, with the Territories of the British South Africa Company, commonly known as Rhodesia, which form a connecting link between the Colonies and Protectorates in the South and the Protected Territories in the East and Centre of the vast Continent, which are known as the East Africa, With, Uganda, Zanzibar, British Central Africa, and the Somaliland Protectorates. About 500 miles east of Madagascar lie the island of Mauritius, with its dependencies, and the Seychelles Islands.

NORTH AMERICA.—The Dominion of Canada, which extends over the whole of the northern portion of North America, except Alaska in the North-West, and contains an area of nearly 3,750,000 square miles, with about 5,530,000 inhabitants, and the Island of Newfoundland (which, together with the Dominion, is self-governing), with 40,000 square miles and 200,000 inhabitants, occupy the greater portion of the northern half of America. The West India Colonies of Jamaica, Turk's and Caicos Islands, Bahamas, the Leeward and Windward Islands, Barbados, and Trinidad and Tobago, have a total area of nearly 12,000 square miles, and a population of about 1,360,000.

SOUTH AMERICA. The mainland Colonies of British Guiana and British Honduras, and the detached islands of Ascension, Falklands and dependencies, and St. Helena.

AUSTRALASIA.—The Commonwealth of Australia consists of the Island Continent of Australia and the Island of Tasmania, and, together with the Colony of New Zealand, is self-governing. The Fiji Islands, a portion of New Guinea, and certain Protected Islands in the South Seas, contribute to a total area for the Australasian Dominions of approximately 3,174,000 square miles, and contain a population of nearly 5,000,000.

* An enlarged edition of WHITAKER'S ALMANACK, containing the whole of the Popular Edition, together with a supplement devoted to the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Foreign Countries, Sport, Additional Astronomical Tables, Shipping and Railways, Holiday and Health Resorts, County and Municipal Directory, &c., is also published, neatly half bound, 792 pages, price 2s. 6d. net. (See Table of Contents, p. 470.)

Population of the United Kingdom.

PREVIOUS to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1813 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

| 1570.....4,160,221 | 1670.....5,773,646 |
| 1600.....4,811,718 | 1700.....6,045,008 |
| 1630.....5,600,517 | 1750.....6,517,035 |

During the eighteenth century, manufactures attracted the rural population to towns, in consequence of which many villages were comparatively deserted. The American War and the French Revolutionary War carried off large numbers of men; and this, coupled with the removal of the rustic population, gave rise to the impression that the inhabitants of the country had decreased, and were rapidly decreasing. The first general Census in 1801 dispelled this idea, and showed that, notwithstanding all drawbacks, there were many more people than anyone supposed. Since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results:

 Incorrectly taken. § Decrease.

From the above figures it appears that the population of the United Kingdom (including Islands in the British Seas) in 1901 showed an increase of upwards of 3,725,000 when compared with the population in 1891, and the number of inhabited houses an increase of 908,000.

IN the following table the Population and Birth and Death Rates for the year 1905 are shown for some large towns in the United Kingdom and in different parts of the globe. The population of each town in the United Kingdom (with the exception of certain Irish towns) is estimated to the middle of 1905.

THE BUDGET, 1906-7.

In the Financial Statement or Budget for the Year 1906-1907 (1 April to 31 March), introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 30 April, 1906, the Revenue was estimated at £144,860,000 on the existing basis of taxation, and the Expenditure at £141,786,000, leaving an estimated Surplus of £3,074,000. The sum of £500,000 was therefore added to the Sinking Fund, and £135,000 set aside for Educational grants, and a reduction was effected in the Tea Duty (£920,000), while the Export duty on coal was abolished (£1,000,000), and changes proposed in the Postal Rates (£105,000), decreasing the Revenue by £2,025,000. The final figures were adopted at £142,835,000 for Revenue, and £142,421,000 for Expenditure, leaving a Balance of £414,000 for contingencies. The Revenue in 1905-6 exceeded the Budget estimates by £1,524,000, the Receipts from Taxes showing an increase of £925,000 (Customs + £425,000, Excise + £30,000, Estate Duties − £30,000, Stamps + £180,000, Land Tax − £30,000, and Property and Income Tax + £350,000). The non-tax Revenue was £599,000 more than the Budget estimate (Post Office + £380,000, Telegraph Service + £80,000, Crown Lands + £10,000, Suez Canal Shares + £65,000, and Miscellaneous Heads of Revenue + £64,000. These increases made the final receipts of Revenue, 1905-1906, £143,978,000, leaving a realised surplus of £3,465,620.

The naval expenditure of the British Empire on sea-going force in 1905 6 was £33,200,000, of which the U.K. contributed £32,863,600. The aggregate net tonnage of the Mercantile Marine protected thereby was 10,554,520 (U.K.) and 1,601,521 (India and Colonies), total 12,156,101 net tons, which carried the annual value of nearly £1,500,000,000 (including bullion and specie) in 1905-6. The naval expenditure is therefore 2·2 per cent., if regarded as a premium for insurance. Other nations spend as follows in millions of £ —U.S.A., 20·2 to protect 3,996,479 tons of Mercantile Shipping; Japan, 5·2 for 873,530 tons; Russia, 12 for 862,909 tons; Germany, 10·5 for 3,564,798 tons; and France, 12·5 for 1,728,038 tons.

THE INCOME TAX.

A TAX on Income was first imposed by Pitt in 1798, in order to meet the expenses of the French War, and at the conclusion of peace in 1801 it was abolished. In 1803 the Income Tax was again imposed as a Property Tax, divided into Schedules A, B, C, D, and E, as at the present time, the rate being 1s. in the £ on incomes exceeding £60, except in the case of Schedule B, where the rate was 9d. in England and 6d. in Scotland. In 1805 the rate was increased by 3d., and in 1807 the figures were 2s. in the £ on Schedules A, C, D, and E, 1s. 6d. on Schedule B for England and 1s. for Scotland. At the conclusion of peace the Income Tax ceased for 26 years (1816–1842), to be re-imposed by Sir Robert Peel on June 22, 1842, at the rate of 7d. in the £ on all incomes exceeding £150. Since that date the Tax has become one of the principal sources of National Income, with rates varying from 1s. 4d. in 1857 to 2d. in 1874–1876. The following table shows the rate of the Tax from 1842, when it produced about £5,000,000, or about £710,000 per 1d. of tax, to 1881, when the yield was £10,000,000, or £2,000,000 per 1d. of tax. A table is also given of the tax since April 5, 1881, showing rate and produce.

THE NATIONAL DEBT amounted on 31 March, 1906, to £788,990,187 Gross and £744,871,911 Net, being at the rate of £17 1*s.* 2*d.* per head of the population of the United Kingdom; the annual cost for 1905-6 being £28,000,000, or 13*s.* 0*d.* per head. This amount is mainly the remnant of the growth of many years, and nearly all was raised for foreign wars. There was a trifling sum of £664,263 until the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688, which added nearly £16,000,000 to the Debt. Under Queen Anne the campaigns of the Duke of Marlborough added nearly £38,000,000, part of which was paid off in the time of George I. In the reign of George II. about £87,000,000 were added, but the first twelve years of George III. saw £10,000,000 of this paid off. The American War added £121,000,000, making the total nearly £250,000,000, which was reduced considerably until 1793, when the repayments ceased owing to the outbreak of the French Revolutionary War. In twenty-three years, £601,500,343 were added to the debt for the purposes of the war, the following amounts being raised:—

The amount of the Debt in January, 1816, capitalised in the manner adopted since 1835, was £900,436,000 (Funded, £816,312,000; Unfunded, £44,727,000; Annuities, £39,397,000), the annual charge being nearly £33,000,000. With peace secured, efforts were made to reduce the Debt, and the following amounts were paid off from 1817–1837:—

| Year | £ | Year. | £ | Year. | £ |

At the accession of Queen Victoria the amount stood at nearly £788,000,000, with an annual charge of £29,000,000. Small sums were paid off annually from 1837–1854, when the Russian War added £33,000,000 to the Debt. Repayments were made from 1858 onwards, with slight increases in 1868, 1875, 1878, 1879 and 1886, the following being the actual amounts paid off:

Imports and Exports Classified (1901–1905).

The tables on pages 334, 335, and 336 show the value of British Imports and Domestic Exports for the last five years, differentiating Colonial and Foreign customers, and summarising the merchandise into the four main headings of Food, Drink and Tobacco, Raw Materials, Manufactures, and Miscellaneous. The values are as ascertained by the Board of Trade, and represent in the case of Imports the full value (what is known as "C.I.F."), i.e., cost, insurance and freight, or if sent on consignment the sale value at the date of entry; in the case of exports the term "Domestic" includes only British and Irish produce or manufactures, and the values are those known as "F.O.B.," i.e., cost and charges for delivery on board the ship.

It must always be borne in mind that Imports have two values—F.O.B. when they start and C.I.F. when they arrive, the latter being the free on board, or cost, plus insurance and freight. Similarly, exports scheduled with their F.O.B. values as above are enhanced in value (= C.I.F.) by the time they are landed.

THE BRITISH ISLES.

The British Isles, including the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, lie between the 48th and 61st degrees of N. latitude, and the 2nd degree of East and the 11th degree of West longitude. The total area is 77,683,084 acres, or 121,377 sq. miles, with a population in 1906 of 43,659,121. In 1905 there were 1,163,708 births (26·9 per 1000), 669,630 deaths (15·5 per 1000), and 314,550 marriages (14·6 per 1000) in the United Kingdom. The average strength of the Armed Forces of the United Kingdom was 903,404 officers and men in 1906, and the Police numbered 61,896. The number of Immigrants was 205,193, and of Emigrants 459,662, in 1905. The number of Paupers and Dependents in Jan. 1906 was 1,124,422, and 14,160 Criminals were convicted in 1905. There were in 1905 39,616 registered Joint Stock Companies trading in the United Kingdom, the paid-up capital amounting to £1,954,337,135, and 2,014 incorporated Building Societies, with liabilities of £52,852,148 (exclusive of 61 unincorporated societies, with liabilities of £15,296,449). There were also 2,185 Industrial and Provident Societies, with 2,195,400 members, having a share capital of £28,254,716 and a sales total of £92,789,884. In 1905 there were 27,479 applications for Patents, of which 14,786 were sealed, and 4,261 Trade Marks were registered. With regard to Insolvency, 5,286 persons were adjudicated bankrupts in 1905, with total liabilities £6,109,492 and assets £2,882,911. In 1904 sailing and steam vessels numbering 321 were totally lost, their tonnage being 142,730, and 619 lives were lost, of whom 27 were passengers and 592 crew. Of the total area, 47,673,115 acres were under cultivation in 1905, 8,350,796 acres being under corn crops, 4,144,374 under green crops, 34,644,696 other crops, grass, permanent pasture, etc. The live stock included 2,116,800 horses, 11,674,019 cattle, 29,076,777 sheep, and 3,601,659 pigs; 60,332,653 bushels of wheat, 65,003,559 bushels of barley and bere, 166,286,396 bushels of oats, were grown in the United Kingdom, while 97,622,752 cwt. (about 195,245,504 bushels) of wheat and 11,954,763 cwt. of meal and flour were imported in 1905.

ENGLAND

may be roughly said to be divided from Scotland on the north by the Cheviot Hills and the rivers Tweed and Solway, and from Wales by the Severn and Dee. Except in the west and the north, England is for the most part a level country, so cultivated as to be highly productive. The other districts have mineral riches, including iron, tin, lead, zinc, slate, and coal, which make abundant amends for the poverty of their surface.

The southern and eastern parts of England have a population mainly derived from Belgic Gaul, whilst the western districts and Wales have been peopled from the West of France and the North of Spain, while Ireland and Scotland are believed to have been peopled by a race originally Belgic. When the Romans first came to our shores the inhabitants might have been roughly divided into two sections: those who lived inland, and who may with some reason be called Celtic colonists, were a race of hunters and shepherds, dressed in the skins of beasts, and inhabiting huts made of rude wickerwork and covered with rushes; whereas the coast-dwellers were, probably, of Gallic origin, with some approach towards civilisation, and holding intercourse, for purposes of trade, with foreign merchants visiting the island. Neglecting the Romans, who were no more than mere military garrisons, and mingled little with the natives—much like Europeans in the East at the present day—we have the Saxons and Jutes established from Kent to Devonshire, and the Angles (and subsequently the Norsemen) from the Thames to the Tweed. The Norman Conquest brought in a mixed multitude from the Continent; the wars of Stephen introduced a numerous body of Flemings, who were settled by Henry II. in Wales; and the commercial views of Edward III. led to the establishment of a still larger body of the same people as clothworkers in Kent. The west of England was known to the Phœnicians, and was resorted to by them for its tin, four centuries or more B.C.; hence the whole country received the name of the Cassiterides, or Tin Islands. When invaded by Cæsar (B.C. 55) it was called Britain (perhaps derived from Prydain, the name of an early chief of great power), or sometimes Albion, that is, the White Land, from the white cliffs on the S.E. coast.

Occupations (1901).—Of the 12,134,259 males of 10 years and upwards in England and Wales in 1901, 1,071,040 were engaged in Agriculture, 1,042,864 in Building and Works, 774,291 in Food, Tobacco, Drink and Lodging, 640,989 Coal and Shale Mine Workers, 626,263 Engineering and Machine Making, 548,190 Dock, Coal and General Labourers, 430,645 Road Conveyance, 351,911 on Railways, 311,618 Professional, 307,889 Commercial or Business Clerks, 233,000 Wood, Furniture, Fittings and Decorations, 229,123 Tools, Dies, Arms and other Metal Trades, 222,796 Merchants, Agents, Accountants, Banking and Insurance, 196,898 Cotton Manufactures, 184,081 Boot and Shoe Trades, 180,496 Messengers, Porters and Watchmen, 179,932 Domestic Outdoor Service, 171,687 General or Local Government, 168,238 Defence, 131,429 Seas, Rivers and Canals, 130,731 Precious Metals, Jewels, Watches, Instruments and Games, 124,263 Domestic Indoor Service, 119,545 Tailors, 115,083 Cycles, Coaches and other Vehicles, 111,081 Drapers, Mercers and Dress, 107,170 Printers and Lithographers, and 101,938 Chemicals, Explosives, Oil, Grease and Soap Makers. Of females, 3,254,242 unmarried and 917,509 married, aged 10 and upwards, were occupied, 1,330,783 being in Domestic Indoor Service, 340,582 Dressmakers, 332,233 Cotton Manufactures, 196,141 Laundry and Washing, 172,873 Teaching, 142,687 Food and General Shopkeepers, 122,068 Woollen and Worsted Manufactures, 117,640 Tailoresses, 111,841 Charwomen, and 95,900 Staymakers, Shirtmakers and Seamstresses.

THE following tables show the Area and Population of each County in England and Wales according to the Census of 1901, the Rateable Value as settled by the Assessment Committees in the Valuation Lists in 1905, the amount of Rates received by Boards of Guardians of Poor Law Unions in each county for their own purposes (i.e. excluding county contributions) during the year ended Lady Day, 1905, together with the number of Paupers who were actually in receipt of relief on Jan. 1st, 1906.

The total population of England and Wales in 1901 was 32,527,843, as compared with 29,002,525 in 1891. The total number of Paupers receiving relief on Jan. 1st, 1906, was 526,741, being a decrease of 5,526 when compared with the previous year. The total cost of Relief to the Poor for the year ended Lady-Day, 1905, excluding the expenditure of the Metropolitan Asylums Board in connection with hospitals for infectious diseases, was £13,849,793.

The total amount of Rates received by Boards of Guardians in England and Wales for their own purposes during the year ended Lady Day, 1905, was £11,839,847, as compared with £11,672,977 in the previous year. This was equivalent in 1905 to a rate of 9*s.* 3*d.* in the £ on Assessable Value or 7*s.* 0*d.* per head on estimated population. The receipts in aid of these Rates, inclusive of grants from County and Borough Councils, and grants under the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, amounted to upwards of £3,700,000. The gross cost of Relief to the Poor for the year ended Lady-Day, 1905, amounted to 8*s.* 2½*d.* per head of the estimated population. (For statistics and other particulars as to Wales, see next page.)

THE Principality of Wales, with an extreme length of 135 miles and a breadth varying from 35 miles to 95 miles, lies in the S.W. of Great Britain, and has an area of 7,370 square miles, or about 4,716,000 acres. The Principality is rich in minerals; slate, coal, and iron being among the more important; while of its manufactures, flannel, cloth, and hosiery alone are worthy of mention. The native inhabitants are almost wholly of the Cymric stock of the Celtic race; and a large number of them belong to the religious body known as the Calvinistic Methodists.

At what time Christianity was introduced it is impossible to tell, but certainly not later than A.D. 400. When the British Christians were driven from their homes, such of them as did not seek refuge beyond the seas found in the rocky fastnesses of the Welsh mountains a secure retreat from their enemies. There they immediately set about dividing the country into ecclesiastical divisions for administrative purposes, and the present sees of Wales represent those leading centres of religious thought that became famous in the sixth century.

The four bishoprics still remain as of old, and the numbers of beneficed clergy now to be found in them are as follows: St. David's, 360; Llandaff, 246; St. Asaph, 206; and Bangor, 147. The sees of St. David's and Llandaff were united with the Southern province in the year 1107, and those of Bangor and St. Asaph in the years 1092 and 1143 respectively.

When the Saxon pirates began to visit and ravage the eastern shores of Britain, the Celtic inhabitants were gradually pressed westward by the invading hordes, and finally found secure shelter in the wilds of Wales, Devon, and Cornwall. The border-lands, or marches, between England and Wales were long in a state of at least guerilla warfare; and it was not until about 850 A.D. that one Roderick (Rhodi Mawr) contrived to unite the whole country into one Principality, dividing it afterwards among his sons into three smaller ones, named, severally, Gwynedd, Dyved and Ceredigion, and Powis. This was followed by the incursions of the Danes, after which Howel once more (in the 10th century) succeeded in reuniting the country. Later, when England was tending in the same direction of unity, Athelstane received a tribute from the Welsh in recognition of his nominal sovereignty over them. William I. and his son Rufus both tried the plan of granting fiefs to their more adventurous Norman knights, on condition of their conquering the land, while Henry I. introduced into the Principality a colony of Flemish wool-workers. Henry II., too, and John, endeavoured, with doubtful success, to effect a final subjugation of the troublesome province. A combination of fortuitous circumstances led to its lasting conquest. Llewellyn, who succeeded David, had been implicated in the Montfort rebellion, but, on the accession of Edward I., managed to get included in the general amnesty granted to those who had joined the Leicester faction. In 1276, however, Edward, having been repeatedly refused the homage due to him from Llewellyn, raised an army to enforce his commands. Internal dissensions among the Welsh greatly aided the English, and Llewellyn, at length cooped up and almost starved to death among the Snowdon mountains, was forced to submit at discretion, and accept the terms offered by the victor (1277). By the grace of Edward the Welsh prince was allowed to return to the Principality; but trouble arising again, in which both Llewellyn and his brother David were concerned, a war arose, and the independence of Wales was for ever shattered. Llewellyn was slain in battle in 1282, with two thousand of his followers; and in the following year David, being betrayed to the English, was sent in chains to Shrewsbury, and at last put to a painful and ignominious death as a traitor. The Welsh nobility then submitted in a body, and King Edward invested his son Edward (who had been born at Carnarvon) with the Principality, which very soon afterwards was fully annexed to the Crown. In later days the history of Wales has been almost identical with the history of England, the Principality and Country marching side by side in sure and steady progress.

In education the Principality has made great strides of recent years, and possesses a University (Prifysgol Cymru), consisting of the three university colleges of Aberystwyth, Bangor, and Cardiff, in addition to St. David's College at Lampeter.

The following table of statistics contains some interesting information with reference to the various individual counties of Wales. In addition to those named, Monmouth is, not without good reason, claimed as a Welsh county; if admitted, it would add over a quarter of a million to the population of the Principality, thus making it larger than that of Scotland in the early part of the last century. The Welsh is a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of its own.

THE most northerly part of the island, divided from the south by the River Tweed, the Cheviot Hills, and the Solway Firth, is the ancient Caledonia or modern Scotland, a mountainous country, and to a great extent bleak and barren, but inhabited by a race of men who have made the country productive, wealthy, and prosperous. It contains nearly 30,000 square miles, or 19,069,500 acres, of which not quite 4,500,000 are in a state of cultivation, with a population in 1881 of 3,735,573, of 4,025,647 in 1891, and of 4,472,103 in 1901.

In the Highland regions the crofters carry on a primitive system of farming, and the distilling of whiskey is a typical industry. Sheep farming is carried on, but a great part of the land is preserved for deer. The South Eastern Highlands contain granite in profuse quantities, and supply at Aberdeen a famous breed of cattle for the London market. In the Northern Lowlands grazing, fishing and manufacture of woollens are the chief occupations. The Western, Eastern and Mid Lowlands are immensely fertile and contain iron and coal fields. The principal industries are flax and jute (Dundee), cottons (Paisley), shipbuilding and engineering (Glasgow and Greenock), dyeworks (Perth), and printing and brewing (Edinburgh). The product of the sea fisheries amounts annually to about £2,300,000, and over 30,000,000 tons of coal were raised in Lanarkshire and the other mining districts in 1902, and about 150,000 hands were employed in textile industries. The annual value of the trade of Scotland is about £72,000,000, of which £39,000,000 represents the value of imports. The principal ports, with the tonnage of entries in 1905, are Glasgow (1,635,609), Leith (1,124,281), Grangemouth (717,538), Methil (703,989), Kirkcaldy (23,933), Borrowstounness (265,222), Dundee (266,454), Ardrossan (223,097), Aberdeen (164,521), Granton (126,142), Greenock (91,549), and Alloa (101,464).

TERM DAYS IN SCOTLAND.

Candlemas, 2nd Feb.; Whit-sunday, 15th May; Lammas, 1st Aug.; Martinmas, 11th Nov.; Removal Terms, 28th May, 28th November.

When a Scottish Term falls on a Sunday, the day after is held as Term Day.

LAW TERMS. Sittings, 15th October to 20th March; 12th May to 20th July.

BANK HOLIDAYS. New Year's Day, 1st Jan.; Christmas Day (if either of the preceding falls on a Sunday, the Monday following shall be the Bank Holiday); Good Friday; First Monday in May; First Monday in August.

The above, with the addition of Her late Majesty's Birthday (Empire Day), are also the holidays observed in Customs and Inland Revenue Offices.

IRELAND is an island lying between 51° 26′ and 55° 23′ N. lat. and 5° 20′ and 10° 26′ W. long. It is about 60 miles to the west of England. On three sides it is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, and on the east by the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel. Its greatest length is, from north to south, 306 miles, and from east to west from 120 to 180, with an area of about 31,759 square miles. The total acreage is (1903) 20,350,725, of which 2,995,945 acres are barren mountain, turf bog, marsh, or building land. The greater part of the surface is a plain, interspersed with low hills, the highest mountain being 3,414 feet above the sea-level. The rivers are numerous, the Shannon, 254 miles in length, being the principal; but the chief water feature of the country is the beautiful series of lakes or (as they are called) loughs, the largest, Lough Neagh, covering a surface of 98,255 acres. The harbours are among the finest in the world. The climate is temperate, and many plants which can only be grown in hot-houses in England flourish in the open air in Ireland; while the great moisture which generally prevails is so favourable to vegetation that the country early received the name of the Green or Emerald Isle.

The population of Ireland on March 31, 1901, was 4,458,775 (2,200,040 males and 2,258,735 females), a decrease of 245,975, equal to 5·23 per cent. since the preceding Census of 1891. Of the counties, Dublin alone shows an increase in the decennial period amounting to 6·3 per cent., and of the provinces the population of Ulster shows a decrease of 2·28 per cent., Leinster 3·26 per cent., Munster 8·29 per cent., and Connaught 10·8 per cent. Of the total population the professional class numbered 214,343, domestic 219,419, commercial 97,889, agricultural 876,062, industrial 639,413. (Est. pop. 30 June 1906, 4,386,035.)

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1906 there were 43,888 acres under wheat, 1,076,281 under oats, 176,410 under barley, 10,446 under rye or bere, 2,259 under beans and pease—a total acreage of 1,309,284 under cereal crops; 616,097 acres were under potatoes, 278,343 under turnips, 67,190 under mangold, 40,820 under cabbage, 6,104 under vetch and rape, and 25,023 under carrots, parsnips and other green crops—a total of 1,033,667 under green crops; 55,171 acres were under flax, and 2,328,958 under hay; the total extent under crops of all kinds thus being 4,727,081 acres, while there were 12,309,015 acres of pasture. The produce in 1905 was 1,430,154 bushels of wheat, 6,893,495 bushels of barley and bere, and 49,849,509 bushels of oats; while 3,423,039 tons of potatoes, 4,722,478 tons of turnips and swedes, and 1,279,842 tons of mangolds were also grown.

The live-stock included 604,963 horses, 30,978 mules, 242,675 asses, 4,679,040 cattle, 3,714,768 sheep, 1,244,542 pigs, 287,255 goats, 18,976,862 poultry.

Industries.—In addition to agriculture and pasture, linen and shipbuilding are the principal industries in the north-east, sea fishing throughout the coast districts, distilling and brewing in many of the large towns, and cloth and lace locally. The western districts are being developed by the opening up of communication. An industry which is rapidly gaining ground is bee-keeping, the amount of honey produced in 1902 was 374,818 lb. in movable combs and 176,348 lb. in other hives, a total for the year of 524,166 lb.—a decrease of 194,052 lb. compared with 1901, but 105,715 lb. above the decennial average 1892–1901.

The total value of fish landed in 1905 was £413,364, the quantities being 998,206 cwt. (including 505,164 cwt. mackerel and 354,144 cwt. herrings), exclusive of salmon and shell-fish.

The government is semi-independent. A Lord-Lieutenant, appointed by each successive Ministry, exercises almost regal sway. The peerage consists of 176 members, who are represented in the Imperial Parliament by 28 of their number; and 103 members represent the country in the House of Commons.

The prevailing religion is Roman Catholic, 3,308,661, or 74·21 per cent. of the population professing that form of faith, there being also 581,089 Protestant Episcopalians, 443,276 Presbyterians, and 62,006 Methodists. Until the year 1871 the Established Church was a branch of that of England, with two archbishops and ten bishops, although the members of this communion were but 12 per cent.—9 per cent. of the remaining Protestants being Presbyterians.

Ireland is well supplied with educational establishments, having two universities, a large number of secondary schools, indirectly endowed under the Intermediate Education Board, and an admirable system of primary schools under the National School Commissioners. There is also a Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction which issues detailed reports, and assists generally in the development of agriculture and industry.

The legal establishment is similar to that of England, and is presided over by a Lord Chancellor.

ROYAL IRISH CONSTABULARY.

Headquarters, Dublin Castle £1,310,038.

The Royal Irish Constabulary, then styled "the Constabulary of Ireland," was formed in 1836 by the consolidation of the "Barony Constables" and the "Peace Preservation Police." The force is armed with rifle, sword, and pistol. Its duties are varied, and military as well as police work has often to be undertaken. In 1867, by Her late Majesty's command, the title of the force was changed from the Constabulary of Ireland to Royal Irish Constabulary, in special recognition of the splendid services rendered in the past, and in particular during the Fenian outbreaks of that year. Officers and men alike have given repeated proofs of conspicuous courage and daring, and of exceptional moderation under the most trying circumstances. Approximate strength of the force 1906–7—237 Head Constables, 1,620 Sergeants, 395 Acting Sergeants, and 7,485 Constables; total, 9,737.

ISLE OF MAN (MONA),

an island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3′—54° 25′ N. and long. 4° 18′—4° 47′ W., nearly equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. It is about 34 miles long, and from 10 to 12 broad, containing an area of 145,325 acres, with a population of 55,598. Curiously enough the history of the island is intimately linked with that of the Hebrides and the Kingdoms of Scotland and Norway. In the ninth century a body of malcontents from Norway emigrated to the western isles of Scotland, and their prosperity drew upon them the anger of the Norwegian monarch Harold, who in the year 870 sent forth a great expedition, conquered the Orkneys and the Shetlands, the Western isles, and Man, and added them to the kingdom already beneath his sway. For three centuries the Norwegian rule remained intact, but when, in 1263, Alexander III. defeated the famous Haco, at the battle of Largs, all these islands fell under Scottish rule. On his accession to the English throne, Henry IV. seized on the Isle of Man, and in 1406 bestowed it on the Stanley family. In 1736 James, 10th Earl of Derby, died without issue male; the earldom went to his next male heir, but the sovereignty of the island went, with the Barony of Strange, to his heir-general, James, Duke of Athole, on whose death the island descended to his daughter Charlotte, from whom, in 1765, Parliament purchased the sovereignty for £70,000. In 1827 the Crown purchased it for the sum of £417,144. The land is rich in minerals, lead, iron, blende, and slate, and exports large quantities of agricultural produce. About 50 miles of railway have been constructed, and about 23 miles of electric tram roads. The natives of this island belong to a mingled race of Celts and Norwegians, and the language, in which the Celtic element is predominant, is known as the Manx.

Man is governed by an independent Legislature called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Governor and Council, and the House of Keys. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. Unless signed by the legal quorum of each House a Bill is not sent for the Royal Assent, the quorum of the Upper House or Council being the Governor and two Members, and of the Lower House or Keys thirteen Members, the majority of the whole number (24). After receiving the Royal Assent, it does not become law until promulgated in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

CAPITAL: Douglas, pop. 19,223 (Castletown, pop. 1,963, is the ancient capital); the other towns are Peel, pop. 3,306, and Ramsey, pop. 4,729.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

comprise the bailiwicks of Jersey (including the Minquiers and Ecréhou Rocks) and Guernsey (in the latter of which are comprehended the small islands of Alderney, Sark, and Herm), situated off the north-west coast of France, at distances of from ten to thirty miles. They are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy now belonging to England, to which they have been attached ever since the Conquest. The area altogether is about 73 square miles: and the population in 1901 was 95,841—Jersey, 52,796, Guernsey, with Herm and Jetou, 40,328, Alderney, 2,054, and Sark, 506. The land under cultivation in Jersey amounted in 1904 to 19,290 acres, and in Guernsey (1904) 11,071 acres, the principal product of the soil of Jersey being potatoes and wheat, and in Guernsey green crops and oats. There were 2,292 horses, 11,560 cattle, 218 sheep, and 6,608 pigs in Jersey in 1904; in Guernsey (1904), 1,439 horses, 6,528 cattle, 209 sheep, and 5,099 pigs. The famous Jersey and Guernsey breed of cows has earned a well-deserved celebrity. The principal officer in each island is the Lieut.-Governor, who represents His Majesty. French is the official language of the local legislatures, called the States, and of the Royal Court, and the old Norman dialect is still spoken by the people, but English is now permissible in the legislative assembly. The Bailiff, appointed by the Crown, presides over the States and over the Royal Court or judicial body. The climate of these islands is mild, and the soil exceptionally productive. The islands being all but exempt from imperial taxation, they possess a very large trade. The chief town of Jersey is St. Helier, on the south side, where there is excellent sea-bathing; the principal town of Guernsey is St. Pierre, on the east coast.

The City of London.

LONDON was a place of importance under the Romans, and was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it is said it received municipal institutions, which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was in reality a small independent State, and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them; and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burgesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff, which, in 1191, was changed to Mayor; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality, four times, A.D. 1397. 1398. 1406. 1419); and modern cases occur with Alderman Wood, 1815. 1816; Sir John Key, 1830. 1831; Alderman Cubitt, 1860, 1861; and Alderman Sir R. N. Fowler, 1883. 1885. The title of Lord Mayor is said to have been first bestowed in 1354 on Sir Thomas Legge, by Edward III.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III. in 1242, and were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life.

The Common Council was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers, who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1139. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens, however, lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888, but they continue as heretofore to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas, on which day the Lord Mayor is elected. He is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant, conducted with some degree of civic state, being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show. The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time 2 Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circ. 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (called Common Clerk) and Common Serjeant (now appointed by the Crown) are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II., A.D. 1319, but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

The London County Council.

Offices, Spring Gardens, S.W.

Hours 9.30 to 5 (Saturday 9.30 to 1).—Meets on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 121 square miles, with boundaries conterminous with those of the area over which, prior to 1889, the Metropolitan Board of Works exercised jurisdiction under the Metropolis Management Act of 1855, except that under the London Government Act, 1899, there was some re-arrangement of the county boundaries, the principal being that Penge was taken out of and South Hornsey was added to London.

The City of London is an electoral division of the county, and was not much affected by the Act. The County of the City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c.; and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties. Such matters as necessitate the consideration of both the administrative county and the non-administrative county are referred to "The Standing Joint Committee" of the London County Council and the London Quarter Sessions.

The Council comprises a chairman, 19 aldermen, and 118 councillors, together 138, or, if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman (as at present), 137. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and 10 or 9 retire every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years, and will all retire in March, 1907, the sixth council having been elected in March, 1904. The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen. The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office. The first meeting of the London County Council was held on the 21st March, 1889, under the presidency of Lord Rosebery.

The powers, duties, and liabilities of the Council include the following: First, those formerly belonging to the Metropolitan Board of Works in connection with the raising and loaning of money, and the sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs; main drainage, and the sanctioning of local sewers; fire brigade; parks and open spaces; works for prevention of floods by the Thames; Thames crossings (bridges, tunnels, and ferry); street improvements; controlling the width of new streets, the building line, and the naming and numbering of streets; supervising buildings and district surveyors; dangerous structures; structure of theatres and music-halls; artizans' dwellings; cattle diseases; explosive substances and petroleum storage; infant life protection; gas, gas-meter, and electric-meter testing; tramways, &c. Secondly, those transferred from former county justices in connection with the granting of music and dancing licences; provision of asylums for pauper lunatics, and of reformatory and industrial schools; testing weights and measures; county buildings; coroners; and other minor matters. Thirdly, powers transferred from various authorities with regard to highways; licensing of houses or places for the performance of stage-plays beyond the limits of the Lord Chamberlain's authority; licensing of slaughter-houses and of cow-houses; and the supervision of common lodging-houses. Fourthly, new powers with respect to registration of electors; public health; historic buildings and monuments; inspection of factories to secure means of escape from fire; suppression of nuisances; regulation of overhead wires; the administration of the Shop Hours and Shop Seats Acts, the Employment of Children Act, and the Midwives Act; reformatories for inebriates; the registration of motor cars; and the establishment of a steam-boat service on the Thames. Under the Education (London) Act, 1903, the Council became the authority for all public education in the county, both elementary and higher. As the central representative body in London, the Council also interests itself in the thousand and one things affecting the welfare of the people of London as a whole, and has delegates on the Metropolitan Water Board, the Thames and Lea Conservancy Boards, and numerous other boards, charities, &c.

The Council meets weekly, and receives reports from its numerous committees. The Finance Committee have important statutory powers. The Council is the principal money-raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a gross debt, according to the latest returns, of about £74,500,000, a Sinking Fund of £29,000,000, and an annual expenditure, including loans advanced to other bodies, of about fifteen millions, of which upwards of five millions are expended on education. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Asylums Committee have special powers under the Lunacy Acts, and manage Hanwell, Colney Hatch, Banstead, Cane-hill, Claybury, Bexley, and Horton Asylums. On the Horton estate an experimental working colony for 300 male epileptic patients has been opened, and a new asylum for 2,000 patients is in course of erection. Accommodation is provided for over 17,000 patients. The Housing of the Working Classes Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working-class dwellings. The Council in 1893 established a model municipal lodging-house for men at Parker Street, Drury Lane, and has opened a lodging-house for 800 men, on the lines of the Rowton Houses, at Mill Lane, Deptford, and during last year a second house of this class was opened at Drury Lane. It is the aim of the Council to make its working-class dwellings as a whole self-supporting, and at the present time the only charge on the rates is in respect of estates in course of development. The Bridges Committee are chiefly concerned with Thames crossings, including not only the bridges over the river, but also the tunnel under the river at Blackwall (opened in May, 1897), the foot-tunnel at Greenwich, and the free ferry at Woolwich. The rebuilding of Vauxhall Bridge was completed last year. The construction of a 30-feet (external measurement) tunnel to connect the districts of Rotherhithe and Shadwell is progressing rapidly. This tunnel will be 1¼ miles in length, and is estimated to cost upwards of £2,000,000, including the acquisition of property and formation of approaches.

The principal work of the Improvements

Committee for some years past has been the formation of the new street between Holborn and the Strand (authorised by Act of 1899), now known as Kingsway and Aldwych; the new thoroughfare was opened by H.M. the King on the 18th October, 1905. The improvement has cost nearly £5,000,000, but when the recoupment from the sale and letting of the surplus lands has been realised it is anticipated that there will be little or no charge on the rates. The Improvements Committee are also engaged upon a new embankment of the Thames between the Houses of Parliament and Lambeth Bridge (authorised by Act of 1900), and several smaller improvements.

The Fire Brigade, directed by the Fire Brigade Committee, has been much increased since the Council came into existence: the authorised staff now numbers over 1,300 men, and several new stations are being built, while old stations are being improved and enlarged. Perhaps the most popular work of the Council is that connected with its parks and open spaces. Amongst the latest additions to these open spaces in and around London are Marble Hill, Twickenham (to preserve the view from Richmond Hill), Avery Hill, Eltham, Hainault Forest, Essex, Springfield Park, Clapton, and Ruskin Park, Denmark Hill. The annual expenditure on the maintenance of parks and open spaces (upwards of 4,800 acres) is about £130,000.

The disposal of sewage is the work of the Main Drainage Committee. The metropolitan main drainage system comprises 290 miles of main, storm-relief, intercepting and outfall sewers, nine pumping stations and two sewage precipitation stations. All the sewage of London is conveyed to the outfalls at Barking and Crossness, and there the solid matters held in suspension are precipitated, the harmless effluent being allowed to flow into the river. A comprehensive scheme for enlarging the main drainage system was adopted by the Council in 1900, and this was supplemented in 1904 by a scheme of extensive flood relief works. These schemes are already well in hand. The total capital outlay on main drainage up to 31st March, 1905, was £9,633,000.

In previous Almanacks particulars have been given of the purchase by the Council of the most important tramway systems within the county. During 1906 the system of the London Southern Company, running between Vauxhall and Norwood, was added, and the Council is now in possession of all the tramways in London with the exception of a few miles of lines chiefly in the north-west. The tramways purchased by the Council on the north of the Thames, comprising in all about 50 miles of lines, were leased to the North Metropolitan Tramways Company for a period expiring in 1910, but on 1st April, 1906, the Council took over the working of these lines and compensated the company for the surrender of the remainder of the lease. This course was adopted with a view to the reconstruction of the lines for electric traction, and the conversion of a large section is already in a forward state. The tramways on the south of the river, comprising now over 60 miles of lines, have been worked by the Council since their acquisition. These lines are also being reconstructed for electric traction, and 40 miles of double line have been completed and are already working. The total capital outlay on tramways amounted, on 31st March last, to £4,724,477, and the debt outstanding to £4,274,459. The yearly revenue now amounts to about £1,400,000. This department of the Council's work is directed by the Highways Committee.

The Education Committee comprises thirty-eight members of the Council and five co-opted lady members. Names of these members will be found under the Alphabetical List of Councillors. According to a return recently published for the year 1904–5, the Council had a staff of about 20,000 teachers, of whom about 17,000 were engaged in public elementary schools, an administrative staff of about 500, and in addition about 400 officers engaged in the enforcement of school attendance. The average roll of public elementary schools was 750,000. The estimates of expenditure on rate account for education for the year 1906–7 amount to £5,177,132, of which £4,322,798 is for elementary and £854,334 is for higher education, which now includes evening schools and pupil teachers' centres, as well as secondary schools, training colleges, polytechnics, and technical institutes. The charge falling on the rates, after deducting grants and other receipts in aid, is £3,441,990, or 1*s.* 7*d.* in the pound—an increase of 1*d.* in the pound upon the rate for 1905–6.

Reference was made in the last Almanack to the establishment of a service of steamboats on the River Thames under an Act obtained in 1904. This service, though providing a much needed means of communication on the river, has not proved financially successful, and the boats were laid up at the beginning of October until next spring. Among the powers obtained from Parliament last session was an Act for the provision of a new county hall.

The expenditure of the Council is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock, and current income raised in a county rate. Certain contributions, including education grants, are also received from the Imperial Exchequer. The capital disbursements for the year ended 31st March, 1906, amounted to £3,421,968, including street improvements, £755,389; working-class dwellings, £280,208; main drainage, £533,347; fire brigade, £91,514; parks and open spaces, £40,989; bridges and tunnels, £275,930; lunatic asylums, £144,781; tramways, £699,002; steamboats, £36,613; and education, £362,011. The maintenance of such works, the sinking fund to pay off debt, and the interest on the debt, together with all recurring disbursements of every kind, are paid out of rates, or, in the case of tramways and working-class dwellings, out of receipts. Some idea of the nature and amount of the expenditure on rate account will be gathered from the statement on the next page.

During the year 1906 the Council made no further issue of London County Consolidated Stock, but provided for its capital requirements partly out of the proceeds of an issue made in December 1905, and partly by London County bills. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure within a period of 60 years. The total stock now outstanding amounts to about £67,000,000.

The rating for the year 1906-7 amounts to 2*s.* 9¼*d.* in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 2¾*d.* in the pound, together 3*s.* 0*d.* This includes 1*s.* 7*d.* for education. The assessable value of the County of London on 6th April, 1906, was £43,477,772—a 1*d.* rate over the whole county producing £181,157.

The following is a summary of the estimates of the amount to be raised by county rate for the year to 31st March, 1907, prepared at the beginning of the year. These figures do not include the receipts and expenses on account of the revenue-producing undertakings (tramways, working-class dwellings, &c.):—

The Metropolitan Water Board was created by the Metropolitan Water Act, 1902, and came into existence the following year, the duties of the Board being to supply water to the districts previously supplied, or authorised to be supplied, by the various authorities superseded. The total amount of water supplied during the year 1905-6 exceeded 79,572,500,000 gallons. It is to be noted that London water, taken as a whole, contained less than 10 microbes per cubic centimeter; practically always yielded a negative result with the B. Enteritidis Sporogenes test (with 10 c.c. of water); and in 74·3 per cent. of the samples contained no typical (flaginac) B. coli in 100 cubic centimeters of water, and in 1·8 per cent. only of the samples was this microbe present in one cubic centimeter.

The Board consists of the following 66 members, nominated by the constituent authorities of the water area:—

City of London, C. T. Harris, J.P.; Alderman Sir T. Vezey Strong.
London County Council, Sir R. M. Beachcroft; R. M. Beaton; G. Dew; H. J. Glanville; W. Goodman; Sir J. MacDougall; W. C. Parkinson; Lt.-Col. A. Rotton; H. R. Taylor; W. W. Thompson; H. Ward; Lord Welby, G.C.B.; E. White; and a vacancy.

LONDON POLICE.

The CITY POLICE district comprises an area of 673 statute acres, and contains two courts of justice, those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen are the magistrates. Although the area is comparatively small, the rateable value is enormous, and there are 26,923 night residents to be protected.

The Force comprises 1 Superintendent, 1 ditto, Detective Department, 4 Chief Inspectors, 15 District Inspectors, 20 Station Inspectors, 9 Detective Inspectors, 74 Sergeants, 12 Detective Sergeants, and 865 Constables; also 1 Sergeant and 60 Constables on private service duty.

The METROPOLITAN POLICE district embraces an area of 447,626 statute acres, with a population of between seven and eight millions. There are within this area fifteen Police Courts, viz., Bow Street, Clerkenwell, Marlborough St., Greenwich, Lambeth, Marylebone, North London (Stoke Newington Rd.), Old Street, South Western (Lavender Hill), Thames (Stepney), Tower Bridge, West Ham, West London (Vernon St.), Westminster, and Woolwich (see p. 183).

The force on Oct 28, 1906, consisted of 32 Superintendents, 552 Inspectors, 2,298 Sergeants, and 14,760 Constables, making a total of 17,642, with 311 horses.

It is scarcely possible to form an accurate estimate of the enormous actual value of the property under police protection, but the mean rateable value of the metropolitan area for Metropolitan Police purposes for the year 1905-6 was £50,950,879.

London City Livery Companies.

THE CITY COMPANIES, NUMBER OF LIVERYMEN (1906), CORPORATE AND TRUST INCOMES, MASTERS, CLERKS, AND HALLS.

As will be seen from the following table, many of the London Livery Companies are possessed of great wealth. Of some portion of the property they are merely trustees, but of the "corporate" property they are the sole owners, and may dispose of the income as they please. Fifteen of the Companies have more than ten thousand pounds a year, and most of them are very liberal in their charities, especially in the way of education. The Editor is apparently regarded with suspicion by the majority of the Companies, for his annual request for information as to the amount of the funds is, in almost every case, ignored. The following list is compiled from returns made (in many cases but partially) at the Editor's request. Where the return was incomplete the Editor allowed the old figures to remain. The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company.

| Company. | No. of Liverymen. | Corporate Income. | Trust Income. | Total Income. | Master or Warden, 1906 1907. | Clerk. | Hall.* |

* In case of a Company having no Hall, the address of the Clerk is given in brackets.

The rateable value of the Halls of the London Companies is about £55,000, and that of their Schools and Almshouses about £18,000 a year. The value of their Plate and Furniture is about £320,000, and the annual income of the livings in their gift—several of the "great" Companies are patrons of livings—about £12,300. In 1880 the Companies were indebted to the extent of about £270,000.

The above information is mainly derived from the report, in 5 vols., published in 1884, of the City Livery Companies' Commission appointed in 1880, of which the late Earl of Derby was chairman.

Parliamentary Boundaries. In consequence of changes of boundaries under the London Government Act, 1899, the County of London does not now include the whole of certain Metropolitan Parliamentary Divisions; on the other hand, it includes portions of certain Extra-Metropolitan Parliamentary Divisions.

The Metropolitan Police District extends over a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross, exclusive of the City of London, with a rateable value in 1905-1906 of £50,959,879, and embraces an area of upwards of 699 square miles. The number of new houses built since 1870 up to and including the year 1905 is 600,304, with 5,660 in course of erection: the new mileage since 1870 being 1,649.

* The Census of 1901 showed that the Population for the years from 1896 to 1899 had been over-estimated.

THE following list of Life Offices contains the names of all the more important British offices, of eight Colonial companies, and of three offices founded in New York.

DATE OF FORMATION.—This is of importance, as the normal rate of mortality is not experienced until the company has been doing business for five-and-twenty or thirty years. Any company established more recently than this must be judged largely by its prospects instead of by its results.

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system, whereby the whole of the surplus or profits are allotted to the participating policy-holders, or whether the company has proprietors or shareholders by whom part of the surplus is received. Many of the Life offices also transact other insurance business as well. These are indicated by letters in the column headed "Class." In such cases the Life funds are kept separately, and are not liable for the claims of other departments. The Share Capital, however, is usually liable for the claims of all branches. The companies in the first part of the Table all transact "ordinary" Life business; the companies doing Industrial business are stated separately.

FUNDS.—The Funds as stated in the table are in all cases taken from the Revenue Accounts deposited by the offices with the Board of Trade. The Paid-up Capital of Proprietary offices that transact Life business only is included in the Funds. Paid-up capital of offices transacting other classes of business as well is excluded from the Funds as stated in the Table, because such capital is available for other claims than those of the Life Branch. The Funds as well as the premium income are derived from the latest annual accounts published by the offices, the date in the majority of cases being December, 1905. The amount of the funds taken alone affords no indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless its liabilities are known as well as its assets.

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reassuring parts of such risks as the offices do not feel justified in retaining in their entirety.

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include not only the salaries of officials, rents of offices, cost of advertising, &c., but also, in all cases where it is paid, the commission paid to agents for the introduction of business. The amount of expenses as so understood is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently we have stated in the table the percentage of the premium income absorbed in commission and expenses. The average percentage of the whole of the British offices is about 14½%, of which 5½% is expended in commission and 9% on other expenses. This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading, because a large proportion of a company's expenditure is incurred in obtaining new business. If the proportion of new business to total business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses is also large; but when the expenses are distributed between new business and old, or renewal, business, a fair indication is obtained of the real expenditure that an office is incurring. Perhaps the most satisfactory way to split up this expenditure is to assume that the percentage of new premiums absorbed in expenses is ten times as much as the percentage of renewal premiums absorbed in expenses. The expenses per cent. of new premiums given in the table means therefore that if, as in the case of the Atlas, 66·6% of the new premiums goes in expenses, one-tenth of this percentage or 6·66% of the renewal premiums is the cost of managing the renewal business. These two percentages taken together exactly amount to the total expenditure of the office. The relative economy or extravagance of the various offices may therefore be better judged by the percentage of new premiums absorbed in expenses than by the percentage of total premiums. The average annual expenditure of British offices is 80% of new premiums and 8% of renewal premiums.

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned upon the funds is especially important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing the liabilities, since the greater the margin between the rates of interest earned and assumed, the greater is the surplus, and, speaking generally, the larger the bonus, though bonuses may fall at the time when a lower rate of interest is first adopted in valuing liabilities. The rate of interest here quoted is derived from the latest annual accounts, and is obtained by dividing 100 times the amount of interest, less Income Tax, by the mean of the funds at the beginning and the end of the year after deducting half a year's interest from the mean fund.

VALUATIONS.—The last two columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade usually every three, five, or seven years. It is not possible in the space here available to give anything but a very small part of the information supplied by these returns. A valuation consists of a calculation of the present liability of an office under its existing policies, after making allowance for the amounts it will have to pay and to receive. In making this calculation it has to be assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate. Various tables are employed, those most frequently used being Healthy Males ($H^m$), and British Offices ($O^m$) and the corresponding Tables $H^m(5)$ and $O^m(5)$ which exclude from observation the mortality in the first five years of assurance. If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future, the net liability will appear less than if it assumes that only a low rate of interest will be earned, while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others. Consequently the position of an office is very strong and satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted, because the margin between the calculated liability and the experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is larger also. The $H^m$ and $H^m(5)$ tables in conjunction are more stringent than the $H^m$ table alone, the $H^m$ is more stringent than the American, and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent the valuation.

The $O^m$ Tables usually require slightly stronger reserves than the $H^m$.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits. If the policy does not participate in profits, both the sum assured and the premium remain unchanged. If the policy does participate in profits, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses are declared from time to time. The bonuses may usually be used either to increase the sum assured or to reduce the premium, or they may be taken in cash. It is usually to the advantage of an assurer to take a policy that participates in profits, but to overcome the objection of the higher premium that participation in profits usually involves, a plan has been adopted in recent years whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce the premiums from the outset. This is called the "Discounted Bonus" or "Cost Price" system. If the bonuses actually declared exceed the bonuses anticipated, the difference is paid to the policyholder; if however the anticipated bonuses exceed the declared bonuses, the difference has to be paid by the policy holder or to remain as a debt upon the policy. We give below the average premiums charged by British offices for the three classes of policies. The rates quoted are the amounts payable annually for the whole of life to assure £100 at death.

The rates in the above table are the average of the rates of all the offices that quote these three classes of policy respectively. The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for the assurance of £100 at death with participation in profits in the different offices. Premium rates alone are not sufficient for judging the relative methods of life offices for participating policies. An office charging a high premium is more likely to give high bonuses than an office charging a low premium, and therefore the bonuses as well as the premiums have to be taken into account. But the details of bonuses are too voluminous to be given here; they may be obtained from various insurance annuals. Some offices only allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium, and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with, but are greatly reduced after a few years. The offices that make a special feature of this sort of policy are the London Life and the Metropolitan.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the assured however die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death. The annual premiums payable throughout the endowment period, or till death if previous, for the assurance of £100 at various ages of entry and maturity, are given in the next table. Endowment assurance may be taken either with or without participation in profits; it is usually advantageous to take participating policies. The discounted bonus system described above is also applied to endowment assurance policies.

THE following Table shows the amount of Annuity granted by the undermentioned Companies for every £100 paid. The age last birthday is that upon which the payment is based, but many offices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year of age. By a few Companies a proportionate amount of Annuity is payable to day of death.

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly; the annual payment is in nearly all cases higher if paid annually and less when paid quarterly.

Fire Insurance Rates.

RATES.—For merchandise at the principal ports, and for mills and manufactories and other leading industries throughout the United Kingdom, all the tariff or associated offices charge an identical minimum. Non-tariff and some class offices advertise that they assess individual risks on their merits. The following is a digest of the scale put forward by some of the oldest companies, and the rates and classification are those which are generally adopted.

Common Insurances.—At 1*s.* 6*d.* to 2*s.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions:—

1. Buildings covered with slates, tiles, or metals, and built on all sides with brick or stone, or separated by party-walls of brick or stone which are carried through the roof, and used for residence, or non-hazardous purposes.

2. Goods in buildings as above, such as household goods, plate, wearing apparel, and printed books, liquors in private use, and personal effects not comprised in the following categories.

Hazardous Insurances.—At 2*s.* 6*d.* to 3*s.* 6*d.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions:—

1. Buildings of timber and plaster, or not separated by partition walls of brick or stone, or not covered with slates, tiles, or metals, and thatched barns and outhouses, having no chimney, or adjoining to any building having a chimney; and buildings falling under the description of common insurances, but in which hazardous goods are deposited, or hazardous trades are carried on.

2. Goods.—The stock and goods of breadbakers, tallowchandlers (not melters), drapers, opticians, also chemists and grocers not dealing in mineral oils.

Doubly Hazardous Insurances.—At 4*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* per cent. per annum, with certain exceptions:—

1. Buildings.—All thatched buildings having chimneys, or communicating with or adjoining to buildings having one, although no hazardous trade shall be carried on, nor hazardous goods deposited therein, and all hazardous buildings in which hazardous goods are deposited, or hazardous trades carried on.

2. Goods.—All hazardous goods deposited in hazardous buildings, and in thatched buildings having no chimney; also china, glass, mathematical and musical instruments, pictures, and jewels in private use.

Much depends upon the surroundings of the building insured; for a printer's or bookbinder's workshop, in a narrow lane, with old wooden houses near it, the premium would possibly be from 10*s.* to 15*s.*

Special Insurances.—5*s.* per cent. per annum and upwards:—

Buildings and contents among others of workers in wood, dealers in mineral oils, large drapers, some mills, warehouses, and factories; in the case of some theatres the rate is as high as 31*s.* 6*d.* per cent.

The most recent returns of 39 British Fire Offices show a premium income of £23,535,255; losses, £11,305,213; expenses, £8,315,993. The losses amount to 48·04 per cent. of the premiums, and the expenses to 35·33 per cent., making together 83·37 per cent. of the premiums. In the previous year the losses were 59·95 per cent., expenses 34·60 per cent., together 94·55 per cent. of the premiums.

The following are Dr. W. Ogle's tables founded on the death-rates of 1871–80; in the 1897 Almanack a table appeared (p. 357) giving, alongside of the following, statistics compiled by Dr. Farr, of the General Register Office, on the basis of the death-rates of 1838–54. These columns are now omitted, and only the more recent figures appear. The first columns show the survivors of each sex at each year of life out of a million born; the other columns show the expectation of life at each year.

| AGE. | Of 1,000,000 Born, the Number Surviving at the End of each Year of Life. | | Mean After-Lifetime (Expectation of Life). | | AGE. | Of 1,000,000 Born, the Number Surviving at the End of each Year of Life. | | Mean After-Lifetime (Expectation of Life). | |

* When the annuity is payable at the beginning instead of at the end of the year, the amount for the following year, less £1, must be taken. Thus, for £1 at 2½ per cent. for 25 years, take 26 years, £36·012, and deduct £1 : £35·012.

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS.

LARGE sums of money are every year advanced to County or District Councils and other public bodies, for improvements, building of workhouses, schools, harbours, bridges, &c., to be repaid in a given number of years, including interest. The following scheme of tables for the repayments of Loans was compiled under the Local Government Act, 1858, and examined by the actuary of the National Debt Office. It gives the sums needed as the annual amount of principal combined with interest required for the liquidation of a debt of £100, at the stated percentage, in 10, 20, 30, 40, and 50 years:

| Years | 3 per Ct. | 3½ per Ct. | 4 per Ct. | 4½ per Ct. | 5 per Ct. |
| | £ s. d. | £ s. d. | £ s. d. | £ s. d. | £ s. d. |
| 10 | 11 14 5½ | 12 0 5½ | 12 6 7 | 12 12 9 | 12 19 0 |
| 20 | 6 14 5½ | 7 0 8½ | 7 7 2 | 7 13 9 | 8 0 5½ |
| 40 | 4 6 6½ | 4 13 7½ | 5 1 0½ | 5 9 8½ | 5 16 6½ |
| 50 | 3 17 8½ | 4 5 3½ | 4 13 1½ | 5 1 2½ | 5 9 6½ |

If the loan be for £1,000, each annual instalment as shown above must be multiplied by 10; if for £2,000, then by 20, and so on.

PERSONAL PROPERTY, INCLUDING LEASEHOLDS.

TABLE of Succession applicable to England and Scotland, and showing persons entitled to administer.

The persons entitled to administer are shown in brackets.

IN EACH INSTANCE IT IS SUPPOSED THERE ARE NO NEARER RELATIONS THAN THOSE NAMED.

[* Where this is prefixed the Regulation applies to Scotland only.]

By the Intestates' Estates Act, 1890, a very important change was made in the law as regards provision for widows of men dying intestate and without issue. Under this Act the widow in such a case is entitled to the whole estate both real and personal if under £500 in value; if over that amount she takes £500 out of the real and personal estate rateably before any division is made, and after that the share in the remainder to which she was entitled before the passing of the Act.

| If the Intestate die, leaving | His representatives take in the proportions following:— |
| Widow only | Half to widow. Half to the Crown. [Widow.] |
| Widow and child or children | One-third to widow, two-thirds to children in equal shares. In case of deceased children who have left issue, such issue take amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Widow.]*One-third to widow. One-third to living children in equal shares (but the heir must collate the heritable estate, and those children who have been advanced by intestate during life must collate the advances). One-third amongst living children per capita and issue of deceased children per stirpes. See NOTE A, next page. |
| Widow and father | Half to widow. Half to father. [Widow.] |
| Widow and mother, no father | Half to widow. Half to mother. [Widow.]*Half to widow, one-sixth to mother. Two-sixths to Crown. |
| Widow, brothers or sisters | Half to widow. Half equally amongst brothers and sisters, whether of the whole or half blood; if a deceased brother or sister has left issue, such issue take amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Widow.] |
| Widow, mother, nephews or nieces | Half to widow. One-fourth to mother. One fourth to nephews and nieces per stirpes. [Widow.]*Half to widow. One-sixth to mother, two-sixths to nephews and nieces per stirpes. |
| Husband, with or without children | All to husband. [Husband.] |
| Father, brothers, and sisters | All to father. [Father.]*One-half to father. One-half equally amongst brothers and sisters. |
| Mother, brothers, and sisters | All equally. [Mother.]*Mother one-third. Brothers and sisters two-thirds equally. |
| Mother, but no other kin | All to mother. [Mother.]*One-third to mother. Two-thirds to the Crown. |
| Child, children, or grandchildren by deceased child | Amongst children in equal shares, the grandchildren by deceased children taking amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Any number of children not exceeding three.] |
| Brother or sister, and nephews or nieces | Amongst brothers or sisters in equal shares, the children of deceased brothers or sisters taking amongst them their deceased parent's share. [Brother or sister.] |
| Brother or sister, and grandfather | All to brother or sister. [Brother or sister.] |
| Brother or sister, and uncles or aunts | All to brother or sister. [Brother or sister.] |
| Grandfather, no nearer relation | All to grandfather. [Grandfather.] |
| Father's father, and mother's mother | Equally to both. [Either or both.] |
| Grandmother, uncles, and aunts | All to grandmother. [Grandmother.]*All to uncles and aunts if paternal. |
| Great-grandfather, uncles, and aunts | Equally per capita. [To either or any number not exceeding three.] |
| Uncles and aunts | All equally. [To either or any number not exceeding three.] |
| Uncle, and deceased uncle's child | All to uncle. [Uncle.] |

|---|---|
| Uncle by mother's side, and deceased uncle or aunt's child | All to uncle. [Uncle.]*Child of deceased paternal uncle or aunt takes in exclusion of maternal uncle. |
| Aunts, nephew, and niece | All equally. [Either not exceeding three.]*Nephew and niece. |
| Cousins | Equally per capita. [Any number not exceeding three.] |
| Nephew by brother, and nephew by half-sister | Equally per capita. [Any number not exceeding three.]*All to nephew by brother. |

NOTE A.—Taking per capita is taking by head individually. Taking per stirpes is taking by descent or representation. Thus, if A. die leaving three brothers or sisters, and no nearer kin, they each take an equal part of his personal estate in his or her own right, i.e., per capita. If there are also children of a deceased brother or sister they share in the estate by taking amongst them the share which their deceased parent would have taken had he or she survived, i.e., per stirpes.

NOTE B.—By English Law, brothers and sisters of the half blood share equally with the whole blood. By the Scottish Law, brothers and sisters german (that is, by the same father and mother) and their issue take in exclusion of brothers and sisters consanguinean (that is, by the same father only) and their issue. And brothers and sisters consanguinean and their issue take in exclusion of brothers and sisters uterine (that is, by the same mother only) and their issue.

NOTE C.—Posthumous children take equally with those born in the lifetime of their father.

Intestates' Estates—Real Property.

(N.B.—Leaseholds are Personal Property.)

TABLE of Descent of Real Property in England on death of an intestate. No illegitimate child is capable of inheriting real estate. Custom of Gavelkind (descent to all sons alike) still exists in Kent, and custom of Borough English (descent to youngest son) in divers ancient boroughs. The Dower (viz., widow's thirds) of widows married since 1833 is in the majority of cases barred.

In each instance it is supposed that there are no nearer relations than those named.

| If Intestate die, leaving | Real Property would descend to— |
| Wife only, no blood relations | One-third to wife for life, rest to Crown; copyholds to lord of manor. |
| Wife and child or children, and children of a deceased child | One-third to wife for life in any case.Rest to eldest son or his issue, such son and his issue, whether male or female, being preferred to any other son and his issue, and all sons and their issue, whether male or female, being preferred to all daughters and their issue, whether male or female.If no son, rest to daughters equally.If daughters and grandchildren (sons and daughters of deceased daughter), rest to daughters and eldest son of deceased daughter. |
| Wife and father | One-third to wife for life; rest to father, if deceased purchased same, or had it left him by will. |
| Wife and mother | One-third to wife for life; rest to mother, there being no heirs on father's side. |
| Wife, brother, or sister, and children of a deceased brother or sister | One-third to wife for life in any case, rest to eldest brother or his issue. (See above, "Rest to eldest son or his issue," under head "Wife and child," &c.)Sister and children of deceased sister, rest equally between sister and nephew (eldest).Sisters and nieces, only, children of deceased sister, rest equally between sisters and nieces, nieces taking per stirpes. |
| Wife, mother, nephews, and nieces | One-third to wife for life; rest to nephew (eldest), or nieces, if brother left no son. |
| Wife, mother, brother, sisters, and nieces (children of deceased brothers and sisters) | One-third to wife for life in any case; rest to eldest brother.Rest to nieces, equally, if children of elder brother deceased. |
| No wife or child or issue of a deceased child | Lineal ancestor paternal, males of whole blood first. |
| Children by one or more wives, and the issue of deceased children | All to eldest son, or his issue. (See above, "Rest to eldest son or his issue," under head "Wife and child," &c.)Daughters equally. |
| Husband and child or children | Husband for life; afterwards to only child or to eldest son or issue of a deceased eldest son.If all daughters, to them equally. |
| Mother, but no wife, child, or issue of a child, father, brother, sister, nephew, or niece, or more distant descendants of father | All to mother in default of lineal ancestors on the father's side, or issue of such ancestors. |
| Mother, and brothers and sisters | All to eldest brother. |
| Mother and sisters | All to sisters. |

|---|---|
| Father, and brothers and sisters | All to father. |
| Child and grandchild by deceased child | See above, "Rest to eldest son or his issue," under head "Wife and child," &c. |
| Brother and grandfather | All to brother. |
| Brother's grandson, and brother or sister's daughter | All to great-nephew, if eldest brother's grandson.All to brother's daughter, if child of eldest brother |
| Brother and two aunts | Brother, all. |
| Brother and wife | One-third to wife for life; rest to brother. |
| Grandfather (no nearer) | All to grandfather. |
| Father's father & mother's mother | All to father's father. |
| Grandmother & uncle, or aunt on father's side (no nearer) | All to uncle or aunt. |
| Uncle, and deceased uncle's child | Uncle, unless deceased uncle was elder brother, when his child takes all. |
| Uncle by mother's side, and deceased uncle or aunt's child | Child of deceased uncle on father's side, or (if none) child of deceased aunt on father's side. |
| Two aunts, nephew, and niece, children of deceased brother | Nephew. |
| Uncle or aunt's children, and brother's grandchildren through a son | Eldest brother's grandson, or if granddaughters between them equally. |
| Nephew by brother, and nephew by half-sister | Nephew by brother. |
| Nephew by deceased brother, and nephews and nieces by deceased sister | All to eldest nephew, son of deceased brother. |

NOTE A.—By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, the real estate of a deceased person devolves to the personal representative of the deceased, and probate and letters of administration may be granted in respect of real estate only, although there is no personal estate. The ultimate ownership of real estate is not affected by these provisions, which are for the convenience of administration. As to the persons entitled to administration of real estate, they are substantially the same as in the case of personal estate; but the Court shall, in granting letters of administration, have regard to the rights and interests of persons interested in the real estate, and the heir-at-law, if not one of the next-of-kin, shall be equally entitled to the grant with the next-of-kin.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR OBTAINING PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION WITHOUT EMPLOYING A SOLICITOR.

THE entrance to the office for personal applications is in the south-east corner of the Quadrangle of Somerset House, Strand, Room 37. The applicant should bring the registrar's certificate of the death of the deceased, or an official certificate of burial, and the will, if there be one, and full details of the property and debts of the deceased.

If there be no will or no executor be appointed, or the executor will not act, two sureties must also attend and enter into a bond for the faithful administration of the estate, unless the whole personal estate does not exceed £50, or the husband is the applicant, when one surety only will be required.

The scale of probate duty as remodelled under the Finance Act of 1894, will be found in detail on pp. 460–461.

In no case can any correspondence be entered into; nor can an interview be given to any agent. The business of the department can be transacted only with the applicant in person.

Where the deceased resided within the district of one of the District Probate Registries (see Appendix), application may be made at that registry instead of at Somerset House.

Where the whole real and personal estate, without the deduction of debts or funeral expenses, does not exceed £500, application may be made at one of the Inland Revenue Offices.

Where the deceased has left no will, and the whole personal estate does not exceed £100, and the widow resides at more than three miles from any Probate Registry, application may be made to the Registrar of the County Court.

BANK HOLIDAYS.

ENGLAND AND IRELAND.—Banks of England and Ireland, and the Exchequer: Good Friday, Easter Monday, Whit Monday, First Monday in August, Christmas Day and December 26 or 27 (as the case may be). The Stock Exchange, in addition to the Bank holidays, is also closed on Jan. 1, May 1 and November 1. And special Bank Holiday for Ireland, March 17.

SCOTLAND.—New Year's Day, Good Friday, First Monday in May, First Monday in August, and Christmas Day.

SCOTLAND has also special Quarter Term Days (see p. 32), and there are special holidays in Edinburgh (see pp. 28, 48), and Glasgow (see p. 40).

THE second Parliament of King Edward VII., the members of which had met during the four previous days for the purpose of being sworn in, and also for the election of a Speaker (the choice falling upon Mr. James Lowther), was formally opened by His Majesty in person on February 19. In his Speech from the Throne legislation was proposed on:—Education in England and Wales; Law relating to Trade Disputes; Workmen's Compensation Acts; Equalisation of Rates in the Metropolis; Unemployed Workmen; Merchant Shipping; Crofters' Holdings; Labourers (Ireland); Commercial Corruption; Colonial Marriages; Property Qualification of County Justices; and Plural Voting.

The Address was moved in the Lords by the Marquess of Northampton, and was seconded by Lord Herschell; the Marquess of Lansdowne replied, and the Address was agreed to. In the Commons the Address was moved by Mr. Dickinson, and was seconded by Mr. Acland. The debate, which was opened by Mr. Chamberlain, continued till Feb. 26, when it was agreed to. During the discussion Electioneering Tactics, Chinese Labour, Irish Policy, Aliens, Trade Disputes, Birching in the Navy, Partition of Bengal, and Erosion of the Coast passed the time. Mr. MacNeill's amendment on Birching was withdrawn on Mr. Robertson saying that the practice had been abandoned; Colonel Saunderson's amendment on Irish Policy was lost by 406 against 88; Mr. Forster's amendment on Chinese Labour was negatived by 416 to 91; and Sir W. Evans-Gordon's on Aliens and Trade Disputes was withdrawn. The allusion in the King's Speech to increasing trade led to a discussion in the Lords on Fiscal Policy on Feb. 22. On Feb. 26 Viscount Milner called attention to the proposed Constitution of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, and earnestly warned the Government of the probable effects of the proposed arrangements. The debate which ensued ended the following day, and in the Commons Sir C. Dilke's motion on the law of "Truck" (an important question touching the fines on workpeople) was, with slight alterations, agreed with. The Committee on Supply, which, as usual, took up a large part of the time of the Session, began on Feb. 27, Mr. Emmott in the chair, and the Consolidated Fund (Appropriation) Bill passed all stages, and was read a third time in the Lords on Aug. 4. On Feb. 28 Mr. Asquith, in answer to Mr. C. Wason, said that a pension of 5*s.* a week would amount to a cost of about £11,500,000. On this day Mr. James Caldwell was appointed Deputy Chairman. On March 1 the Marine Insurance Bill was read a second time in the Lords (and a third time in the Commons on July 26). Mr. E. Robertson, under the Naval Estimates, gave a rough sketch of the Naval expenditure, but later on in the Session he, on July 27, was more definite on the Government programme, which suggested a serious limitation on their view of Naval defence. The additions were now only to be 3 battleships of the Dreadnought type, 2 ocean-going destroyers, 12 coastal destroyers, 8 submarines, and the estimated cost was £6,800,000. Mr. W. T. Wilson moved, on March 2, the second reading of a Bill to provide free meals for school-children. On the suggestion of Mr. Burns, the question was referred to a Committee, so as not to crush the voluntary efforts already being made. On March 6 a Committee was appointed on wages, &c., of Post Office officials, and on March 7 Mr. W. Lever moved payment of members. The Prime Minister regretted that there were no funds for the purpose, but sympathised with the motion, which was passed by 348 to 110. The Prevention of Commercial Corruption Bill, which had been read a second time on March 1, was read a third time on March 8, and the amendments of the Commons were agreed to on July 26. On March 8, on going into Committee on Army Estimates, Mr. Haldane made a statement on Army organisation, and proposed to abolish the London defences and coast defences, and the withdrawal of the garrison from St. Helena and other places. On July 12 he made the statement that the Government had decided to reduce the Army by some 20,000 men: the 3rd battalion of the Coldstreams and of the Scots Guards and some line battalions to be disbanded; 81 batteries of field artillery to be on a 4-gun basis and 18 on a 2-gun basis. The "striking" force to consist of 150,000 (50,000 with the colours; 70,000 reservists; 30,000 militia). On July 24 the Earl of Donoughmore called attention to the reduction in the military forces of the Crown, and Earl Roberts said he was filled with dismay by the policy of the Government. On March 9 Mr. Agar-Robartes moved second reading of Land Tenure Bill, which was read and referred to Standing Committee on Trade. Mr. Gladstone, on March 12, announced his intention of modifying the reading of the Aliens Act, and, in spite of strong opposition, adhered to his decision on March 14. (On April 5 the Lord Chancellor gave reasons, in the Lords, for this modification.) Mr. Balfour took his seat for the City of London, vice Mr. Alban Gibbs, who had accepted the Chiltern Hundreds. Sir J. Kitson moved his resolution on the Fiscal Question. The discussion this caused continued the following day, when Mr. Stuart Wortley's motion to omit "the people of England objected to Tariff Reform," was negatived by 445 to 118, and Mr. Wyndham's—"that the House was ready to consider means to secure equal terms of competition"—was lost by 471 to 123, and Sir J. Kitson's resolution passed by 474 to 98. On March 14 the Government accepted the "principle" of Old Age Pensions. Lord Avebury's Limited Partnerships Bill was read a second time on March 15, and on March 16 the Pure Beer question, which was this time championed by Mr. G. L. Courthope, met its usual fate, and the Bill was rejected by 164 to 109. The Naval Prize Bill, the Prize Courts Bill, and the Judicature Bill were read a third time in the Lords on March 19. On March 21 Mr. Chamberlain moved for a Commission on Transvaal Labour, which was negatived by 378 to 110, upon which Mr. Byles moved that the House disapproved of Lord Milner's conduct as High Commissioner of South Africa and Governor of Transvaal. Mr. Chamberlain spoke in defence of Lord Milner, and Mr. Churchill, while agreeing with the condemnation, advised that the subject be dropped, and it was dropped accordingly. On March 29, in the Lords, Viscount Halifax moved "that the House place on record its appreciation of Lord Milner," which was carried by 170 to 35. Mr. Sutherland's Land Values Taxation Bill was read a second time by 319 to 61; Mr. Gladstone's Workmen's Compensation Bill was introduced on March 26; and on motion for second reading, on April 4, Sir C. Dilke proposed compulsory insurance, in order to make the Act workable. The Government agreed that this was important, and promised to consider the question. It was read a second time on April 10, and referred to the Standing Committee on Law. In the Lords on March 27 the Criminal Appeal Bill (read a third time on July 12) and the Public Trustee Bill (read a third time on May 11) were read a second time. On April 27 the Merchant Shipping Act (Amendment) Bill, which had been read a first time on March 20, was read a second time, and the Dogs Bill a second time. On April 30 Mr. Asquith explained his Budget. The estimated revenue (1906–7) was £144,860,000, and the estimated expenditure was £141,786,000. He proposed to increase the provision for the reduction of the National Debt; to abolish coal duty; to reduce duty on tea by one penny (fivepence instead of sixpence); to provide aid for necessitous schools; to make some postal reforms, and to diminish the duty on stripped tobacco by 2½*d*. After a protest by Mr. Chamberlain on the tea duty and other opposition, the proposals were agreed to, and the Finance Bill was read a first time on May 2, a third time on June 13, and passed in Lords on June 21*st*. On May 7 Mr. Birrell moved the second reading of the Education Bill. This Bill, in which more popular interest has been taken than in any other measure proposed this Session, had been introduced on April 9, and was stated by Mr. Birrell to be intended to effect the transfer of voluntary schools from their present managers to the control of the local education authority. On May 21 the House went into Committee, Mr. Emmott taking the chair. On Clause 1, "No school shall be recognised as a public elementary school unless it is provided by the local educational authority," Mr. L. Hardy moved postponement: negatived by 335 to 160; and Mr. T. Healy's motion that the Act should not come into force until after all the local authorities had been elected anew was lost by 284 to 134; Mr. Bridgeman's, that there should be different dates in different districts, was refused by 354 to 176; and Mr. Ashley's (May 22), "or such later date as the local authority may determine," was lost by 406 to 114. Mr. Salter's motion, that a later date might be fixed by His Majesty in Council, was lost by 361 to 190; and Sir H. Craik's, that a school might be exempted if the course were sanctioned by the Board of Education, was negatived by 336 to 171. Mr. Maddison moved that in no school recognised by the local authority shall there be any religious teaching permitted during school hours. This was defeated on May 28 by 477 to 63. Sir W. Anson made an attempt to introduce religious teaching in school hours (failed by 367 to 176), and Clause 1 (closured by 358 to 169) was carried by 365 to 162. On June 11 the Committee debated Clause 2. Mr. Long moved postponement, but this was negatived by 2 3 to 97; and Sir W. Anson's motion, that the local authority be compelled to take over any school satisfactory to the Board of Education if the owners were willing to part with it, was lost by 313 to 133. Mr. Thornton's proposal, that the local authority should pay annual and substantial rent, was negatived by 370 to 87. Other amendments, on June 12, mostly about repairs and alterations, were either withdrawn or refused after closure, and on June 18 the time was passed in discussing how the other clauses should be taken, and on June 19 Clause 2 was added to the Bill by 424 to 109. On June 20, on Clause 3, relating to facilities for religious instruction on two mornings a week on the wish of parents, Mr. Pike Pease moved amendment leaving out "If" in the commencement (refused by 387 to 99); and Mr. Massie moved, instead of "some special character," the words "in accordance with the provisions of the trust deed" (withdrawn), and Sir E. Carson moved a similar one—"in accordance with the trust, if any, upon which the school has been previously held." This was lost by 388 to 94. The other amendments were lost, and under the closure the question that Clause 3 stand part of the Bill was passed without division. On June 25 Clause 4—"The local authority may upon application of four-fifths of the parents give facilities for religious instruction"—came up for discussion and led to long argument. Mr. Evelyn Cecil moved "must" instead of "may." This was lost by 340 to 237 on June 26. The next day Mr. Birrell moved that the wishes of parents should be made known by ballot. Mr. Evelyn Cecil proposed "a reasonable number" instead of "four-fifths" (lost by 312 to 142), and other alterations being negatived, Mr. Birrell's amendment was accepted without division. His next amendment was that "no extended facilities be given where rent is taken for the use of the transferred school." This was accepted by 360 against 200. The other Government amendments were agreed to, and Clause 4 stood part of the Bill by 415 to 138. Clause 5 was also added same day. On July 2 Clause 6—"Parents shall not be compelled to cause their children to attend school except during the time devoted to secular instruction"—was discussed. Mr. Walters moved amendment with the view of making attendance compulsory during the whole time of instruction, both secular and religious. Mr. Birrell supported the clause against the amendment, which was lost by only 16 (267 for, 283 against), and the clause was passed by 294 to 247. On July 3 Clause 7, concerning provision as to teachers in relation to religious instruction, was passed by 364 to 183, after some attempts had been made at modification. The report of the resolution authorising payment of £1,000,000 was agreed to; and on July 4, on Clause 8, including the names of the Commissioners to decide the transference of trust schools—Right Hon. Sir Arthur Wilson, K.C.I.E., Member of the Judicial Committee of Privy Council; Sir Hugh Owen, and Mr. H. W. Worsley-Taylor, K.C.—Mr. Ashley moved that the Commissioners should deal only with trusts purely educational, but this was negatived by 247 to 109. On July 9 Sir H. Craik moved that owners should be allowed to carry on approved schools if State aid were not wanted (120 for, 236 against). Sir F. S. Powell called attention to the proportion of Voluntary cost to State grant—£20,000,000 to £1,500,000—but this idea was rejected by 304 to 152; and Mr. Cave's motion, that the decisions of the Commissioners should be subject to approval of His Majesty in Council, was lost by 286 to 116, and the clause was agreed to by 311 to 146. On July 10 Clause 9 was added; and Clause 10—"Temporary use of voluntary schools from Jan., 1908, to Jan., 1909, without payment"—was also added after Mr. Cave's motion to omit "without payment" had been negatived by 343 to 98, and Mr. Clough's, to extend time to 1910, had been accepted. Clause 11—"No voluntary school shall be closed between passing of Act and 1908"

—was added by 395 to 108. On Clause 12 no division, and Clause 13 was passed by 397 to 111. Then Mr. Birrell moved omission of Part II. On July 11 Clause 27 was added, and also 28, extending time to repay money borrowed by the County Councils from thirty to sixty years. Clause 29, removing the "twopenny" limit, was passed by 391 to 91; 32 stood part without division; 33, by 389 to 91; and 34 was negatived. On July 16 Clause 35—"provision for vacation schools and health of children"—led to many amendments, some of which were agreed to, and the clause so amended was added. On July 17 Part IV. (Council for Wales) was discussed. Mr. F. E. Smith moved that a responsible Minister in Parliament should be appointed having powers of control. Subject to modification by Mr. Lloyd George, this was passed by 279 to 50. His next amendment was passed by 387 to 105, and this part of the Bill was carried by 395 to 107. On the 18*th* Clauses 38, 39, and 40 were passed, and Mr. Birrell's new clause authorising the Board of Education to settle transfer of schools where owners or local authority objected was passed by 327 to 78. His clause giving County Councils power to delegate some of their duties to small local councils passed by 365 to 95, and his proposal to allow local authority to use three times a week schools out of school time for purposes of education passed by 370 to 95. His next clause concerning compensation to teachers who had suffered loss by action under the Act was agreed to; a number of amendments in Schedule II. were accepted and schedule passed as amended, by 359 to 93, and the Bill was reported by 303 to 141. On July 23 Lord R. Cecil moved that Clauses 4 and 25 be re-committed, and then moved a clause after Clause 1 to allow of dogmatic teaching, which were both rejected; and other amendments, mostly repetitions, were either rejected or ruled out of order. The report stage continued till July 25, and on July 30, after Mr. Long had moved its rejection and Mr. Balfour had strongly condemned it, the Bill was read a third time by 369 to 177. On Aug. 1 the Earl of Crewe moved the second reading of the Bill in the Lords, confessing that the particulars were unusually intricate and obscure. The Marquess of Londonderry said the Bill hinged on the first clause. The Archbishop of Canterbury in a telling speech pointed out his views of the dangers incurred by the Bill if it became an Act, and urged the necessity of calm consideration of the clauses. The debate continued on the following day, and on Aug. 3 the Bill was read without division a second time, with the understanding that it was without prejudice to the examination of its contents after the recess.

On May 7 the Seed Potatoes Supply (Ireland) Bill was read a third time in the Lords. On May 8 a discussion took place in the Lords on the incidence of local taxation, introduced by the Earl of Denbigh, who stated that annual local expenditure was greatly in excess of national, and that the local loans amounted to more than £437,000,000. The Aliens Bill was read a third time in the Commons, but was rejected in the Lords on May 17 by 96 to 24. On May 21 Clause 4 of the Poisons and Pharmacy Bill, preventing companies dealing in drugs from styling themselves chemists, was negatived in the Lords by 38 to 32. The Public Trustee Bill was read a third time in the Lords, and a second time in the Commons on June 15; and in the Commons the Municipal Corporations Bill was read a third time, and a third time in the Lords on June 29. On May 14 Sir E. Grey said we had come to a satisfactory settlement with Turkey, and a joint Committee was to be appointed to fix boundaries. A long discussion occurred on the motion for the second reading of the Plural Voting Bill, and a good deal of opposition was shown; the Bill was eventually read after Mr. Forster's amendment had been negatived by 403 to 95. On May 15 the Colonial Marriages Bill was read a second time in Lords, and a third time on June 19; and in the Commons a Royal Commission on Vivisection was promised. On May 18 the Extradition Bill and the Street Betting Bill were read a third time. On May 21 the Matrimonial Causes Acts Amendment Bill was read a third time in the Lords, and the Poisons and Pharmacy Bill was read a third time on May 22. During the conversation on the Juvenile Smoking Bill, which was read a second time and referred to a Select Committee, Lord Lansdowne said he did not know how a "penny-in-slot" machine could tell age. On May 25 Disarmament, which had been somewhat to the front this Session, was discussed at the initiation of Lord Avebury, and in the Commons the Ground Game Bill was read a third time. The Musical Copyright Bill was read a second time on June 8, and after being continually blocked was finally read a third time in the Lords on Aug. 2. On June 13 the Labourers (Ireland) Bill (concerning purchase of land and building of cottages on easier terms) was read a second time on the motion of Mr. Bryce. On June 14 the Justices of the Peace Bill (abolition of property qualification), which had come up from the other House, was read a second time, and a third time on June 29. On June 18 the Seamen and Soldiers' False Characters Bill was read a third time, and the Ground Game Bill was read a second time in the Lords on July 3 and a third time on July 27. On the second reading of the London County Council (Money) Bill on July 9 Lord Camperdown called attention to the increasing cost and debt of the Council. On July 12 the Criminal Appeal Bill, after Lord Alverstone had pointed out some defects in the Bill and the Lord Chancellor had replied, was read a third time, and the following day the London Squares and Enclosures Bill was read a third time; and on the 16*th* the London County Council (General Powers) Bill, and also the Conveyancing Bill, the Settled Land Bill, and the Married Women's Property Bill were read a third time. On the 20*th* the Wireless Telegraphy Bill received the Royal assent, on the 26*th* the Revenue Bill was read a third time, the Lords' amendments on the Justices of the Peace Bill were agreed to, and on the 27*th* the Trade Disputes Bill was considered in Committee. This Bill had been introduced by the Attorney-General on March 28, but on March 30 Mr. Hudson carried the second reading by 426 to 66 of a Bill upon the same subject from the view of Trade Unionists, and on April 25 the Solicitor-General moved the second reading of a modified form of both, which was accepted. Clause 1 was added to the Bill by 313 to 30. On Aug. 3-4 the clauses, including the new one, were agreed to, and the Bill as amended was ordered to be reported to the House. The House then adjourned for the recess until Oct. 23.

1.—(1) If any agent corruptly accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or

If any person corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business; or

If any person knowingly gives to any agent, or if any agent knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal, any receipt, account, or other document in respect of which the principal is interested, and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which to his knowledge is intended to mislead the principal:

He shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years, or to a fine not exceeding five hundred pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine, or on summary conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding four months, or to a fine not exceeding fifty pounds, or to both such imprisonment and such fine.

(2) For the purposes of this Act the expression "consideration" includes valuable consideration of any kind; the expression "agent" includes any person employed by or acting for another; and the expression "principal" includes an employer.

(3) A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any municipal, borough, county, or district council, or any board of guardians, is an agent within the meaning of this Act.

2.—(1) A prosecution for an offence under this Act shall not be instituted without the consent, in England of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General, and in Ireland of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General for Ireland.

(2) The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, as amended by any subsequent enactment, shall apply to offences under this Act as if they were included among the offences mentioned in section one of that Act.

(3) Every information for any offence under this Act shall be upon oath.

(4) The expenses of any prosecution on indictment under this Act shall be defrayed as in cases of indictment for felony.

(5) A court of quarter sessions shall not have jurisdiction to inquire of, hear, and determine prosecutions on indictments for offences under this Act.

(6) Any person aggrieved by a summary conviction under this Act may appeal to a court of quarter sessions.

3. This Act shall extend to Scotland, subject to the following modifications:—

(1) Section two shall not extend to Scotland:

(2) In Scotland all offences which are punishable under this Act on summary conviction shall be prosecuted before the sheriff in manner provided by the Summary Jurisdiction (Scotland) Acts.

Public and Private Wealth and Charitable Bequests.

The report and accounts of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the year ended March 31, 1906, were not issued until the middle of September. At one time these accounts were issued in July, whilst Parliament was in session, and a return to the earlier practice is desirable. The yield of the Death Duties for the year ended March 31, 1906, was slightly in excess of that for each of the two preceding years, but less by nearly £1,200,000 than in 1901-2. During the past five years the receipt of duty and the capital assessed have been as follows:—

| | Duty Received. | Capital Assessed. |

It may be of interest to note that although the capital assessed was £1,700,000 less in 1902-3 than in 1905-6, the duty received in the former year was £570,000 more than in the latter year. The Chancellor of the Exchequer's estimate of the amount which would be receivable by the Exchequer from the Death Duties in the year 1905-6, after deducting the amount due to the Local Taxation accounts, was £13,000,000, and the amount paid into the Exchequer was £12,970,000. For the five years 1895-6 to 1899-1900 the budget estimate of receipt from the Death Duties was in the aggregate £51,435,000, and the actual receipt into the Exchequer was £58,950,000. The estimates of the Death Duties have usually been prepared with caution, and have often been exceeded. The Budget estimate of the net receipt into the Exchequer from the duties for the year which will end on March 31, 1907 (after allocation to the Local Taxation accounts), was £13,200,000, but in the half-year ended September 30, 1906, the actual receipt had been £7,595,000, or at the rate of very nearly £15,200,000 a year. This excess, at the rate of two millions for the year, appears to be chiefly due to the unusual number of estates exceeding a million each brought into account during the half-year. The average number of millionaire estates for a year had formerly been seven, but that number was registered in the first half of the financial year ended September 30, 1906, and two others followed within a week. Some of these estates largely exceeded a million each, and among them were those of Sir Charles Tennant, aged 83, £3,151,974; Mr. Alfred Beit, 53, £3,000,000; Lord Grimthorpe, 89, £2,111,775; Thomas Valentine Smith, 81, £1,932,139.

In former years a large increase in the yield of the Death Duties and in the number of very rich estates has been due to a high death rate from influenza or pneumonia among elderly people, but this cause did not prevail in 1906, although, as in former years, the average of age among the persons who left great wealth was high. It is evident that the low price of Consols and Government Securities of the highest class did not appreciably affect the valuation of estates for probate, and it is interesting to note how comparatively small a part of the capital which becomes charged with the Death Duties is invested in Government Securities, the rate of interest on which is less attractive than that offered by other investments of a high class of security. Out of a total sum of £194,000,000 classified personal estate in the United Kingdom which was charged with the Death Duties in the year 1905, as much as £90,000,000 were invested in shares or debentures of Public Companies, and only £9,000,000 in stocks or funds of the United Kingdom. Other £11,000,000 were in Foreign and Colonial stocks and bonds, and £16,500,000 were in "Cash at the Bank," but only £626,000 in "Cash in the House," giving an average of just about £10 in this form of property for each estate proved. As "Cash in the House" probably includes banknotes, the extent to which the use of coin has now been reduced is remarkable.

The totals of "Free Personalty," and of Realty charged with Succession Duty during the past twelve years have been as follows, and the continued decline in the value of Realty assessed is noteworthy.

The value of personalty situated abroad brought into account in 1905-6 was five millions, of which £2,750,000 were in British Dependencies, and only £2,250,000 in Foreign Countries.

The fluctuations in the declared value for probate of personalty situated abroad, which was first brought into account for taxation by the Finance Act of 1894, have been considerable, as will be seen by the following schedule. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue have probably seldom opportunity to check the valuations submitted to them of this class of property.

Specific Bequests.

The value of the bequests consisting chiefly of pictures to National and Municipal Institutions exempted from Death Duties by the Finance Act of 1894 was, in the year 1905-6, £97,100, as compared with £23,333 in the previous year. The National Gallery was not among the 24 legatees, but these included the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty (to whom were bequeathed a miniature and a snuff-box), the British Museum and the South Kensington Museum, the National Portrait Gallery and the National Gallery of British Art, the Royal Academy, Christ's College, Cambridge, and the FitzWilliam Museum, the Board of Education (a collection of china), and the Corporations of Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Glasgow, Coventry, and Eastbourne.

The Wealth of the Nation.

The number of estates exceeding £250,000 each in value charged with the Death Duties in 1905-6 was 99 as compared with 68 in 1904-5, when there was only one estate valued at more than a million. The year 1906 appears to have been one in which business in most of its branches was good, people were well employed and able to save money, and there was a marked absence of the dangerous symptoms of speculative fever which were noticeable in 1895-6, and were of course followed by collapse, although there was not any financial or commercial crisis such as formerly was expected to follow the collapse of each recurring decennial period of inflated speculation. The sufferers in 1895-6 were for the most part small investors and speculators who had risked more than they could afford to lose, and for whom the wide extension of the joint stock company system had provided opportunities for adventures in which otherwise they would not have taken part. Although individual losses were of small amount they were in the aggregate very large, and it was officially estimated that the total loss by the failure of joint stock companies during certain years had exceeded ten millions a year. During the past few years caution has prevailed, and was especially noticeable in 1906, when hardly any new project attracted any considerable subscription of capital. The wealth of the nation is not perhaps rapidly increasing, and the estimate that its increase is at the rate of about a hundred millions a year seems as high as available statistics justify.

Wealth is more widely diffused than formerly, but the number of rich people in the United Kingdom is doubtless much larger than in any other country in the world. There are probably about 2,000 persons in the kingdom who have each in absolute disposition £200,000, the equivalent of a million dollars American, and although five or six citizens of the United States are reputed each to possess greater wealth than any one person in this country, there is no reason to suppose that there are more than 1,000 persons in the United States who really possess in absolute ownership a million dollars each, the equivalent of £200,000.

Income Tax Statistics.

It is to be regretted that the accounts of the Inland Revenue Commissioners relating to Income Tax for the year 1905-6 will not be produced until the autumn of 1907, when the figures will have lost some of their interest. The gross amount of income brought under the review of the Department was in 1904-5, £912,129,680, which compares with £791,735,413 in 1899-1900, and £677,769,850 in 1895-6, but deductions reduced the amounts upon which income tax was received to £624,000,000 in 1904-5, £564,868,000 in 1899-1900, and £487,958,000 in 1895-6. The accounts for the year 1904-5 of incomes under Schedules D and E of persons and firms from businesses, professions, and employments show the following results:—

| Amount Exceeding | And not Exceeding | No. of Persons assessed. | Gross amount of Income assessed. | No. of Firms assessed. | Gross amount of Income assessed. |
| £ | £ | | £ | | £ |
| 50,000 | — | 25 | 3,359,496 | 101 | 11,221,660 |
| 10,000 | 50,000 | 213 | 3,733,076 | 960 | 17,879,020 |
| 5,000 | 10,000 | 446 | 3,113,672 | 1,756 | 12,462,573 |
| 4,000 | 5,000 | 302 | 1,390,555 | 886 | 4,057,232 |
| 3,000 | 4,000 | 523 | 1,845,517 | 1,463 | 5,202,837 |
| 2,000 | 3,000 | 1,385 | 3,473,970 | 2,771 | 6,978,138 |
| 1,000 | 2,000 | 5,941 | 8,680,068 | 7,046 | 10,865,160 |
| | | 8,835 | 25,597,354 | 14,963 | 68,566,620 |
| Gross Incomes under £1,000 each | | 368,505 | 80,756,233 | 44,264 | 16,910,987 |
| Total | | 377,340 | 106,353,587 | 59,227 | 85,477,607 |

The number of firms assessed with incomes over £1,000 has decreased, and the income of firms of that class in 1904-5 was less by £3,200,000 than in the previous year, and less by nearly £5,000,000 than in 1902-3. The change is doubtless the result of the transfer of larger firms to limited companies.

Income of Employees.

The income of persons assessed in 1904-5 was about a million more than in the previous year, but the income of employees not included in the above tables was three millions more than in 1903-4, and nearly six millions more than the income of the 377,340 persons assessed for £106,353,587. The assessments of employees in 1904-5 were as follows:—

| | | Gross Income. |
| | | £ |
| Schedule E—Government, corporation, and public company officials | 386,342 | 89,374,291 |
| Schedule D—Other employees | 99,785 | 23,203,914 |
| | 486,127 | £112,578,205 |

Twenty-five employees under Schedule D and 426 under Schedule E are returned as having incomes exceeding £3,000 a year each, and of these 113 with incomes of more than £5,000 a year each were assessed for an aggregate income of £1,213,791. Four Scottish employees had together income amounting to £49,078, and nine others were assessed in the aggregate at £41,893. The income of two Irish employees was £28,000, and of ten others £45,804. The salaries of Government, corporation and public company officials increased from £53,397,000 in 1895-6 to £89,374,000 in 1905-6, being a rise of 67 per cent. in ten years.

CHARITABLE BEQUESTS.

A Remarkable Year.

The bequests for charitable, religious and other public uses under wills reported during 1906 were of unusually large amount and of much interest. Under sixty wills, of which a schedule is appended, there were bequests for public uses to the amount of just about 4½ millions sterling, derived from estates valued for probate at nearly 15¼ millions sterling. The bequests were thus in the proportion of 30 per cent. of the amount of the estates, which is higher than the average of former years. Other bequests not enumerated would probably bring up the amount devoted to public uses under wills proved in 1906 to a sum not far short of 5 millions sterling. The total sum bequeathed for charitable purposes under wills proved in this country during the past twenty years may be estimated at nearly 50 millions, so that the contribution of 1906 was double the average. Moreover, by the death of Mrs. Ada Lewis-Hill in October last, a sum of rather more than a million left by her former husband, Mr. Samuel Lewis, of Cork Street, for public objects but subject to her life interest, became payable. The number of wills proved in each year is about 60,000, and a very large proportion of the sum left for charities is derived from some 60 estates. It is only about one person in a thousand who leaves any considerable sum for public objects. The whole amount thus left in each year is from one to one and a half per cent. of the capital upon which Death Duties are assessed.

Contingent Reversions.

The contingent reversionary bequests for charities in 1906 were of exceptional importance. Chief among these is the bequest under a codicil to the will of Mr. Edward Steinkopff, formerly a proprietor of the Apollinaris Water and the St. James's Gazette, who by his will gave his daughter power of appointment, with some restrictions, of his residuary estate of about £1,000,000, but by a second codicil further restricted her power of appointment to charitable institutions only. If the lady does not exercise this power of appointment in favour of charitable institutions, the residue of about £1,000,000 is to be distributed after her death among such persons as would have been entitled if she had died intestate without having been married.

Among other contingent reversions for public uses are those of Mr. Alfred Capper Pass, aged 68, of Bristol, whose estate was valued at £457,764, from which, in the event of failure of issue, about £300,000 will pass to the Official Trustees of Charitable Funds for various purposes; Mr. Frank Bailey, aged 53, of Sussex and London, from whose estate of £155,426 about £80,000 may contingently be applicable for public uses; and Miss Julia Thomas, of Bayswater, who left £127,674 with a contingent reversion of nearly £100,000 for charitable purposes.

Some Great Bequests in 1906.

The largest bequest of the year for public uses, that of Mr. Alfred Beit, exceeds £1,800,000, and includes the gift of certain stocks and shares of the value of £1,200,000 to constitute a Railway Fund in furtherance of the Cape to Cairo scheme. He left also £200,000 to the University of Johannesburg; £200,000 for educational and charitable purposes in Rhodesia; about £75,000 to the College for Technology of London University; £25,000 to the London University Medical Science Fund; £20,000 each to Guy's Hospital and to King Edward's Hospital Fund; £25,000 to the Rhodes University in Grahams Town, and other legacies to South African institutions. The 2nd Lord Inverclyde, of the Cunard Line, left his residuary estate of about £300,000, subject to the life interest of his widow, to the Merchants House of Glasgow for an "Inverclyde Bequest" to charities or institutions connected with seamen, and especially to those in the service of the Cunard Company; and Mr. William Imrie, of the rival White Star Line, left his residuary estate of between £150,000 and £200,000, subject to the life interest of his adopted daughter, as to one-third to the Liverpool Cathedral Fund, as to one-third to the William Imrie Liverpool Clerks Benevolent Fund, and as to one-third to other Liverpool Institutions.

An Embarrassing Legacy.

Mr. John Crowle, formerly in business as a butcher in Cornwall and in Kensington, and afterwards chairman and managing director of Slaters Restaurants, Ltd., whose estate was valued at £442,696, left £250,000 to found a "John Crowle Band of Hope and Temperance Fund," in connection with the Wesleyan Methodist Church, but upon condition that the community subscribe within a certain time an equal sum, which at present it is thought unlikely that they will do.

Some other Legacies.

The bequests of Mr. Feeney, of the Birmingham Daily Post, about £100,000, and of Mrs. Poncia, of Edgbaston, about £55,000, are for Birmingham institutions; Mrs. Isabella Ure Elder, LL.D., a distinguished philanthropist, owner of her late husband's shipbuilding yard at Govan, left £50,000 to endow a cottage nurses' training home in connection with the Elder Cottage Hospital, £5,000 to the Glasgow Technical College, and about £70,000 for "the Ure Elder Fund for Indigent Widow Ladies"; Lord Leven and Melville, a banker in London and Lord High Commissioner for the Church of Scotland, whose estate was of the gross value of £1,300,000, left £40,000 to repair and restore the chapel of Holyrood Palace, so that it can be used as a chapel for the Order of the Thistle, of which he was a member; Mr. John Prince left about £30,000 to the National Liberal Club, of which he was a member, £2,000 to the Devonshire Club, and £1,000 to the Cobden Club; and Mr. William Davison Barnett, a member of the Court of the Painter-Stainers' Company, left about £40,000 to that Company, unless they decline to keep the monuments on his family graves in order, in which event the money is to revert to the National Debt Commissioners.

The Lewis and Lewis-Hill Bequests.

Among the bequests to a total amount of over £1,000,000 of the late Mr. Samuel Lewis, of Cork Street, moneylender, which have now become payable owing to the death of his widow, Mrs. Lewis Hill, are £400,000 for establishing dwellings for the poor, £250,000 to the King's Hospital Fund, £100,000 to the Jewish Board of Guardians to establish a convalescent home or hospital on the sea-coast, £20,000 to the Sisters of Nazareth at Hammersmith, £20,000 to the London Hospital for an "Ada Lewis Ward," and £10,000 each to ten other hospitals. A sum of between £1,500,000 and £1,800,000, under the will of Mr. William Richard Sutton, the Golden Lane carrier, who died in 1900, is also to be applied when a scheme is settled for Sutton Model Dwellings, of which the tenants are not to pay full rent. Mrs. Lewis-Hill, a native of Dublin, who used to give £10,000 a year to the King's Hospital Fund, has left £20,000 to the Salvation Army, £50,000 to endow a "Rowton House for Women," £50,000 to the Governesses' Benevolent Institution, £25,000 for an "Ada Lewis Winter Distress Fund" in London, and £10,000 for a like fund in Dublin.

The Royal National Life-Boat Institution. Founded 1824.

Patron .....HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President .....H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

DURING the year 1905, the receipts by the Institution in subscriptions and donations amounted to £11,725; in contributions from branches, £20,631; Life-boat Saturday Fund (gross total), £17,527; and in dividends and interest on capital invested, £20,932; a gross total of £70,865. The expenditure of the year reached a total of £85,298. The total number of lives saved by the life-boats of the Institution and by special efforts for which it has awarded grants since its foundation in 1824 amounts to 45 439, the number of lives saved in 1905 being 550. In 1905 twenty-seven vessels were also saved. The rewards granted by the Institution since 1824, include 99 gold medals and clasps, 1,312 silver medals and clasps, besides aneroids, binocular glasses, addresses, and £257,513 in money. Two hundred and eighty life-boats are maintained under the auspices of the Institution on the coasts of the United Kingdom. The average cost of a life-boat, including station and appliances, is £1,500, and the yearly expense of maintaining same is £125. Offices, 20 Charing Cross Road, W.C.; Secretary, Charles Dibdin.

The Royal Humane Society. Instituted 1774.

Patron..... HIS MAJESTY THE KING.
President..... H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.

THE income of the Society in 1905 was £1,853, and the expenditure £1,780. During the year 1905, 873 persons were rewarded by the R.H.S. for saving 843 lives, and attempting to save the lives of 113 others. This number was in excess of any other year since the formation of the Society. The "Cordon Bleu" of the awards is the Stanhope Gold Medal, instituted in 1873 (the first recipient being the late Captain Webb), and was awarded in 1905 to John Stockton, a baker's carter, of Warrington, for his gallantry in saving three men who had been struck down by foul gas in a sewer at Warrington on the 6th March, 1905. The other rewards include 19 silver medals, 200 bronze medals, 4 bronze clasps (which are usually given for a second act of bravery, to those already in possession of the medal), 495 testimonials, and 106 pecuniary rewards. Forty-five awards went to the Royal Navy, Coast Guard and Royal Naval Reserve, 42 to the Army, 54 to the Police Force, and 22 were made on the recommendation of the Indian and Colonial Offices.

In addition to boats and ice-boats for the protection of bathers, life-buoys and drags, &c., are maintained at the cost of the Society in nearly 300 places in and around the Metropolis. Offices, 4 Trafalgar Square, Charing Cross; Secretary, Major F. A. C. Claughton.

The British Red Cross Society. Inaugurated 1905.

Patron—HIS MAJESTY THE KING EDWARD VII.
President—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

The Society is the outcome of a fusion of two existing bodies—the "British National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded in War" and the "Central British Red Cross Council"—it having been considered by their Majesties desirable that the Red Cross movement in the Empire should be represented by one Society, which should co-ordinate all such associations as are concerned with the succour of the sick and wounded in war.

The primary object of the British Red Cross Society is to furnish aid to the sick and wounded in time of war. Such aid must necessarily be supplementary to that furnished by the medical departments of the Navy and Army.

The Admiralty and War Office have accorded their official recognition to the British Red Cross Society as the organisation responsible for the Red Cross movement throughout the Empire. Secretary, James G. Vokes; Offices, 9 Victoria St., London, S.W.

Many of the Libraries are also open on Sundays.

The Derby, 1853–1906.

The following table gives the winners of the Derby for the last 54 years. Including 1851, Sir J. Hawley scored four successes with Teddington, Beadsman, Musjid, and Blue Gown, the second and third being consecutive victories. The late Duke of Westminster also scored four wins with Bend Or, Shotover, Ormonde, and Flying Fox. The Duke of Portland, Lord Rosebery, and Mr. Bowes have won twice consecutively, and H.M. the King, Lord Falmouth, Mr. W. T'Anson, Mr. Merry, Sir F. Johnstone, and Sir J. Miller have been twice victorious at intervals of four or more years.

CLOSE SEASON FOR GAME, WILD BIRDS, &c.

THE following Table gives the "close" time for different kinds of Game for England, Scotland, and Ireland, during which it is illegal to pursue the game mentioned, all dates inclusive :—

| GAME. | ENGLAND. | SCOTLAND. | IRELAND. |
| Black Game or Heath Fowl. | 11th Dec. to 19th Aug. and to 31st Aug., in Somerset, Devon, and New Forest. | 11th Dec. to 19th Aug. | 11th Dec. to 19th Aug. |

| Quail ..... | As "Wild Birds." | As "Wild Birds." | 11th Jan. to 19th Sept. |

It is also unlawful to kill pheasants, partridges, grouse, moor game, or hares on a Sunday or Christmas Day. Sand grouse may not be killed at any time.

In England hares, rabbits, woodcock, snipe, quail, landrail, and heath or moor game (and the eggs of swan, wild duck, teal, and widgeon) are protected under the Game Laws, though no close-time is fixed for them by those laws. In Scotland the same remarks apply to deer and hares, to the first four birds, and to wild duck; in Ireland to all these five birds, with the further addition of widgeon, teal, and plover. The close-time for all these birds (except quail and landrail in Ireland, for whose close-time see above) is, under the Wild Birds Protection Acts, 1880 to 1904, from 2nd March to 31st July, both inclusive. Otherwise this close-time applies to all wild birds throughout the United Kingdom. The penalty for killing any wild bird in such close-time, or for selling or having in possession between the 16th March and the 31st of July, both inclusive (unless the killing can be proved to have occurred at a time and place to which the Act does not apply), is a reprimand and costs for the first offence, and 5s. and costs for each bird for every subsequent offence, or, in the case of the undermentioned birds, £1 for each bird for each offence. In any case the Court may also order the forfeiture of any egg or bird in respect of which the offence was committed. In the Island of St. Kilda the fork-tailed petrel and St. Kilda wren are deemed to be included in the following list, and the birds marked * to be omitted therefrom.

| | Roller. | Wimbrel. |
| Hoopoe. | Sanderling. | Woodcock. |
| Kingfisher. | Sandpiper. | Woodpecker. |

Offenders refusing their names and addresses are liable to a further penalty of 10s., but the Acts do not apply to any person shooting on his own land, or authorizing anyone so to shoot, any wild bird not included in the above list.

On the application of the local authorities, the Secretary of State in England and Wales, the Secretary for Scotland in Scotland, or the Lord Lieutenant in Ireland, has power to vary or abolish the close-time for any bird or birds in any county by order to be published in the Gazette. They may also direct that the above enactments shall apply to any wild bird not specified in the list, and may further prohibit the taking of the eggs of any wild bird in any county or part thereof. The Secretary of State in England and Wales, or the Secretary for Scotland, may also on the application of the local authorities make an order providing that in any specified area the taking or killing of any particular kinds of wild birds shall be illegal during any period specified in the order. These various powers have been exercised in many cases—too numerous to recapitulate here.

By the Wild Birds Protection Act, 1904, penalties are imposed on persons setting springs, gins, &c., on poles, trees, mounds, &c., so as to injure wild birds. Persons permitting such acts are equally liable.

SEASONS FOR HUNTING AND GROUND GAME SHOOTING.

There is no statutory close-time for fox-hunting or rabbit-shooting, nor is there, except in Ireland, for deer or hares; but there is an "unwritten law" which the sportsman respects as much as he does the enactments of Parliament. November 1st is the recognised date for the opening of the fox-hunting season, which continues till the following April. Otter-hunting lasts from mid-April to mid-September. The period for deer-hunting or stalking varies from about Aug. 12 to October 12 for stags, and from Nov. 10 to the end of March for hinds. By an Act passed in 1892 the sale of hares or leverets in Great Britain is prohibited from March to July inclusive under a penalty of a pound. This does not apply to foreign hares. The statutory close season for hares in Ireland has been varied for some counties by order of the Lord Lieutenant, and it is now mostly from April 1st to August 12th.

CLOSE-TIME FOR SALMON.

I. England and Wales.

Under the Salmon Fishery Acts, salmon (including all migratory fish of the genus salmon, are protected, and a close-time is fixed for England and Wales, including the Esk in Dumfries, during which fishing for any of such fish is prohibited. The close-time for nets begins on 1st September, and for rods on 2nd November; for both nets and rods it ends on 1st February. The commencement and termination of the close-time may be varied by a bye-law by the local boards of conservators, but it must never begin for nets later than 1st November, nor be less than 154 days. For rod and line the minimum close-time is 92 days, and it must commence not later than 1st December. For putts and putchers the annual close season is from 1st September to 1st May, which cannot be altered by bye-law. The following are the cases in which these dates have been varied:—

No fresh salmon may be sold between 3rd September and 1st Feb., except such as come from parts beyond the seas, or as have been taken, if in the United Kingdom, in legal netting season and in legal manner. During that period all packages containing salmon consigned by any common or other carrier must be clearly marked with the word "Salmon." Salmon, dried, pickled, or cured abroad, or, if within the United Kingdom, between 1st February and 3rd November, may be sold after that date. The onus of proof that the fish were caught out of the United Kingdom, or, if within the kingdom, that they were caught during the legal netting season by legal means, or that, if pickled, they were pickled between 1st Feb. and 3rd Nov., lies with the person selling or exposing for sale. The exportation of salmon from any part of the United Kingdom is prohibited between 3rd September and 30th April, unless caught at a time at which its sale in the place where it was caught would be legal, if in the United Kingdom: the onus probandi lies on the person exporting. The capture and sale of "unclean" salmon, i.e., salmon recently spawned or full of spawn, are prohibited under heavy penalties. Roe may not be used as a bait in salmon angling.

A weekly close season, during which net-fishing for salmon is prohibited, is fixed in England from noon on Saturday to 6 a.m. on Monday. This close-time may be varied by the local conservancy boards, provided it is not less than 42 hours, nor more than 48 hours, and that it is fixed between Friday at midnight and noon on Monday.

* Except above Woodbury Road Station, 1 Sep. to 15 Apr.

 16 Aug. to 1 Feb. below Bigsweir Bridge.
§§ Above Lostwithiel, 1 Dec. to 1 April.

II. Scotland.

In Scotland the annual close time must not be less than 168 days. It is, for nets, from 27th August to 10th February, and, for rods, from 1st November to 10th February, except as follows:—

| Close-time for | Nets. | Rods. |
|---|---|---|
| Tay | 21 Aug. to 4 Feb. | 16 Oct. to 14 Jan. |

| Tweed | 15 Sept. to 14 Feb. | 1 Dec. to 31 Jan. |

No fresh salmon may be sold between 3rd September and 1st Feb., except such as come from parts beyond the seas, or as have been

The weekly close-time for nets is between 6 p.m. Saturday and 6 a.m. Monday; and, for rods, on Sundays. The Esk, in Dumfries, is included under the English Salmon Acts.

In Scotland the law as to the sale of salmon differs somewhat from that in force in England.

III. IRELAND.

In Ireland the close-time for salmon applies also to trout. The netting close-time must never be less than 168 days. Many variations of the close season have been made, of which it is impossible to specify all the details here; the following list, however, shows the general close-time in force in the different districts, in parts of some of which, however, it is different (all dates inclusive). The second column gives the point of delimitation on the coast between the various districts, which include all rivers, &c., within their respective coast-limits.

| Drogheda | Clogher Head to Skerries | 5 Aug. to 11 Feb. | 16 Sept. to 11 Feb. |

In Ireland the weekly close-time is fixed at 48 hours, from 6 a.m. Saturday till 6 a.m. Monday.

Salmon and trout must not be sold in Ireland in the close season.

CLOSE-TIME FOR TROUT AND CHAR.

The capture of trout and char in England and Wales is prohibited between 2nd October and 1st February, except (1) in parts of Norfolk and Suffolk where, under a local Act (the Norfolk and Suffolk Fisheries Act, 1877), the conservators have fixed the close-time for trout, for nets only, at from 10th Sept. to 25th Jan.; (2) in the Thames, where the close season is from 11th Sept. to 31st March; and (3) in the cases noted below, where, under an Act passed in 1876, the trout and char close-time (for rods and nets, except where specified) has been varied by bye-law by local boards of conservators. In the districts marked* the close-time, as altered, applies only to trout. The sale of trout and char is absolutely prohibited throughout England and Wales from 2nd Oct. to 1st Feb.:—

In Scotland there is a close-time for trout from 15 Oct. to 28 Feb. In Ireland the close-time for trout is the same as for salmon. For pollen the close-time is from 14 Nov. to 31 Jan.

Between Sept. 3 and Feb. 1 all packages in England and Wales consigned by any common or other carrier and containing trout or char must be distinctly marked with the word "Trout" or "Char," as the case may be.

CLOSE-TIME FOR FRESHWATER FISH.

By the Freshwater Fisheries Act, 1878, a close-time for "freshwater fish" (which are defined for this purpose to include all kinds of fish, other than pollen, trout, and char, which live in fresh water, except those kinds which migrate to or from the open sea) is fixed from 15 March to 15

June, both inclusive, for all parts of England and Wales except parts of Norfolk and Suffolk. The penalty for taking or selling freshwater fish in that period is £2 for a first and £5 for a subsequent conviction. The close-season, however, does not apply to eels taken otherwise than by angling or to fish taken in private waters by leave of the owner, in public waters by leave of a Board of Conservators, or taken (with the leave of the owner if in private waters) for bait or for scientific purposes. Fishery districts may be wholly or partially exempted from this close-time with the sanction of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries. The Axe, Avon and Stour, Avon (Devon), Wye, Eden, and Towy fishery districts have been so exempted; also the Kent and Leven, Severn, and Yorkshire districts, as regards pike; the Usk as regards eels; and certain parts of the Severn as regards other fish than grayling. In the navigable rivers of Norfolk and Suffolk and the broads connected therewith, close-times have been fixed for various fish under the Norfolk and Suffolk Fisheries Act, 1877, from March 1 to June 30. For eels a separate close-time exists (so far as fixed engines in salmon rivers are concerned) in England from 1 Jan. to 24 June; in Ireland, with one or two exceptions, from 11 Jan. to 30 June. In the Severn, elvers, or the fry of eels, are protected between 1 Jan. and the last day of Feb., and between 26 April and 24 June.

PROTECTION OF CRABS AND LOBSTERS.

Under the Fisheries (Oyster, Crab, and Lobster) Act, 1877, it is prohibited to buy or sell crabs under 4¼ inches, measured across the largest diameter of the back, or lobsters under 8 inches, measured from tip of beak to end of tail when spread out flat. The capture of "soft" crabs and crabs with spawn is also prohibited. By local bye-laws of Sea Fisheries Committees (vide infra), the minimum size of lobsters and crabs that may be lawfully taken in different parts of the territorial seas has been increased, and in some cases the taking of lobsters with spawn is prohibited, or a close season fixed.

CLOSE-TIME FOR OYSTERS.

There are also local regulations for the protection of oysters; and by the Fisheries (Oyster, Crab, and Lobster) Act, 1877, a general close-time for the capture and sale of "Deep-Sea Oysters" is fixed from the 15th June to 4th August; and for all other kinds of oysters—except oysters taken in the waters of a foreign state—from 14th May to 4th August. This Act applies to England and Scotland, but not to Ireland. By the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, fishing for oysters is prohibited from the 16th June to 31st August inclusive, in that part of the English Channel comprised between a line drawn from the North Foreland Light to Dunkirk, and a line drawn from the Land's End to Ushant—the territorial seas of England and France alone being excepted. This close-time, however, cannot be enforced till the Convention between England and France, included in the Act, is ratified; and, until that is done, the Convention concluded in 1839, which prohibits oyster-fishing in those limits from 1st May to 31st August, is to remain in force so far as French fishermen are concerned. It is customary, however, for both Powers to agree to suspend the operation of this close season till June 16 in each year. In Ireland, the Act 5 & 6 Vict. cap. 106, prescribes that no oysters may be taken between 1st May and 1st September, though this close season has been varied in the following cases:—

| Tralee Bay ..... | 11th Mar. to 31st Oct. |
| Galway Bay ..... | 1st Jan. to 30th Nov. |
| Strangford Lough ..... | 1st Mar. to 31st Aug. |
| Achil Sound, Clew Bay | 2nd April to 30th Sept. |
| Sligo, Ballisodare and Drumcliffe Bays ... | 30th April to 1st June. |

Taking oysters from licensed beds is made larceny.

Licences for Shooting and Fishing.

GAME AND GUN LICENCES.—A licence is required by every person who hunts, shoots, or takes game, except persons (in Great Britain) taking woodcock and snipe with nets or springes; rabbit-warren proprietors, or others, on enclosed land, killing rabbits; persons hunting deer, or hares, with hounds; owners or occupiers, or their servants, killing deer on their own land; beaters and others, not holding guns, attending holders of game licences. Occupiers of enclosed land, or owners, having the right to kill game, may themselves kill hares, or authorize others to do so, without a licence, but such authority must be limited to one person at a time in any one parish, and must be registered with the clerk of the Justices of the Petty Sessional Division in which the land is situate. Even when the quarry is not what is legally known as "game," a "gun" licence is necessary. A game licence, however, covers a gun licence. Soldiers, sailors, volunteers, or constables, on duty, or at practice, need not take out a gun licence, nor need occupiers of land scaring birds or killing vermin on such land, or persons so acting under the orders of occupiers holding a licence. Unless, however, the occupier is himself licensed, he cannot authorize any unlicensed person to carry a gun. "Scaring" birds is not to be regarded as including killing of any birds, and "vermin" does not include rabbits. The rates of duty are given at p. 458.

SALMON, TROUT AND CHAR LICENCES.—In all salmon fishery districts in England and Wales, and in Ireland, a licence to fish for salmon is necessary, and in most English and Welsh rivers a similar licence is necessary for trout or char, except that a salmon licence includes the latter. In Scotland no licence is needed. A licence is available only in the district, and for the season, in which it is issued, except that in Ireland rod licences are available in all parts of that country. The rates on salmon nets and other like instruments range from £20 downwards in England and Wales, and from £30 downwards in Ireland. In the latter country the rate on draft nets, the kind most commonly used, is £3; in England and Wales it varies from £5 to £2. The licence duty on a salmon rod and line is £1 in Ireland. In England and Wales different rates are charged in different districts as follows (an asterisk signifies that lower rates of duty are chargeable for short periods, or for certain parts of the district):—

*Derwent, *Exe, *Avon & Stour, *Wye, *Usk, 30/-; Taw and Torridge, 24/-; *Lune, *Ribble, *Dee, Clwyd & Elwy, *Conway, *Dovey, *Teify, Avon (Devon), *Dart, *Teign, Frome, Stour (Kent), Yorkshire, Tees, *Tyne, 20/-; *Eden, *Seiont, *Dwyfach, Towy, 21/-; Avon, Brue, & Parret, *Fowey, 15/-; *Camel, 12/-; Cleddy, Taff & Ely, Ogmore, W. ENGLAND AND WALES.—The administration of the laws of close season, &c., for salmon and trout is placed by the Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries Acts, 1861 to 1892, and the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries Act, 1903, in the hands of local boards, with the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries as the central authority. Districts may be formed and Boards of Conservators appointed for waters containing

These Boards of Conservators consist of three classes of members—those appointed annually by the County Councils of the various counties through which the rivers flow; ex-officio members, or those qualified by ownership of lands or fisheries of a certain value; and representative members, elected annually by the persons who have paid licence duty on instruments other than rod and line, used for salmon fishing in public waters.

salmon or freshwater fish. Such Boards have been appointed for 53 Districts. [The districts generally include all rivers running into the sea between the points named, and in the cases marked † also include the sea for a distance of three miles from the shore, or to the mid-channel in estuaries.]

There are also certain bodies created by local statutes, having authority over the fisheries, e.g., the Thames Conservancy Board, Lee Conservancy Board, and Conservators of the Medway.

These Boards have power to make bye-laws, not only for the regulation of the fisheries for salmon and freshwater fish, but also, in certain cases for the regulation of other kinds of fishing which are prejudicial to such Fisheries. They are also empowered to issue licences for fishing for salmon, trout, &c.

SCOTLAND.—In Scotland there are 105 Fishery Districts, nearly each separate river forming a district of itself but only 37 Boards of Conservators. The powers of these Boards are limited to the Salmon Fisheries.

IRELAND.—In Ireland there are 23 districts, embracing between them the whole country, each with a separate Board of Conservators.

SEA FISHERIES DISTRICTS.—Under the Sea Fisheries Regulation Acts, 1888 to 1894, the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries has power to form sea fisheries districts within the territorial waters of England and Wales, and to appoint local Fisheries Committees, either for a single county or borough, or for several jointly. They have power to make bye-laws, to be confirmed by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, regulating or prohibiting the use of instruments for the capture of sea fish (including shell fish and crustaceans, but excluding salmon), the deposit of rubbish on fishing grounds, &c. The following districts have been created, including in each case the coast and territorial seas adjoining between the points respectively mentioned:—

1. Northumberland (coterminous with that county). 2. North Eastern, from Northumberland to Donna Nook in Lincolnshire. 3. Eastern, from Donna Nook to Happisburgh. 4. Kent and Essex, from Dovercourt to Dungeness, and including the Thames estuary to London Stone near Yantlet Creek. 5. Sussex (coterminous with that county). 6. Southern, from the western boundary of Dorset to Hayling Island. 7. Devon. 8. Cornwall (each coterminous with the respective counties). 9. Glamorgan, from Nash Point to Worms Head. 10. Milford Haven, from Worms Head to Cemmaes Head. 11. Lancashire and Western, from Cemmaes Head to Haverigg Point. 12. Cumberland, from Haverigg Point to Sark Foot.

Similar districts may be formed in Scotland under the Sea Fisheries Regulation (Scotland) Act, 1895.

Seasonable and Unseasonable Fish.

THE following table shows the periods when the different kinds of edible fish mostly in use are "in season" and "out of season."

The asterisk (*) signifies that the fish are then in their prime; the dagger (†) signifies that the fish may be obtained, but are not at their best; the double dagger (‡) signifies that it is "close-time" as fixed by statute.

(a) This is for sea crayfish. River crayfish can be obtained in the summer and autumn. It is illegal to take fresh-water crayfish from March to June.

(b) Foreign oysters can be sold in the close season, and are to be had almost all through the year, even though they have been laid down in English beds for temporary storage.

(c) In the close season salmon from Holland, and also from certain British rivers where net fishing is permitted later in the year than usual, are largely sold.

(d) For the first six months the bulk of our London supply of shrimps comes from Holland, but Dutch shrimps are far inferior to the English, which are plentiful from July to December.

BIRTHS.

WHEN a birth takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. The father or mother of the child. If they fail, 2. The occupier of the house in which the birth happened; 3. A person present at the birth; or, 4. The person having charge of the child. The duty of attending to the registration thereof rests firstly on the parents. One of them must, within 42 days of the birth, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed to enable him to register, and must sign the register in his presence. If they fail to do this without reasonable cause, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register within the same period. If at the end of 42 days no one has given information and signed the register, the Registrar may write to any one of the above-mentioned persons, requiring him or her to come to him for that purpose, at a stated time and place. Any person who fails to comply with this requisition will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Not only will liability to a penalty be avoided, but the registration of a birth will be free of charge when it takes place within 42 days (but in Scotland the period is 21 days), unless either of the persons above named sends to the Registrar a written request to come and register at his or her residence or at the house where the child was born, when the Registrar on so attending to register may claim a fee of one shilling. After three months a birth cannot be registered except in the presence of the superintendent Registrar, and on payment of fees to him and the Registrar. After twelve months a birth can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of further fees. It is important to persons of all classes to be able to prove their age and the place of their birth. The only legal proof of these is afforded by the civil registers, which the law now requires to be made as above described. The child's baptismal name, if changed, or not previously given, may be inserted in the register within twelve months after the registration of the birth.

DEATHS.

WHEN a death takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. The nearest relative of the deceased present at the death, or in attendance during the last illness. If they fail, 2. Some other relative of the deceased in the same (Registrar's) subdistrict. In default of any relatives, 3. A person present at the death; or, the occupier of the house in which the death happened. If all the above-named fail, 4. An inmate of the house, or, the person causing the body to be buried. Relatives present or in attendance are first required to attend to the registration. One of them must, within five days of the death, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed, and must sign the register; or must within the same time send him written notice of the death, accompanied by a certificate of the cause of death, signed by a registered medical practitioner, if any such attended the deceased. The written notice will be useless without a legal medical certificate. If notice is sent, information must nevertheless be given and the register signed within fourteen days from the death. If relatives present or in attendance fail without reasonable cause to carry out these provisions, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register in their stead. It is important that every death should be registered and a certificate of registry be obtained from the Registrar before the funeral. This certificate should be delivered to the clergyman or other person who performs the funeral or religious service. The penalty for not delivering this certificate is forty shillings. If at the end of fourteen days one of the persons above mentioned has not attended to the registration, the Registrar may, by written application, require any one of them to come to him and do so at a stated time and place. Any person failing to attend on this application will be liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Whenever the deceased has been attended by a registered medical practitioner, a certificate of the cause of death, signed by him, must be delivered to the Registrar. Any person receiving such a certificate from the practitioner and not so delivering it will incur a penalty of forty shillings. The registration of a death is free of charge when it takes place within the above-mentioned periods, unless on request it is effected at an informant's house, or at the house where the death happened, when a fee of one shilling will be payable to the Registrar. After twelve months a death can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of fees.

CORONERS' INQUESTS are held in all cases of violent and unnatural deaths, such as the case of a person slain or drowned, or dying suddenly, and of any person dying in prison. Sudden deaths are supposed by the law to demand inquiry. Still, it often occurs that a medical man quite familiar with the case will give his certificate that the death arose naturally, from heart disease, apoplexy, &c., and in such case a coroner's inquest is dispensed with. Coroners do not obtrude into the houses of persons for the purpose of holding inquests, but are sent for by the peace officers, to whom it is the duty of those in whose houses violent or unnatural deaths occur to make immediate communication, whilst the body remains in the same situation as when the death occurred. Inquests are not to be held on Sunday. When the Coroner receives due notice of a violent death, casualty, or misadventure, he issues his warrant or precept to summon a jury to appear at a particular time and place for the purpose of instituting the inquiry, when, how, and by what means the deceased came by his death. The jury must consist of at least twelve lawful and honest men, "probi et legales homines," and the number is immaterial provided twelve agree. The jury is usually summoned from the householders residing in the neighbourhood in which the death took place. Any person having been duly summoned as a witness is bound to attend, or renders himself liable to be fined in any sum not exceeding forty shillings, the fine for defaulting jurymen being £5. The exemptions of persons from serving on juries contained in Jury Acts do not apply to Coroners' inquests. Coroners' inquests are frequently held into the causes of fire, but where there is no loss of life this excellent practice obtains only in the City of London.

VACCINATION.

The parent of every child born in England must within six months after the birth of the child, or the person having custody of a child must within six months after receiving it have the child vaccinated by a registered private medical practitioner or by the Public Vaccinator for the district. If the vaccination is performed by a private medical practitioner a certificate in the form prescribed by the Vaccination Order, 1898, of successful vaccination must be sent to the Registrar of Births within seven days. The Public Vaccinator is required on the request of the parent or guardian of a child to visit the home of the child and vaccinate it free of charge with glycerinated calf lymph or with such other lymph as may be issued by the Local Government Board at the option of the parent. If a child is not vaccinated within 4 months of its birth, the Public Vaccinator is required to give 24 hours' notice to the parent and to visit the home of the child and offer to vaccinate it. No parent or other person will be liable to any penalty under the Vaccination Acts if within four months from the birth of the child he satisfies two justices or a stipendiary or metropolitan police magistrate that he conscientiously believes that vaccination would be prejudicial to the health of the child and within seven days thereafter delivers to the Vaccination Officer for the district a certificate of such justices or magistrate of such conscientious objection. It will be seen that a conscientious objector to vaccination can thus escape all penalties, but a person who does not obtain this certificate of exemption will still be liable to penalties for not having a child vaccinated, and by the Vaccination Order, 1898, issued under the Vaccination Act, 1898, by the Local Government Board, the due vaccination of every child not exempted is secured by a very complete system of registration, and in future the Vaccination Officers will be able to undertake prosecutions without directions from Boards of Guardians, and the Boards will have no power to prevent such prosecutions.

MARRIAGE BY BANNS OR LICENCE.

Banns of Marriage. — "Banns" formerly applied to any public kind of proclamation, and now refer only to marriages, so that the word signifies the public announcement in the parish church, the object being to ensure notoriety, and exclude clandestine marriages. Formerly banns might be proclaimed on Church holidays, but the Marriage Act, 26 Geo. II. c. 33, prescribes audible publication according to the rubric, on three Sundays preceding the ceremony. If there is morning service the right time for banns is after the Nicene Creed; and if there be afternoon or evening, and no morning service, then the right time is after the 2nd lesson. The law is now chiefly contained in the Marriage Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, which repealed most of the laws then in force. Where the parties reside in different parishes, the banns must be published in both, the minister giving his certificate of the same to be handed to the minister of the parish where the marriage takes place. The law provides specially for the case where one of the parties resides in Scotland, the publication being then in the Established church of the parish. In like manner in Scotland the publication takes place in the parish church, even where the parties are married in the Anglican or Episcopal church. It may be noted that, by Scottish law only, omission to publish the banns does not invalidate the marriage. The names by which the parties are known are sufficient for publication of banns, so that a variance from the strict baptismal name is not important. But where wrong names are designedly given, for the purpose of concealment or otherwise, the case is different, and the marriage will be null and void (Midgeley v. Wood, 4 Sw. & Tr. 267). Where a wrong and fraudulent name is given by one party only, and the other party is innocent, the validity of the marriage is not affected.

The Bishop may licence a Chapel of Ease for the celebration of marriages; but where a district has been assigned to a chapel, and it becomes a vicarage, or "ecclesiastical parish," the option ceases, and the banns must be proclaimed and marriage celebrated therein, and not in the "mother church" or that of the civil parish.

If three months be permitted to elapse, the banns become useless, and the parties must either obtain a licence, or submit to the republication of banns. The minister ought to satisfy himself that the parties are of full age, or that the consent of parents is obtained, and it is usually on the score of insufficiency of age that banns are "forbidden." By the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, a marriage may be performed in church on a registrar's certificate without banns.

Marriage licences are of two kinds—(1) the Common or Ordinary Licence granted by the Archbishops and Bishops for marriage in any church or chapel duly licensed for marriages; (2) the Special Licence granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury for marriage at any time or in any place on good reason being shown (see p. 428). The Act of 1823 is severe on the clergy, making it a felony for any clergyman to marry the parties in the absence of banns or licence; and every Registrar or other person who knowingly unduly solemnizes a marriage is also guilty of felony. By a subsequent alteration in the law, the hours for marriage were extended, and they are now from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The minister should be careful that there are two witnesses present, and that these witnesses attest the entries in the register books, which are kept in duplicate.

All civil jurisdiction over marriage was taken away from the Ecclesiastical Courts by the Divorce Act of 1857. An incumbent may under Section 56 of this Act refuse to marry a divorced person, whose marriage has been dissolved for his or her adultery, but must allow another clergyman of the diocese to perform the service. A person whose marriage has been dissolved for the adultery of the other party is entitled to be married in church by the incumbent, or his curate or substitute.

Although the presumption of law is in favour of the validity of a marriage, great care should be taken to comply with the directions of the several statutes in every particular. Where it is impossible to comply literally, the parties must do all they can to comply with the law.

A marriage certificate is nothing more than a copy of the entry in the church register; and the customary fee is 2*s*. 6*d*., and a stamp duty of 1*d*. Searches on the register-books may be made on payment of small fees, viz., 1*s*. for a single year, and 6*d*. additional for every other year. There are small fees, regulated by custom, on the certificate given of banns in one parish for marriage in another. Marriage fees are not uniform, and if excessive there is power with the Diocesan Chancellor to moderate them. With those who are in a position to afford it, it is usual to pay a guinea to the clergyman, and 5*s*. to the clerk; and the usual fees are paid although a stranger-clergyman be invited to perform the service.

MARRIAGE LICENCES.

MARRIAGE LICENCES can be obtained in London by application at the Faculty Office, at the Vicar-General's Office, and at the Bishop of London's Registry, all within the old area known as Doctors' Commons, by one of the parties about to be married. In the country they may be obtained at the offices of the Bishops' Registrars, but licences obtained at the Bishop's Diocesan Registry only enable the parties to be married in the diocese in which they are issued; those procured at the Faculty Office, 23 Knightrider Street, Doctors' Commons, E.C., or at the Vicar-General's Office, 3 Creed Lane, Ludgate Hill, E.C. (hours in both offices 10 to 4; Saturdays 10 to 2), are available for London and all England and Wales. No instructions, either verbal or in writing, can be received, except from one of the parties. Affidavits are prepared from the personal instructions of one of the parties about to be married, and the licence is delivered to the party upon payment of fees amounting to thirty shillings, in addition to the cost of stamps, 12*s.* 6*d.* No previous notice is required and the licence is available as soon as it is issued. The cost of licences through a clerical surrogate in the country varies, according to the diocese, from £1 15*s.* to £2 12*s.* 6*d.* By the 4th George IV. c. 76, it is enacted, in order to avoid fraud and collusion in obtaining licences for marriage, that before any such licence be granted one of the parties shall make a declaration, on oath, that there is no legal impediment to the intended marriage; and also that one of such parties hath had his or her usual place of abode for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding the issuing of the licence within the boundary of the parish church, or the district parish in the church of which the marriage is to be solemnized.

It may be added that in the country there may generally be found a parochial clergyman who is also a surrogate, before whom the above-mentioned affidavit may be taken, and whose office it is to procure the licence from the Bishop's registry, the surrogate delivering the same personally to the applicant.

SPECIAL MARRIAGE LICENCES.

SPECIAL LICENCES are granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury through the Faculty Office, Doctors' Commons, under special circumstances, for marriage at any place with or without previous residence in the district, or at any time, &c.; but the reasons assigned must be such as to meet with his Grace's approval. Fees for licence stamp, &c., average £29 8*s.*

PROCEEDINGS AS TO A MARRIAGE BEFORE A REGISTRAR.

NOTICE AND DECLARATION.—In case of an intended marriage by Certificate at a register office (i.e., the superintendent registrar's office), or a certified building (i.e., usually a Roman Catholic or Nonconformist church or chapel), it is necessary for one of the parties to give notice under his or her hand (in the form prescribed by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, schedule A.) to the superintendent registrar of the district within which the parties shall have dwelt for the space of seven days then next immediately preceding; or if the parties dwell in different superintendent registrars' districts, a like notice must be given to the superintendent registrar of each district; every form of notice contains solemn declarations that there is no lawful hindrance to such marriage, as to the necessary residence, the ages of the parties, and consent of parent in case of a minor; such notice and declarations must be signed before a registration officer of the district, namely, a superintendent registrar, or registrar of births and deaths or marriages or the deputy of some such registrar. If the marriage is intended to be had by licence, it is necessary for only one of the parties to give notice to the superintendent registrar, in manner before mentioned, in whose district he or she has resided for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding, and if the other party reside in a different superintendent registrar's district, it is not requisite that notice should be given to such last-mentioned superintendent registrar; but one of the parties must, for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding the giving of the notice, have had his or her usual place of residence within the district of the superintendent registrar to whom such notice is to be given. In case a minister did not happen to attend and the parties wished, they might be married before the registrar without any religious ceremony.

CERTIFICATE.—After the expiration of twenty-one days next after the day of the entry of notice of marriage which is to be had without licence, the superintendent registrar is required, provided there be no lawful impediment, to issue, upon the request of the party giving the notice, a certificate in the form prescribed by the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 119, schedule B. At any time within three calendar months next after the day of the entry of the notice of marriage the intended marriage may be solemnized under the authority of the certificate.

LICENCE.—In the case of marriage by licence the superintendent registrar is required, after the expiration of one whole day next after the day of the entry of the notice of marriage, provided there be no lawful impediment, to issue his certificate and also a licence to marry. At any time within three calendar months next after the day of the entry of the notice of marriage the intended marriage may be solemnized under the authority of the licence.

MARRIAGE CEREMONY.—After the expiration of twenty-one days after the entry of the notice if the marriage is intended to be had without licence, or of one whole day if by licence, the marriage may be contracted at the register office and in the presence of the superintendent registrar and some registrar of the district, and in the presence of two witnesses, between the hours of eight a.m. and three in the afternoon, with open doors. Each of the parties is required to declare as follows:—"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D.:" and each of the parties shall say to the other, "I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]." A wedding-ring is usually required. In case a minister does not happen to be present, and the parties wish it, they may be married in any chapel or building certified for marriages, the registrar only being present with the two witnesses. The marriage laws of Scotland are peculiar, and cannot here be set out; but it may be mentioned that "Gretna Green weddings" are obsolete, a period of residence being now required by law. Provision is made in the Marriages and Registration Act, 1837, sect. 23, for the declaration and form of words to be used in Welsh in Wales and in all places where the Welsh tongue is commonly used. If both parties are of the Jewish persuasion, they must give notice to the registration officer, in manner before mentioned, and may marry according to their usages in a synagogue or private dwelling-house, and at any hour of the day; the marriage must be registered by the secretary of the synagogue to which the husband belongs. If both parties are members of the Society of Friends, they must give notice to the registration officer in manner before mentioned, and may be married in a Friends' meeting-house, and the marriage must be registered as soon as conveniently may be after its solemnization by the registering officer of the Society appointed to act for the district in which the meeting-house is situated. The presence of a registrar of marriages is not requisite at such marriages of Jews or members of the Society of Friends. The provisions as to Notices and Licences given above do not apply to Ireland. [Marriages before a Registrar in that country are regulated by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 27; the Act regulating marriages in that country in places of Worship is 33 & 34 Vict. c. 110.]

Under the Marriage Act, 1898 (which does not apply to Scotland or Ireland or to marriages according to the usages of the Society of Friends or of Jews), marriages may be solemnized in Nonconformist places of worship, provided they are duly registered for the solemnization of marriages without the presence of a Registrar, provided "the authorised person" (which means a person certified as having been duly authorised for the purpose by the trustees or other governing body of the building) is present and no notice has been given to the Superintendent Registrar that the parties to the marriage require the presence of a Registrar.

Where a marriage is solemnized under this Act each of the contracting parties shall in some part of the ceremony make the following Declarations:—

"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D."

And each of the parties shall say to the other:—

"I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband];"

or, in lieu thereof:—

"I, A. B., do take thee, C. D., to be my wedded wife [or husband]."

The Act provides for the registration after marriage by "the authorised person." The Act provides for the payment to the Superintendent-Registrar of the district in which the registered building selected for the marriage is situated, of an additional fee of 6*s.* 6*d.* if the marriage is by licence, and otherwise a fee of 4*s.*, but this provision for additional fees is only to remain in force for 10 years from the passing of the Act.

CERTIFICATE OF BIRTH, DEATH, OR MARRIAGE.—On giving the name and date this can be obtained at Somerset House on payment of 3*s.* 9*d.* made up as follows: 2*s.* 6*d.* for certificate, 1*s.* for search, and 1*d.* for stamp. Enquiries by post from residents in the Metropolis will not be considered; attendance in person or by agent is necessary. Certificates are also obtainable at the above rate from the superintendent registrar of the district in which the birth, death, or marriage occurred.

MARRIAGES OF BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

Act passed 27th June, 1892; came into force 1st Jan., 1893. Order in Council passed 28th Oct., 1892, laying down Regulations for Marriages under the Act.

British subjects desirous of being married at an embassy, legation, or consulate, must give seven days' notice of the intended marriage, but one of the parties at least must have resided for that time in the district immediately preceding the giving of such notice. After the suspension of such notice for fourteen days the marriage may take place, provided one or both parties have resided for three weeks immediately preceding within the consular district. In cases where one of the parties only has dwelt within the district of the officer by whom the marriage is to be solemnized, the non-resident party, if resident abroad, must give notice to the Consular Officer for the district in which he or she resides; or, if resident in a place in the United Kingdom, the same notice must be given as if that party were about to be married at that place, and in England or Ireland shall be given to the superintendent registrar, or registrar, and in Scotland shall be given by proclamation of banns. In either case it is necessary that the non-resident party shall have had his or her abode in the marriage district (whether in the United Kingdom or abroad) for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding the date of the declaration required before the marriage can take place, and notice of the intended marriage must be given during those weeks. A Consular Officer holding a warrant for a district can only solemnize a marriage at his own official house. He cannot solemnize a marriage at the office of any subordinate consular officer, or elsewhere. No marriages performed at any other place are valid under the Foreign Marriage Act. Parties residing within a consular district who may wish to be married under the Act must go to the consular officer provided with a warrant for that district; two or more witnesses are required to be present; and an oath, declaration or affirmation must be made by both parties with reference to their age, and parents' consent, if minors.

The following fees for marriages under the Foreign Marriage Act are leviable under the Consular Fees Order in Council of 18th August, 1892, and are payable to His Majesty's Govt.:—

| For receiving notice of an intended marriage..... | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| For receiving notice of a caveat..... | 1 | 0 | 0 |
| For every marriage solemnized by or in the presence of a Marriage Officer and registered by him ..... | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| For certificate by a Marriage Officer of notice having been given and posted up, in case of one of the parties residing | | | |

| outside the consular district in which the marriage is to take place..... | 0 | 5 | 0 |
| For attendance by consular officer at a marriage solemnized in accordance with the local law and for registration of the same ..... | 1 | 0 | 0 |

Marriages may be solemnized 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The ceremony, if a marriage under the Foreign Marriage Act, may be performed by, or in the presence of, any Ambassador, Minister, Chargé d'Affaires, or any of the Secretaries authorised for that purpose, or by any Consul-general, Consul, Vice-consul, Consular agent (or any person duly authorised to discharge their duties), or Pro-consul, provided that such consular officer is furnished with a warrant signed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. No religious ceremony is required, but any form according to the creed of the contracting parties may be used. The presence of the duly authorised Marriage Officer is, however, necessary to render the marriage valid. If the ceremonial be that of the Church of England, it can only be performed by a clergyman of that Church. If the service be not that of the Church of England, the contracting parties must make a declaration before the Marriage Officer to the effect that they know not of any lawful impediment why they may not be joined in matrimony, and that they call upon the persons present to witness that they take each other respectively to be lawful wedded husband and wife. In the absence of any religious ceremony, such declaration is sufficient.

Marriages solemnized under the Foreign Marriage Acts are legal by English law when both parties are British subjects, and also when only one of them is a British subject, but such marriages are not necessarily valid out of His Majesty's dominions. In cases where one of the parties is a subject of the country where the marriage is proposed to take place, or of a third country, the party in question must previously comply with the requirements of the marriage law of the country to which he or she belongs, so far as it may be possible to do so, in order to render such marriage also valid by the law of that country.

An Englishwoman married to a foreigner follows the nationality of her husband.

In Germany marriages by any foreign consular officer are, in the absence of any treaty stipulations, strictly prohibited. A consular officer is authorised to register, at the consulate at which he is appointed to reside, marriages solemnized in accordance with the locâ law between parties of whom one at least is a British subject, provided that he be satisfied by personal attendance that the marriage has been so solemnized; he cannot be required to attend at the solemnization of a lex loci marriage beyond the place at which he is appointed to reside.

A marriage which would not be valid if solemnized in England would be equally invalid if solemnized in one of His Majesty's embassies, legations, or consulates abroad. For instance, marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity (such as deceased wife's sister) would not be valid in England even if valid in the country where the marriage was contracted.

Marriages may also be solemnized under the "Foreign Marriage Act, 1892," before any governor, high commissioner, or resident, who may be duly authorised to that effect, and also before the commanding officers of any of His Majesty's ships on a foreign station.

BRITISH NATIONALITY AND NATURALIZATION.

NATIONALITY.—The following are, by the law of England, deemed to be British subjects:—

1. All persons born in His Majesty's dominions, whether of British or of Foreign parents.
2. Children of natural-born British subjects, wherever born.
3. Grandchildren of natural-born British subjects, wherever born.
4. Persons naturalized (a) By Special Act of Parliament, (b) Under the provisions of the "Naturalization Act, 1870."

The above does not apply to married women, who are deemed to be subjects of the state of which their husbands for the time being are subjects.

Natural-born British subjects can only deprive themselves of British nationality, (1) If they happen to be born in the British dominions of foreign parents, in which case they may, if of full age and if under no disability, make a declaration of alienage; (2) If they voluntarily become naturalized in a foreign state.

British subjects born in foreign countries sometimes become, by the law of the country of their birth, subjects or citizens of that country. In such case they may, by the law of England, when of full age, and if under no disability, make a declaration of alienage, and they then cease to be British subjects. Should they retain their British nationality, and continue to reside in the country of their birth, their British nationality will not avail them if claimed as subjects or citizens of the country in question.

NATURALIZATION.—The ordinary way of becoming a British subject is by fulfilling the requirements of the "Naturalization Act, 1870." The applicant must either have resided in the United Kingdom for a term of not less than five years, or have been in the service of the Crown for a similar period. He must also furnish evidence of his intention, when naturalized, either of residing in the United Kingdom, or of serving under the Crown. All applications for certificates of naturalization should be addressed to the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Privileges of naturalized British subjects:

"An alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted shall in the United Kingdom be entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges, and be subject to all obligations, to which a natural-born British subject is entitled or subject in the United Kingdom, with this qualification, that he shall not, when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject previously to obtaining his certificate of naturalization, be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state in pursuance of the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect."

With reference to the last paragraph of the foregoing extract, it may be mentioned that the only country with which Great Britain has yet concluded a treaty on the subject of naturalization is the United States of America.

A natural-born British subject, who has become naturalized in a foreign country, may obtain a certificate of re-admission to British nationality in fulfilling the conditions required in the case of aliens applying for a certificate of naturalization.

The children of naturalized British subjects, if born in the British dominions, are by the law of England deemed to be British subjects. If born abroad, they are only deemed to be naturalized British subjects provided that their father was naturalized under the Naturalization Act, 1870, and that during infancy they became resident with their father, or mother being a widow, in any part of the United Kingdom.

British colonies have power to legislate on the subject of naturalization. Colonial naturalization is, however, only operative within the limits of the particular colony in which the naturalization may have been granted.

| | £ | s. | d. |
| On grant of certificate of naturalization | 5 | 0 | 0 |
| For registration of declaration, with or without oath of allegiance | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| For certified copy of any declaration or certificate with or without oath | 0 | 10 | 0 |

STATUS OF ALIENS.—Real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held, and disposed of by an alien in the same manner in all respects as by a natural-born British subject, but the acquisition of a title to such property does not confer any right on an alien to hold real property out of the United Kingdom, or qualify him for any municipal, parliamentary, or other franchise.

Aliens are not entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, but are triable in the same manner as if they were natural-born subjects.

NOTIFICATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

By the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, the provisions of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act of 1889 were extended to the whole of England and Wales on the 1st January, 1899. Every case of infectious disease, as defined by the Act, is to be notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the district in which it occurs. The notice may be by letter or even verbal, and must be given by the head of the family to which the patient belongs, or by the nearest relatives present in the building or in attendance on the patient, or any other person in attendance, or by the occupier of the building. In addition to this, the medical man in attendance is required to send a certificate concerning the case to the Medical Officer of Health. Failure to send the notice or certificate renders the defaulter liable to 40*s.* fine. No payment is made for the notices required to be given by persons in the house, but the medical man gets 2*s.* 6*d.* for every case in his private practice and 1*s.* for every case in a public institution of which he is officer.

The diseases to which the Act applies are small-pox, cholera, diphtheria, membranous croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the fevers known by any of the following names: typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal. The local authority may by resolution order that the Act shall apply to any infectious disease other than those just mentioned, but such an order must be approved by the Local Government Board. The Local Government Board have refused to allow consumption or phthisis to be added to the list. In the case of London the provisions of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, are similar to those now extended to the rest of the country.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

PRECAUTIONS NECESSARY TO BE OBSERVED.—By the Public Health Act, 1875, it is provided that any person who—(1) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disorder in any street, public place, shop, inn, or public conveyance, or enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner, conductor, or driver thereof that he is so suffering; or, (2) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer; or, (3) Gives, lends, sells, transmits, or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding, clothing, rags, or other things which have been exposed to infection from any such disorder, shall be liable to a penalty of £5. A person suffering from such disorder who enters a public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner or driver that he is so suffering, shall be ordered by the Court to pay the owner and driver the amount of any loss and expense they may incur in respect of the disinfection of the conveyance. Every owner or driver of a public conveyance must provide for the disinfection of such conveyance after it has conveyed any person suffering from dangerous infection; but he cannot be required to convey any person so suffering until he has been paid a sum sufficient to cover any loss or expense incurred in disinfecting the conveyance. No person may knowingly let for hire any house, room, or part of a house in which any person has been suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder without having the same and all articles liable to retain infection, disinfected to the satisfaction of a legally qualified medical practitioner, as testified by a certificate signed by him—penalty not exceeding £20, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding one month. Where the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, is in force, the occupier of a house, or of any part in which there has been a case of infectious disease within six weeks before he ceases to occupy it, must have the premises disinfected and inform the owner of the disease. If the outgoing occupier gives false information to the owner or to an intending tenant as to the occurrence of the infection he is liable to heavy penalties and to an action for damages. Where, on the certificate of the Medical Officer of Health, or of any two medical practitioners, it appears to any District Council that any house, or part thereof, is in such a filthy or unwholesome condition that the health of any person is affected or endangered thereby, or that the whitewashing, cleansing, or purifying of any house, or part thereof, would tend to prevent or check infectious disease, they may give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such house to whitewash, cleanse, or purify the same, and such person is liable to a penalty of 10*s.* for every day during which he fails to comply with the notice, and the Council may cause the work to be done, and recover the expenses from the person in default. Where any suitable hospital or place for the reception of the sick is provided, any person who is suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, and is without proper lodging or accommodation, or is lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, may, on a certificate signed by a legally qualified medical practitioner, and with the consent of the superintending body of such hospital or place, be removed by order of any justice to such hospital or place. Similar provisions apply to the Metropolis.

REASONS FOR MAKING A WILL.—Every man having a wife and family should make his will. However small his estate, however remote may seem the probability of death, however confident that his property will pass to those he most wishes to benefit, it is an imperative duty in most cases, and is safer in every case, to protect the interest of the survivors by means of a will, and by the appointment of one or more trustworthy persons to carry his wishes into effect. When persons die intestate, having foolishly put off making a will until it is too late, their negligence may deprive those for whom they were most anxious of the very benefits which had demanded a life-long struggle to provide. Thus a widow may find, to her grievous disappointment, that the estate, a life policy perhaps, or a few hundreds in Consols, is not all hers, but has to be shared with a distant cousin of her husband's, whose name perhaps she had never before heard. Or it may be the eldest son of an intestate dusting all his brothers and sisters from possession of the real estate, or an improvident or unbusinesslike nearest relative may claim to administer the estate. Instances might be multiplied in which negligence, or unreasoning dislike to making a will, becomes an irreparable crime against those who have the first claim to protection. The help of a lawyer in making a will is not in every case essential, but it is always advisable, particularly where there is a desire on a testator's part to provide for his property being "settled" as it is called—e.g., the income being paid to his widow for her life, or until remarriage, and on her death or remarriage the capital being divided among his children equally. The tying-up or postponing the enjoyment of income or capital requires the skill of a practised lawyer. Assuming that a lawyer is not employed, a person having resolved to make a will must not regard it as a light matter, to be got rid of in a few minutes, like writing a letter, but one demanding the most serious attention. It is only after a person is dead, and cannot explain his meaning, that his will can be open to dispute. It is the more necessary, therefore, to express what is meant in language of the utmost clearness, avoiding the use of any word or expression that seems to admit of another meaning than the one intended. The lawyers have a maxim that the unforeseen (i.e., the event not provided for) always happens. It is better to be prolix than to leave the smallest room for doubt or uncertainty, although the same name or word be repeated over and over again. Sounding phrases are entirely out of place. Avoid the use of "legal terms," such as "heirs" and "issue," when the same thing may be expressed in plain language. If in writing the will a mistake be made, it is better to rewrite the whole. Before a will is executed, that is, signed by the testator in presence of two witnesses, an alteration may be made by striking through the words with a pen, but opposite to such alteration the testator and witnesses should write their names or place their initials. Never scratch out a word with a knife or other instrument, and no alteration of any kind whatever must be made after the will is executed. If the testator afterwards wishes to change the disposition of his estate, it is better to make a new will, revoking the old one, or to add a codicil to the first, which must be duly executed and attested in the same manner as the original will. A will should be written in ink and very legibly on a single sheet of paper. Although, of course, forms of wills must vary to suit different cases, the following directions may be found useful to those who, in cases of emergency, are called upon to draw up wills, either for themselves or others:—

TESTATOR OR TESTATRIX.—The person who makes the will is the testator, or if the will-maker be a woman, the testatrix.

ESTATE.—By this word is to be understood property of all kinds, both real and personal. Real property includes tithes and advowsons, as well as freehold land and houses; while personal property includes debts due, arrears of rents, money, leasehold property, house furniture, goods, assurance policies, stock in public companies, and the like.

RESIDUARY LEGATEES.—It is well in all cases to leave to some person or persons "the residue of my estate and effects," although it may be thought that the whole of the property has been disposed of in legacies already mentioned in the will. It should be remembered that a will operates on property acquired after it has been made.

TO BEGIN A WILL.—A form in which a will may be commenced is:—"This is the last will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks."

TO END A WILL.—After disposing of the property, the will may be ended as follows:—"And I revoke all former wills and codicils. Dated this tenth day of December, 1890."

EXECUTION OF A WILL.—The testator should sign his name at the foot or end of the will, in presence of two witnesses, who will immediately sign their names in his and in each other's presence. A person who has been left a legacy or share of residue in the will, or whose wife or husband has been left a legacy, should not be an attesting witness. Their attestation would be good, but they would forfeit the legacy. It is better that a person named as executor should not be a witness. Husband and wife may both be witnesses, provided neither is a legatee. If a solicitor be appointed executor, it is lawful to direct that his ordinary fees and charges shall be paid; but in this case he (as an interested party) must not be a witness to the will.

ATTESTING EXECUTION.—Opposite to or beneath the testator's signature should be written the attestation clause. The following form of attestation will be found sufficient:—

Signed by the testator [or testatrix, as the case may be], in the presence of us, both present at the same time who in his [or her] presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto set our names as witnesses. THOMAS SMITH [Signature of Testator.]

William Jones, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, Tailor. Henry Morgan, of North Street, Reading, Esq.

It is desirable that the witnesses should be fully described, as they may possibly be wanted at some future time. If the testator should be too ill to sign, even by a mark, another person may sign the testator's name to the will for him, in his presence and by his direction, and in this case it should be shown that the testator knew the contents of the document. The attestation clause should therefore be worded: "Signed by Thomas Brown, by the direction and in the presence of the testator, Thomas Smith, in the joint presence of us, who thereupon signed our names in his presence and in the presence of each other, the will having been first read over to the testator, who appeared fully to understand the same." If the testator be blind the will should be read aloud to him in the presence of the witnesses, and the fact mentioned in the attestation clause. If by inadvertence the testator should have signed his will without the witnesses being present, then the attestation should be :—"The testator acknowledged his signature already made as his signature to his last will and testament, in the joint presence," &c. Any omission in the observance of these details causes delay and expense, and sometimes great difficulty is experienced in procuring an affidavit by one of the attesting witnesses before the will can be admitted to Probate.

CODICIL.—When any change is required to be made in the disposition of property as stated in the will, the change should be embodied in a codicil. A codicil should begin :—"This is a codicil to the will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, in the county of Berks, the said will bearing date," &c. A codicil must be dated at the end, and signed and witnessed with exactly the same formalities as the will.

EXECUTORS.—It is usual to appoint two executors, although one is sufficient. The name and address of each executor should be given in full, as follows :—"I appoint John Jones, of number twenty-one, London Street, Ipswich, and Edward Matthews, of number seventeen, Market Street, Lincoln, executors of this my will." An executor may be a legatee under the will: Thus a child or wife to whom the whole or a portion of the estate is left may be appointed sole executor, or one of two executors. The addresses of the executors are not necessary, if it is well known who are the persons intended ; but it is desirable, here as elsewhere, to avoid ambiguity or vagueness.

APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES.—The form of appointment of executors will also serve when the estate is left in care of trustees, except that the persons should be designated "executors and trustees."

TRUSTS OF THE WILL.—When the estate is wholly for the children, the will may read, after the appointment of the executors and trustees :—"I give and devise all my estate and effects, real and personal, of which I may die possessed or entitled to, unto the said John Jones and Edward Matthews, upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child living at my death who being sons or a son attain the age of 21 years or being daughters or a daughter attain that age or marry. And for all or any the children or child living at my death, who being male attain the age of 21 years or being female attain that age or marry of any child of mine who dies in my lifetime leaving children or a child living at my death, such last-mentioned children or child to take the share or shares which their parent would have taken if living at my death, and so that no grandchild of mine shall take whose parent is living and capable of taking." Where the widow is to have a life-interest use the following words: "upon trust for my wife during her life [or during her widowhood], and after her death [or second marriage, which first happens] upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child" &c. as before. The words in square brackets will only be used where the widow is to lose her interest if she marries again.

WHO CANNOT MAKE A WILL.—A minor cannot make a will. A woman married before the 1st of January, 1883, can make a will with her husband's consent ; but without such consent she can only (under the Married Women's Property Act) bequeath property accruing to her after that date except in certain circumstances, respecting which it is advisable to consult a solicitor. But a woman married after that date can dispose by will of all property belonging to her at the time of her marriage, and of all property acquired thereafter, in all respects as if she were an unmarried woman.

REVOCATION.—A will is revoked by a subsequent will (but only so far as such subsequent will operates as a virtual revocation, as by making other provisions inconsistent with the previous will ; for this reason a will should always have a clause revoking previous testamentary dispositions), or by burning, tearing, or otherwise destroying the same. It is not sufficient to obliterate the will with a pen. Marriage in every case acts as the revocation of a will : so that after marriage the old will should be re-acknowledged, or a new one made.

LAPSED LEGACIES.—If a legatee die in the lifetime of the testator, the legacy or share of residue lapses and falls into the residue, excepting only in cases where the legatee is a child or "other issue" of the testator and leaves issue living at the testator's death, and the will does not provide for the class of children or issue being ascertained at some period other than the death of the testator. For instance, if a share of residue is left to "all my children living at my wife's death," the share of a child who died in the wife's lifetime would lapse even though the child should leave issue.

TO ONE PERSON ABSOLUTELY.—When it is the intention to leave all the property to one person, as for instance a wife or child, the will may read :—"I devise and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to, unto my wife Mary Smith, absolutely."

TO CHILDREN UNDER AGE.—When estates are left wholly or in part to children under the age of 21 years, trustees should be appointed to hold the property in trust for those to whom it will ultimately belong. The trustees will have power to apply the annual income for their maintenance. A wife may be appointed a trustee, or may be sole trustee. It is also usual to appoint the executors, or some near relative, guardians of children under age. By the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886, the mother of a child, if she survives the father, becomes the guardian of such child, either alone, if no guardian is appointed, or jointly with any guardian appointed by the father.

ALL PROPERTY TO BE INVESTED.—Executors and trustees may be empowered to sell and dispose of an estate, and after the payment of all just debts and expenses to invest the remainder. For this purpose the section headed "Trust Investments" should be consulted.

The stringency of the law as to the due execution of wills is only relaxed in favour of sailors and soldiers while on service. The law of wills is mostly contained in the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 27.

DUTIES OF EXECUTORS.—After the death of the testator, the duties of the executor may be stated briefly as follows :—The first duty of the executors, or of one of them, is to see that the funeral takes place in a suitable and becoming way ; then to make lists or schedules of the debts and the assets or property. For purposes of duty it is necessary to estimate the value of the real and personal property left, or get it valued. Under the Finance Act, 1894, duties are charged on all property in which the testator had a life interest, even though the property may not have been under his personal control. The executor must take the will to the Probate Registry, Somerset House, or to the Probate Registry of the district in which the testator had a fixed place of abode, or to a solicitor, and prove the will; to collect all the property of the deceased and pay all his just debts, and before distributing the estate, if it be a large one, it is necessary in order to relieve the executors from personal liability to duly advertise in certain London and local newspapers for all claims against the estate to be sent in before a specified date. Pay the legacy on succession duty. Dispose of the residue of the property as directed in the will. By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, all the testator's real estate becomes vested in the executors, who hold the same as trustees for the persons beneficially entitled under the will or otherwise, and such persons can only acquire a title to the estate through the executors, after payment of all charges and liabilities to which the same is subject. Executors are not obliged to act, neither is it necessary that all the executors should act: one alone is competent to prove a will and carry out its provisions. In small estates, probate and letters of administration may be obtained through an Inland Revenue Office.

ADMINISTRATORS.—If an executor has not been appointed in the will, or if the executor be dead, or does not wish to act, the residuary legatee nearest of kin to the deceased, or a legatee under the will, is entitled to act and administer the will, and is called administrator.

Marriages in Scotland.

THE marriage laws of Scotland are peculiar among those of all nations for the latitude allowed the contracting parties, and, beyond requiring proof of present consent, the utter absence of direction as to celebration. No religious ceremony is obligatory, although the intervention of the Church is recognised and is becoming more usual in practice. That the parties give their free and serious consent is the only requisite. Males over fourteen and females over twelve may contract marriage without consent of their parents or guardians.

Marriages are of two kinds: (1) Those solemnized by a minister after (a) banns, or (b) publication of notice by the Registrar, called Regular Marriages; and (2) those celebrated without the assistance of a clergyman, called Irregular Marriages.

On Banns.—The proclamation of banns in Scotland has been customary authentically since 1242, and is probably of greater antiquity. It is regulated chiefly by the Acts of Assemby of the Church of Scotland. One of the parties (if not already domiciled in Scotland) must have resided in that country for six weeks previous to the proclamation, and in the parish where the banns are to be proclaimed for the space of fifteen clear days immediately preceding. The banns are proclaimed in the parish church (i.e., the church in the parish of the Established Church of Scotland) on two separate Sundays during service, but it is customary to complete the publication by proclamation at two services on the same Sunday. Where the parties reside in different parishes, the proclamation is made in both. There is no provision for cases where one of the parties resides in England, but it is usual to accept an English certificate. Episcopalians, unlike other Dissenters in Scotland, have privilege of proclamation also in their chapel. Application for proclamation of banns is made to the session clerk of the parish church. A certificate of residence signed by two householders is usually required to accompany the application. The fee for banns is 2*s.* 6*d.*

The certificate of publication of banns is authority to a clergyman of any denomination to celebrate the marriage. After the lapse of three months the banns are useless. The marriage must take place in presence of at least two witnesses capable of giving evidence. It need not be celebrated in a church, but may be in a dwelling-house or elsewhere, and at any hour; the time and place is a matter of absolute indifference to the law. After the marriage a schedule, signed by the parties, the clergyman, and two witnesses, must be transmitted to the registrar within three days, under penalties. Clergymen do not charge fees.

After Notice by Registrar.—This procedure is regulated by the Marriage Notice (Scotland) Act, 1878. Both parties must have resided in Scotland for at least fifteen days prior to publication of the notice. Application is made to the registrar, who publicly exhibits the notice of the intended marriage for seven days. At the expiry of this period, unless written objections have been filed, the registrar issues a certificate of publication, which is equivalent in effect to banns. The fee is 1*s.* 6*d.* Roman Catholics avail themselves of this method exclusively.

Irregular Marriages. — By declaration or acknowledgment. One of the parties must have resided in Scotland for twenty-one days immediately preceding. The parties, being capable of marriage and without legal impediment, may express either verbally or in writing, in presence of two witnesses (to whom the parties are known) capable of giving evidence, their mutual consent to take each other then and there for husband and wife. This act constitutes marriage. Registration is not essential to the validity of the marriage. If, however, it is desired to register the marriage, application is made to the sheriff of the county where it has been contracted. It is advisable to employ a solicitor to conduct the matter. After examination on oath of the parties and witnesses, and on being satisfied on the facts, the sheriff issues an order to the registrar to register the marriage and grant a certificate of registration. The fees are £1 5*s.*

ILLEGITIMACY.—A man may be summoned to petty sessions on the application of the mother of a bastard child, or by the Guardians of the Poor where the child becomes chargeable to the Union or parish; and the Justices, on his being proved to be the father of the child, may make an order requiring him to pay for its maintenance and education a sum not exceeding 5*s.* a week. The mother has the custody of her bastard children. No person is required as father of an illegitimate child to give information concerning the birth of such child, and the registrar is forbidden to enter in the register the name of any person as father of the child unless at the joint request of the mother and father. Such person is in that case required to sign the register, together with the mother. A menial servant found to be enceinte may be peremptorily dismissed without notice; but any attempt to examine without her consent a servant supposed to be enceinte renders the employer liable to an action.

To find a will proved before 1st January, 1858, the date on which the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), came into operation, it is best to search first—if the testator was a man of substance—the index to the wills proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which is kept at Somerset House. Failing this, the will is probably to be found in the registry of the district in which it was proved. The wills proved prior to 1858 were all distributed among the district registries when these institutions came into existence. This is the only broad rule which can be laid down to guide a searcher. To find a will proved since 1858 is a far simpler task. It must have been proved either at the Principal Registry at Somerset House, or in the registry of the district in which the testator lived. In the former case the original will itself is carefully preserved at Somerset House, the copy of which probate has been granted is in the hands of the executors who proved the will, and another copy for Parliament is bound up in a folio volume of wills made by testators of that initial and date; the indices to these volumes fill a room of considerable size at Somerset House, where the indices may be examined and any will read on payment of a search fee of one shilling. In the latter case, the original will, proved in the District Registry, is there kept, and may be seen or a copy obtained, but a copy is sent to and filed at Somerset House, where also it may be seen. A general index of grants, both probate and administrations, is prepared and printed annually in lexicographical form, and may be seen at either the Principal or a District Registry. This index is usually ready by about June or July of the following year. The reader may not copy any part of the will except the names and addresses of the executors and the date and private number of the will. If he desires a copy, he can order one to be made, for which he will pay according to the length of the will, at the rate of sixpence a folio (ninety words) for an ordinary copy, and ninepence a folio for a certified copy, which, with a shilling stamp impressed thereon, can be produced and read in any court of law. The District Registries established by the Act of 1857 are the following:—

SAFE CUSTODY OF WILLS.

There is a depository for the safe custody of the Wills of living persons at Somerset House. Since 1857 this depository has been provided by the State under sect. 91 of the Act 20 & 21 Vic. c. 77; but the provision has been almost a dead-letter. A will may be deposited through the Registrar of a District Registry, who will transmit the will to London in a registered letter on receiving a fee of 10s. for the deposit, of 2s. 6d. for entering a minute thereof, and 2s. for filing the affidavit which is required. A will once deposited will not be given up to anybody, but must remain in the registry until the testator dies, unless he goes to the registry with the original minute of deposit and other proof of his identity, and destroys his will in the presence of the Registrar.

Architects' Fees.

THE custom is to charge 5 per cent. on the cost of new work, if exceeding £1,000. Below that sum, an increased scale is usual. An increased charge is also made for alterations to existing buildings, and for designs for decorations, fittings, and furniture. If PLANS, &c., are prepared for works which are never carried out, the charge is one-half the above, with a further half per cent. if tenders have been invited and received. These charges do not include negotiations for purchase of site, &c., nor settlement of difficulties with adjacent owners and public authorities, nor taking out quantities. For repetitions a modified charge is usually arranged. The minimum charge per day is three guineas. In all cases, travelling and other out-of-pocket expenses are paid by the employer in addition to the fees. For furnishing or checking a Schedule of Dilapidations and Estimate the usual charge is 5 per cent. on the estimate, but in no case less than two guineas. For valuing and negotiating the settlement of claims under the Lands Clauses and similar Acts the charge is on Ryde's Scale.

Surveyors' Fees.

SURVEY with plain plan—100 acres and under—by arrangement, according to work required. Over 100 acres, 2*s.* per acre and expenses; if with finished map, according to amount of embellishment.

VALUATION to fix rent—5 per cent. on first £200, and 2½ on remainder of one year's rental value, and expenses.

TIMBER valuation—5 per cent. on first £100, and 2½ on the excess, and out-of-pocket expenses.

CROPPING—5 per cent. up to £100, and 2½ on the excess, and out-of-pocket expenses.

VALUATION for probate—2 per cent. on first £500, and 1½ on the excess, and out-of-pocket expenses. But it is now usual to make a bargain for a fixed and moderate sum.

VALUATION of land—6*d.* per acre, and out-of-pocket expenses. No fee less than 5 guineas.

Auctioneers' and Estate Agents' Fees.

FOR THE SALE OF FREEHOLD AND COPYHOLD ESTATES AND HOUSES AND GROUND LEASES, BY AUCTION OR BY PRIVATE TREATY.—£5 per cent. on the first £100; £2½ per cent. up to £5,000; and on the residue above that sum £1½ per cent.; and the usual commission of £5 per cent. in addition on the amount paid for fixtures, furniture, and effects, and in addition for any disbursements.

FOR LETTING UNFURNISHED HOUSES, OR DISPOSING OF LEASES OTHER THAN GROUND LEASES BY ASSIGNMENT OR OTHERWISE. — Where the term is for three years or less, £5 per cent. on one year's rent; where for more than three years, £7½ per cent. on one year's rent, and (in either case) upon the premium or consideration, £5 per cent. up to £1,000, and 2½ per cent. on the residue, and the commission of £5 per cent. on any sum obtained for fixtures, furniture, or effects of any kind.

FOR LETTING FURNISHED HOUSES, IN TOWN OR COUNTRY.—When let for a year or less period, £5 per cent. on the rental. When let for more than a year, £5 per cent. on first year's rent, and £2½ per cent. on rent for remainder of term. Where a property is let, and the tenant afterwards purchases, the commission for selling will then become chargeable, less the amount previously paid for letting furnished or unfurnished.

FOR VALUATIONS OR SALE OF FURNITURE, FIXTURES, AND OTHER EFFECTS.—For Sale, £5 per cent.; for Valuation, £5 per cent. up to £500, and £2½ per cent. on the residue.

FOR VALUATION OF FURNITURE AND EFFECTS FOR PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION.—£2½ per cent. on the first £100, and £1½ per cent. on the residue.

FOR VALUATION OF PROPERTIES FOR SALE, PURCHASE OR MORTGAGE.—£1 per cent. up to £1,000, 5*s.* per cent. above, on full amount of valuation. In valuations for Mortgage, if an advance is not made, one-third of the above scale, the minimum fee to be £3 3*s.*

FOR VALUATIONS FOR PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION (UNDER THE FINANCE ACT, 1894) OF FURNITURE AND EFFECTS.—£2½ per cent. on the first £100, and £1½ per cent. on the residue. OF FREEHOLD, COPYHOLD, OR LEASEHOLD PROPERTIES—5*s.* per cent. on amount of valuation. Minimum fee, £3 3*s.*

FOR NEGOTIATING THE PURCHASE OF ESTATES, HOUSES, AND GROUND LEASES.—£2½ per cent. up to £500, and £1 per cent. beyond that amount.

FOR NEGOTIATING THE TAKING OF FURNISHED OR UNFURNISHED HOUSES.—Half the scale for letting.

FOR LETTING BUILDING LAND.—Amount of one year's ground rent, or by agreement.

FOR MAKING AND EXAMINING INVENTORIES, and making catalogue for auction sale—From one guinea, according to length, exclusive of expenses.

MAKING schedule of fixtures to attach to lease—From 1 to 4 guineas, or about 3 guineas per day.

FOR MAKING schedule of dilapidations, and serving notice to repair—From 2 to 5 gs. per day.

FOR SETTLING amount of dilapidations—5 per cent. on amount, and out-of-pocket expenses.

RAILWAY, School Board, Corporation, Board of Works, and other compensations—SCALE:—

If the award be for £1,000 the fee chargeable is 18 gs., and for £1,200 19 gs., and so on, each £200 additional earning a further guinea, but no fee less than 7 guineas; and a fee of 3 guineas per day for London valuers, and 5 guineas per day for valuers outside the London area, for attendance in London before jury or arbitrator.

MANAGEMENT of estates, including collection of rents—Tithe-rent charges, ground rents, &c., from 3 to 5 per cent.; cottage property, from 5 to 10 per cent., according to special agreement.

Allowances under Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 and 1890.

The following charges are to be subject to reduction by agreement with the Official Receiver or the trustee, or to increase with the sanction of the Committee of Inspection and the Receiver:—

Brokers.—For inventory not exceeding 5 folios, 10*s.* 6*d.*; additional per folio to 20 folios, 1*s.* 6*d.*; each folio after 20, 1*s.* For inventory and valuation:—On the first £100, £2 10*s.*; for the next £400, £1 5*s.*; above £400 up to £10,000, £1; above £10,000, 10*s.* Travelling expenses in addition.

Auctioneers.—For sales by private contract half the above charges for inventory and valuation; for sales by auction (in addition to certain out-of-pocket expenses) of chattel property, 5 per cent. on first £500, 4 per cent. on next £500, above £1,000 2½ per cent.; and of estates in land, including prior valuations for determining amount of reserve bids, on first £300 5 per cent., on next £1,500 2½, above up to £5,000 1¼, and above £5,000 1 per cent. Cost of surveys, dilapidations and specifications, £2 to £5.

Accountants.—For preparing balance-sheet, investigating accounts, &c., principal's time, exclusively so employed, per day of seven hours, including necessary affidavit, £1 1*s.* to £5 5*s.* Chief-clerk's time, 10*s.* 6*d.* to £1. 1*s.* 6*d.* Other clerk's time, per day of seven hours, 7*s.* 6*d.* to 16*s.* These charges to include stationery, except forms used.

MEDICAL FEES.

UNLIKE those in most other businesses or professions, the charges made by medical men are assessed upon a sliding scale. All engaged in the profession are supposed to be equal in point of skill, and therefore entitled to charge alike, the tariff depending chiefly upon the residence of doctor or patient. A medical man living in the eastern suburbs of London will perhaps charge but half a crown or three-and-sixpence if waited upon by a patient; but, when he removes to the neighbourhood of Cavendish Square, the fee charged for the first visit will be two guineas, and one guinea for the second and every subsequent visit.

Patients are charged according to their supposed incomes, the income being indicated by the rental of the houses in which they reside. The following are the charges usually made by general practitioners:—

| General Practitioners. | Rentals. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | £20 to £25. | £25 to £50. | £50 to £100 | |
| Ordinary Visit ..... | 2*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* | 3*s.* 6*d.* to 7*s.* | 5*s.* to 10*s.* 6*d.* | |
| Night Visit..... | Double an ordinary visit. | | | |
| Mileage beyond two miles from Home | 1*s.* 6*d.* | 2*s.* | 2*s.* 6*d.* | |
| Detention per ½ hour | 2*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* | 3*s.* 6*d.* to 7*s.* | 5*s.* to 10*s.* 6*d.* | |
| Letters of Advice .. | Same charge as for an ordinary visit. | | | |
| Attendce. on servants | 2*s.* 6*d.* | 3*s.* 6*d.* | 3*s.* 6*d.* to 5*s.* | |
| Midwifery ..... | 21*s.* | 21*s.* to 63*s.* | 63*s.* to 105*s.* | |
| Administrng. Chlfrm. | 10*s.* 6*d.* | 21*s.* | — 42*s.* | |
| Consultants. | | | | |
| Advice or Visit alone | 21*s.* | 21*s.* | 21*s.* | |
| Advice or Visit with another Practitioner | 21*s.* | 21*s.* to 42*s.* | 21*s.* to 42*s.* | |
| Mileage beyond two miles from Home | 10*s.* 6*d.* | 10*s.* 6*d.* | 10*s.* 6*d.* | |

Special visits—i.e., of which due notice has not been given before the practitioner starts on his daily round, are charged at the rate of a visit and a half. Patients calling upon the doctor are charged at the same rate as if visited by him.

When the ordinary medical attendant is called upon to meet another in consultation, he is entitled to charge double his ordinary fee. When he himself is called in, in consultation, he is entitled to the minimum fee of 21*s.*

When more members of one family are ill at the same time, half a fee is charged for each beyond the first.

If attendance on servants is paid for by employer, or if he send for the doctor, the charge is the same as to himself.

Certificates of health are to be charged for same as visits, except where special investigation is needed, as in certificates for lunacy, insurance offices, &c., when the charge may be from half a guinea to two guineas.

Vaccination is usually charged for according to the number of visits required.

Medical bills are commonly rendered once or twice a year, and contain but one amount—"Attendance and medicine," from date to date, so much. The patient has no means of checking the correctness of the charge, although medical men, like all others, are liable to err; they, however, are always willing to show their ledgers when requested.

SOLICITORS' CHARGES.

THESE are now usually regulated in conveyancing and non-contentious business by the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the Scale thereunder—we say "usually" because that Act allows an option to a solicitor of declining to adopt it. In practice, most solicitors (although some old-established firms are found to prefer the old system) are willing to adopt the Scale, and especially on mortgages and sales. Looking first at the old system, we find that an Act of 1843 made solicitors' charges on conveyancing liable to taxation by a public official; and in 1870 a further Act enabled the taxing officer to have regard to "skill, labour, and responsibility" as well as to mere length of documents. The Act of 1881 enabled the high legal authorities, with the consent of certain representative solicitors, to frame a Scale, and this has been done. It chiefly relates to sales, purchases, and mortgages, and is based upon the value of the property or amount of the money involved. Besides this, it is legal for a client to make a bargain beforehand for a fixed sum. The amount coming to the solicitor, whether under Scale or agreement, is intended to cover the services of himself and his clerks, while it is, of course, exclusive of actual outlay for stamps, &c. On purchase or mortgage money exceeding £300 and not exceeding £1,000, the Scale charge for each party's solicitor is 1½ per cent.; this does not apply to sales by auction. Where a negotiation fee is chargeable, in addition, by the vendor's, purchaser's, or mortgagee's (not mortgagor's) solicitor, the Scale charge on sums exceeding £300 and not exceeding £3,000 is 1 per cent. It should be noted that if the solicitor negotiates the purchase or mortgage, he is entitled to an additional fee of substantial amount under the Scale referred to.

TRUST FUNDS AND INVESTMENTS.

BY RULE OF THE SUPREME COURT, DATED NOVEMBER, 1888, trustees may invest trust funds in the following securities:—

2¾ per Cent. Consols; to be reduced, 5th April, 1903, to 2½ per cent. Consols and Reduced 3 per Cent. Annuities. 3¼ per Cent. and 2½ per Cent. Annuities. Exchequer Bills. Bank Stock. India 3½ per Cent. and 3 per Cent. Stocks. Indian Guaranteed Railway Securities. Colonial Government Stocks guaranteed by Imperial Government. Mortgage of freehold or copyhold estates in England or Wales. 3 and 3½ per Cent. Metropolitan Consolidated Stock.

Debenture, preference, guaranteed, or rent-charge stocks of railways in Great Britain or Ireland having for ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on ordinary stock or shares.

Nominal stocks or nominal debenture stocks issued under the Local Loans Act, 1875, provided in each case that such stocks shall not be liable to be redeemed within a period of fifteen years from the date of investment.

Local Loans Stock under the National Debt and Local Loans Act, 1887.

THE RULE OF COURT OF NOVEMBER, 1888, will be little referred to now that all the foregoing items in more extensive, and in some cases slightly different, language, are authorized by the Trustee Act, 1893, the more important clauses of which, especially where the Rule of Court is varied, may be summarized as follows:—This Act, which consolidates the enactments relating to trustees, authorizes mortgages on freeholds, or property equivalent to freehold, not only in England and Wales, but also (where not prohibited) in Ireland and Scotland. A very few leaseholds, viz., terms of 200 years, at a nominal rent, are also authorized by the Trustee Act, 1893.

THIS ACT ALSO AUTHORIZES investments by trustees upon any securities guaranteed by Parliament, and these include the following:—Certain Canada Government stocks, the Turkish Loan of 1855, the Egyptian 3 per cent. Guaranteed Loan, a Jamaica 4 per cent. Loan, and one or two others of small amount. In addition to Metropolitan Stock, any stocks of the London County Council are now authorized; also any Corporation or Municipal stocks of the cities or boroughs (about 60 in number) having at the last census a population exceeding 50,000. Also stocks, &c., under certain conditions, of waterworks companies and of water commissioners. Another very important addition to the list of trust securities is this: Preference, debenture, guaranteed, or rentcharge stocks of British railway companies which have paid 3 per cent. on their ordinary stocks for ten years. This includes all the great lines in England, Ireland, and Scotland, except a few, e.g., the North British, Great Eastern, and Chatham and Dover, which have not, for the whole period of ten years, paid regular dividends to their ordinary shareholders.

THE ACT FURTHER AUTHORIZES trust investments in certain Indian Railways guaranteed by the Indian Government, which can be found on reference to the Stock Exchange official lists. But with regard to the entire list, a trustee cannot invest in anything which is (directly or by implication) prohibited by the terms of his trust. It remains to add (1) that by this Act a trustee may buy at a premium under fixed conditions, but not where the stock is redeemable within 15 years at par, "or some other fixed rate." (2) The last power, as well as every other, is to be used at the "discretion of the trustee"—a phrase which can only be taken in a technical sense, as the Court expects him to show a prudent and cautious discretion, and forbids him, for instance, to favour the tenant for life at the expense of those to follow after. (3) A trustee must consider what is directed, and what is forbidden, by the terms of his trust, before resorting to any of the securities authorized by the Rule of Court or by the new Act. (4) The Settled Land Act of 1882 also gives a list of securities on which "capital money" arising from sales of property under that Act may be invested—it does not materially differ from the above. The safest plan for a trustee to adopt is this: after looking to his trust, to see that nothing is prohibited, to turn his attention solely to the Act of 1893, sect. 1, and take his choice of the securities therein mentioned. Nearly all of them are at a high price, and he can hardly make sure of obtaining 2¾ per cent. for trust money.

If the deed or will under which he is acting authorizes Colonial or Foreign Government securities, but not otherwise, he may consult the list of such securities, and select one or more, so as to obtain a slightly higher return on the capital invested.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.—Fares are according to distance or time, at the option of the hirer, expressed at the commencement of the hiring; if not otherwise expressed, the fare to be paid according to distance; but driver can refuse to be hired by time between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

DRIVER, if hired by distance, is not compelled to drive more than six miles, nor more than one hour if hired by time; further, if hired by time, the driver may be required to drive at any rate not exceeding four miles an hour; if required to drive more than four miles within the hour he may demand, in addition to the fare regulated by time, for every mile or any part exceeding four miles, the fare regulated by distance.

AGREEMENT to pay more than legal fare is not binding.

If the driver agree beforehand to take any sum less than the proper fare, the penalty for demanding more than the sum agreed upon is 40s.

The driver of every hackney carriage shall have with him, and when required produce, the Authorized Book of Distances, and every driver of any hackney carriage shall, if so required, deliver to the hirer a printed ticket, showing fares, &c.

Driver may demand a reasonable sum as a deposit from persons hiring and requiring him to wait at any place, over and above the fare to which the driver is entitled for driving thither. Penalty 40s., if driver, having received such deposit, refuse to wait, or go away before the expiration of the time for which the deposit shall be a sufficient compensation; or if the driver shall refuse to account for such deposit.

The London Cab Act, 1896, enacts that if any person hires a cab, knowing, or having reason to believe, he cannot pay the fare; or, fraudulently endeavours to avoid payment of a fare; or, having failed, or refused, to pay a fare, refuses, or gives a false address, is liable, in addition to the fare, to a penalty of 40s.

The fares legally demandable by a stage carriage are those painted in a conspicuous manner on the inside of every such carriage, and they are recoverable in a summary way before a Justice of the Peace, in the same way as fares for a hackney carriage.

All property left in any hackney carriage shall be deposited by the driver (and in the case of a stage carriage, by the conductor, or driver if no conductor) at the nearest Police Station within twenty-four hours, if not sooner claimed by the owner; such property to be returned to the person who shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Police that the same belonged to him, on payment of all expenses incurred, and of such sum to the driver as the Secretary of State has by order prescribed. Property found in a stage carriage by a passenger must be given up to the conductor under a penalty of £10.

All inquiries, &c., relating to public carriages should be addressed to the Public Carriage Office, New Scotland Yard; but inquiries as to property left in a hackney or stage carriage should be made at the Lost Property Office, New Scotland Yard. Office hours, 10 to 4.

During 1905 there were licensed public carriages:—Hansoms, 6,996; clarences—animal power 3,935, mechanical power 19; omnibuses—animal power 3,484, mechanical power 241; tramway cars—mechanical power 1,124, animal power 786; total, 16,585. Drivers and conductors:—Hackney drivers—animal power 12,663, mechanical power 23; stage drivers—animal power 6,169, mechanical power 2,474; conductors, 10,084; total, 31,413.

HACKNEY AND STAGE CARRIAGE DRIVERS before obtaining a licence are required to pass an examination as to their ability to drive, and hackney carriage drivers, in addition, have to pass an examination as to their knowledge of town. It extends to a knowledge of the principal squares, streets, and public buildings in London. During 1905, of 682 men examined, 331 were successful. The annual average number of applicants who passed the examination during the past five years was 650. The proportion of drivers to hackney carriages is 11·58 drivers to 10 carriages; 249 of the drivers are over 70 years of age.

Of lost property, 57,820 articles were deposited, of which 26,770 were claimed by the owners, and £3,509 12s. 9¼d. awarded to the drivers and conductors.

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.—The scavenging of streets and the cleansing of footways and pavements is generally undertaken by the sanitary authorities. It is unlawful to place or leave on any footway any furniture, goods, wares or merchandise, or any cask, tub, basket, pail, &c.; or to place over any footway any blind, shade, covering, awning, or other projection less than eight feet in height from the ground; or to place any goods, wares, merchandise, matter, or thing whatsoever, so that the same project in such a manner as to obstruct or incommode the passage of any person over or along a footway; or to roll any cask, tub, hoop, or wheel upon any footway, except for the purpose of crossing the footway; or to throw or lay down any materials in any street, or beat or shake any carpet, rug, or mat in street after the hour of eight in the morning.

THE tithe of produce, the ancient provision for the maintenance of the clergy, was, after various attempts at modification and composition, commuted in 1836 by Act of Parliament to a payment in money. The land was valued, and a modus fixed, based upon the average value of corn for the preceding seven years, and payments, collected half-yearly by the clergy or lay-owners, have since been made on a septennial average. The value fixed amounted in some cases to as much as ten shillings per acre. The better the land for corn-growing, the larger was the sum to be paid, as it was a direct charge upon the corn grown, the prices upon which the Act was based being per quarter—wheat at 56*s.* 2*d.*; barley, 31*s.* 8*d.*; and oats, 22*s.* Consequently much land, not being worth the tithe, is now out of cultivation, or let at a price which just covers the charge. An Act passed in 1891 makes it compulsory for the owners of the land, instead of the occupiers, to pay the tithe, which amounts in the aggregate to about four millions annually, of which sum £766,334 is paid to 2,096 lay-owners or impropriators. Extraordinary tithes were an additional charge made, when the Commutation Act was passed, upon hop, fruit, and market-garden grounds. These special industries were so affected by the tax, which in some cases amounted to thirty shillings an acre, that serious resistance against the payment ensued, and an Act was passed in 1886 providing that it should not be levied on land brought under such cultivation after the passing of the Act, but land under these crops at the time was permanently burdened with the impost. The tithe map and apportionment for each parish is deposited with the incumbent and churchwarden. Any one interested therein may have access to the same and obtain extracts by paying 2*s.* 6*d.* for inspection, and 3*d.* for every 72 words contained in the extract. Tithe may, upon the joint application of the land-owner and tithe-owner to the Board of Agriculture, be redeemed for a sum not less than 25 times its amount. This is dependent upon the consent of the Board, and sometimes on that of the Bishop and patron. Town property and building land is often redeemed, agricultural land rarely, the cost being too great.

The average Tithe Rent Charge for the first fifty years from 1836 was £102 9*s.* 9½*d.*, and for the past 70 years (1837–1905) £94 3*s.* 2¾*d.*

DIVIDENDS are paid:—

On Sterling Stocks transferable in the Bank Books—(a) Warrants will be sent by Post—1. To Sole or First Stockholders without application, in the absence of any instructions to the contrary. (Sole Stockholder includes Sole Surviving Stockholder, Sole Executor or Administrator, and Sole Surviving Executor or Administrator. First Stockholder includes the First Executor.) 2. To any Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, other than the Sole, or First, Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, or to any Person, Firm, or Company, upon the written Request, in the prescribed form, of all the Stockholders, Executors, or Administrators. (b) Dividends will be paid to any Stockholder, Executor, or Administrator, personally attending at the Bank, on his written Request, in the case of a Sole Account, or on the written Request of all the Stockholders, Executors, or Administrators, in the case of a Joint Account. The Request in either case must be in the prescribed form.

On Indian Railway and Thames Conservancy Debenture Stocks, Chinese 5% and 4½% Stocks, Greek 2½% Stock, Japanese 5% Stock, and Corporation of London 2½% Debenture Stock—by transmission of Warrants through the Post to the Stockholders or their Nominees.

On Indian Rupee Promissory Notes and Registered Stock—(a) On personal application at the India Office, Bank of England:—to the owner of the Notes or Stock; or, to his Attorney or Agent. (b) By Post:—to the owner of the Notes or Stock; or, to his Attorney or Agent.

Dividends on Promissory Notes and Registered Stock are paid by Bills of Exchange on India, commonly called Interest Bills. (As an Interest Bill is payable in India in Rupees, the Bill is usually sold in London, for Sterling, at the Exchange of the day, through a Banker or other Agent.)

HOURS, &c.—The Dividend Office is open from 9 A.M. to 4 P.M. (except on Saturdays, when it closes at 1 P.M.).

The India Office (Bank of England) is open from 9.30 A.M. to 4 P.M. (except on Saturdays, when it closes at 1 P.M.).

INVESTMENT OF DIVIDENDS.—Holders of certain stocks in amounts of less than £1,000 may instruct the Bank to receive and invest their dividends by filling up forms, to be obtained at the Head Office, at any of the Branches, or at any Money Order Office. A commission is charged of 1*d.* per £, or part of a £, with 3*d.* additional for each advice of a purchase, should such advice be required.

TRANSFER DAYS, any day but Saturday; Instructions 9.30 to 1 (to 3, fee 2*s.* 6*d.*); Executions 11 to 3; Acceptances 9.30 to 4 (Saturdays to 1). Transfers made on Saturdays (between 11 and 12.30) are charged a fee of 2*s.* 6*d.*

Voters' Qualifications.

I. PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

1. PROPERTY.

i. Freehold Estate of clear yearly value of forty shillings, if owned in fee simple or fee tail, or in occupation, or acquired by marriage, marriage settlement, devise or promotion to a benefice or office.

ii. Lands of any tenure, of £5 clear yearly value, held for life.

iii. Leasehold

a. of £5 clear yearly value, original term being not less than sixty years.

b. of £50 clear yearly value, original term being not less than twenty years.

B. Scotland.

i. Lands and heritages in proprietorship of £5 yearly value as appearing in the valuation roll.

ii. Leasehold.

a. of £10 clear yearly value, original term, being not less than fifty-seven years or for life.

b. of £50 clear yearly value, original term being not less than nineteen years.

C. Ireland.

i. Freehold of £5 net annual value.

ii. Rent charges or leases for life or lives of £10 clear yearly value.

iii. Leasehold.

a. of £10 clear yearly value, original term being not less than sixty years.

b. of £20 clear yearly value, original term being not less than fourteen years.

N.B.—The Property Qualification is confined to Counties and to Boroughs which are Counties Corporate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mortgagee. A mortgagor in possession is entitled to vote, but the mortgagee becomes entitled on taking possession.

Trusts. The beneficiary, not the trustee, has the vote.

Joint Owners. Only one may now vote, unless they were all entitled to vote in 1884, or their interests were derived by succession, or they are partners in business on the land owned by them.

Freeholds. Two or more freeholds may be joined to make up the requisite value.

Property in Boroughs. Property situate in a borough, such as would give a vote for the borough, will not give one for the county unless the freeholder be disqualified for the borough vote by non-occupation.

Leaseholds. A lessee who has sublet does not lose his right to vote; but a lessee who has assigned loses the right. To be entitled to a vote, a sublessee or assignee of a sublease must be in actual occupation.

2. OCCUPATION.

for twelve months, before registration of lands or tenements within a county or borough, entitled the occupier to a vote. This qualification is uniform throughout the United Kingdom.

"Occupier" means one who uses the premises either as a dwelling house or place of business. Continuous occupation is unnecessary, provided the occupier has the exclusive right to occupy. He or some other person must have been during twelve months rated to the poor in respect of the premises, and all poor rates made and allowed during the twelve months preceding January 5th paid on or before July 20th.

Residence required. In English and Scotch counties, and in Ireland, none, but in English boroughs there must be residence during six months of the qualifying year (four months being allowed for absence on duty or employment); in Scotch Boroughs during the whole year in or within seven miles of the borough.

£50 Rental Franchise. This qualification, resting on the occupation of land in counties at a yearly rent of not less than £50, is now virtually obsolete, but persons registered in 1884 with this qualification are entitled to be re-registered from time to time, so long as they retain it.

Service Franchise. Lodgers, licencees and servants do not enjoy the occupation Franchise, as they are neither owners nor tenants, but a servant if allowed to occupy land (only in counties) as a reward for service may be a tenant and therefore entitled.

N.B.—Occupation Qualification extends to any part of a house separately occupied.

3. RESIDENCE.

This Household Qualification is given to the "inhabitant occupier" throughout the United Kingdom (whether he occupies as owner, as tenant, or in virtue of any office, &c.) of a dwelling house (including flats and residential chambers), or any part of a house occupied as a separate dwelling, which has been rated, and for which rates have been paid by a certain date. There need not be actual inhabitancy, but there must be an intention of returning after a temporary absence, and a power of doing so without a breach of a legal obligation. So an undergraduate occupying college rooms from which he is excluded during vacation is not entitled to vote, nor a soldier occupying rooms from which he is required to be absent from time to time on duty.

In calculating the twelve months, a period not exceeding four months may be counted during which the house has been occupied and furnished by some one else, or during which the inhabitant occupier has been absent on duty in connection with any office, employment, etc.

Occupation in immediate succession of different premises in the same parliamentary county or borough is equivalent to continued occupation of the same premises during the qualifying period.

N.B.—This rule applies both to occupation and Residence.

4. LODGERS.

This qualification belongs to anyone in the United Kingdom who has resided in the same lodgings for twelve months next preceding July 15th, such lodgings being of the clear yearly value, unfurnished, of £10. The Lodger is not disqualified because he has occupied different lodgings of the requisite value in the same house, nor because he occupies them jointly with another lodger, if the aggregate value is sufficient.

5. FREEMEN.

Reform Act. 1832, left the franchise to freemen of towns in which, prior to 1832, such qualification gave a right to vote, but only to those who have acquired freedom by birth or servitude, and who, during the year preceding claim, have resided in or within seven miles of the town.

In the City of London a freeman, to obtain a vote, must also be a Liveryman of one of the City Companies. He may also acquire freedom by purchase. He must reside within 25 miles of the place of poll.

6. THE UNIVERSITIES.

Graduates on electoral roll of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, and London, the Chancellor, the Professors, the members of the University Court and General Council of Edinburgh, Glasgow, St. Andrews and Aberdeen, are qualified to vote for their respective Universities.

Registration.

i. Property Voter must claim in order to get on to the Register, but once there he need not make a fresh claim. He must have been in possession, or receipt of rents, in case of freeholds for six, leaseholds for twelve calendar months prior to July 15th in the year in which they claim to be registered. This is not necessary where the qualifying property is freehold, and has been acquired by marriage, marriage settlement, etc.

ii. Occupiers need not claim at all, unless omitted by the Overseers, whose duty it is to register their names.

iii. The Lodger Voter has to claim afresh every year.

Claims for the Old Lodgers' List must be sent in by July 25th, all other new claims by August 20th. The Register, when made up, comes into force on the ensuing January 1st, unless accelerated by special legislation.

Disqualifications.

Aliens, idiots, lunatics (except during lucid interval), infants, peers (except Irish actually elected and serving in the House of Commons), convicted felons (until freed by pardon or otherwise), persons convicted of corrupt practices, either at Parliamentary or Municipal Elections (seven years from date of conviction), and School Board Elections (six years from date of election), persons convicted of illegal practices at Parliamentary and Municipal Elections (five years from date of conviction), persons employed at elections, or within six months before, for pay or reward, bankrupts, persons in receipt of parochial or other relief, persons with fictitious or collusive qualifications (e.g., fagot voters), corporations, returning officers (unless the votes are equal), corporations, and women.

II. MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY COUNCIL ELECTIONS (ENGLAND AND WALES).

A. CITY OF LONDON.

1. Election of Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, and Chamberlain.

The Electors are Liverymen.

2. Election of Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and Ward Officers.

The Electors are (a) Freemen occupying premises in the city, and rated in that respect at not less than £10 per annum. (b) Male persons who have occupied for twelve months premises in the city, and are similarly rated. (c) Persons registered as Parliamentary Electors for the city by virtue of the borough occupation Franchise. (d) Persons otherwise entitled to be registered as Parliamentary Electors for the city, but disqualified by non-residence.

B. OTHER BOROUGHS AND COUNTIES.

1. Election of Mayor or Chairman.

The Electors are the Councillors or County Councillors.

2. Election of Aldermen or County Aldermen.

The Electors are the Councillors or County Councillors.

3. Election of Elective Auditors.

The Electors are the Burgesses. This, however, does not apply to County Councils, whose accounts are audited by district auditors appointed by the Local Government Board.

4. Election of Councillors or County Councillors.

The County Electors, together with the burgesses of every borough within the county, form the Electorate for the County Council. A qualification which in a Municipal Borough would entitle a person to be a Burgess will, if held in a county, entitle him to be a County Elector.

The Municipal Franchise differs from the Parliamentary Borough Franchise in two important particulars—

a. The Franchise is, except in case of land, irrespective of the value of premises occupied.

b. Women may vote.

The qualifications are—

i. Occupation in the borough of a building of any value, or of land of the clear yearly value of £10.

ii. Residence in or within seven miles of the borough.

iii. Being rated and paying rates.

There are two additional qualifications for the County Franchise—

i. Being a peer owning property in the county.

ii. Being registered as an ownership voter for Parliament in a county.

Disqualifications.—These are the same as in the case of Parliamentary Electors, except that peers, women, bankrupts, and persons with fictitious qualifications are not disentitled. Women may not vote in the City of London.

III. PARISH COUNCILS ELECTIONS (ENGLAND AND WALES).

The Electors are the "Parochial Electors," i.e., those persons registered in such portion, either of the Local Government Register (see II.), or the Parliamentary Register (see I.) of Electors, as relates to the parish.

N.B.—A woman is not disqualified by marriage from being on any Local Government Register of Electors, but husband and wife cannot both be qualified in respect of the same property.

IV. DISTRICT COUNTY ELECTIONS. URBAN AND RURAL (ENGLAND AND WALES).

The Electors are the "Parochial Electors" of the parishes in the district.

V. LONDON BOROUGH COUNCILS.

The Mayor is elected by the Council, the Aldermen by the Councillors, and the Councillors by the "Parochial Electors."

I. PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS.

The following are not eligible: Aliens, women, minors, lunatics, English and Scotch peers, Irish representative peers, judges, the holders of various offices, clergy of the Established Church, and of the Roman Catholic Church, and ministers of the Church of Scotland, Government contractors, persons holding pensions of the Crown (other than diplomatic and civil service), convicted felons, and bankrupts.

II. MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY COUNCIL ELECTIONS.

1. Mayor or Chairman must be chosen from the Aldermen or Councillors, or persons qualified to be such.

2. Aldermen must be Councillors or persons qualified to be such.

3. Elective Auditors must be qualified to be Councillors, but not members of the Council, town clerk, or treasurer.

3. Councillors must be, and entitled to be, burgesses, resident within seven miles of the borough, or within fifteen miles, if they possess a property qualification of £1,000, or the persons qualified to elect to the office of Councillor.

Disqualifications.—Officers on the active list, bankrupts, persons convicted of crime or corrupt or illegal practices, and women are disqualified for all corporate office. A person is disqualified for election as Councillor if and while he is an elective auditor, or revising assessor, or holds any office of profit other than that of Mayor or Sheriff under the Council, or is directly or indirectly interested in any contract or employment with or on behalf of the Council.

N.B.—Clerks in holy orders, and other ministers of religion, are qualified for election as County but not Borough (except London Borough) Councillors or Aldermen.

III. PARISH COUNCIL ELECTIONS.

Persons eligible are: "Parochial electors," or persons who have resided during the whole twelve months preceding the election in or within three miles of the parish. Persons may be disqualified by receipt of parochial relief, bankruptcy, crime, tenure of a paid office under the Council, or pecuniary interest. Women, married and unmarried, are eligible.

IV. DISTRICT COUNCIL ELECTIONS. (URBAN AND RURAL.)

1. Urban.—In urban districts, which are boroughs, the Municipal Council is the District Council. Elsewhere, the Urban District Councillors must be either "parochial electors" of some parish within the district, or persons who have, during the whole twelve months preceding the election, resided in the district.

2. Rural.—The District Councillors must be either "parochial electors" of some parish with a union, comprising the district, or persons who have, during the whole twelve months preceding the election, resided in the union, or, if the parish be wholly or partly situate within the area of a county borough or other borough, is qualified to be elected as a Councillor for that borough.

Disqualifications are the same as in III.

V. LONDON BOROUGH COUNCIL ELECTIONS.

A person is not qualified to be elected a Borough Councillor unless he—

1. is a Borough Elector of the borough;

2. has, during the whole twelve calendar months preceding the elections, resided in the borough.

The qualifications for Mayor and Borough Alderman are the same as those given in II., 1 and 2.

Women are ineligible for office. Otherwise the disqualifications are the same as in III.

STANDARD GOLD contains eleven-twelfths of fine metal and one-twelfth of alloy ; fineness, 916·66, or 22 carats. Twenty troy pounds of standard gold are coined into 934 sovereigns and one half-sovereign ; one troy ounce is, therefore, intrinsically worth £3 17*s*. 10½*d*., and one ounce of pure gold, on the same basis, £4 4*s*. 11½*d*.

STANDARD SILVER consists of thirty-seven-fortieths of fine metal and three-fortieths of alloy ; fineness, 925. One troy pound of standard silver is coined into 66 shillings. [Another Standard, called the "New Sterling" or Britannia, of the fineness 11 oz. 10 dwt. (958·33), is practically obsolete. It is occasionally used, however, for high-class plate.]

*BRONZE is an alloy of copper 95 parts, tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part.

THE "REMEDY" is the amount of variation permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint.

TOKENS.—No person is allowed to coin any token to pass for, or as representing, bronze or other money, under a penalty of £20.

LIGHT GOLD.—Any person to whom it is tendered may break, cut, or deface any gold coin below the least current weight ; but under the provisions of the Coinage Act, 1891, light gold coin which has not been illegally dealt with is received by the Bank of England on behalf of the Mint at its full nominal value.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES are issued for sums of £5, £10, £20, £50 ; also for £100, £200, £500, and £1,000.

BANK POST BILLS are drawn for any sum from £10 to £1,000, and made payable to order at seven days' date, or at sixty days'. No charge is made for bills so drawn : they may be obtained at the Chief Office in London, or at any of the branches.

LEGAL TENDER OF MONEY.—The tender of Bank of England Notes is legal in England and Wales for every purpose, and by anyone (except by the Bank of England). No one can be compelled to give change. Gold, if above the least current weight, is a legal tender to any amount. Silver is not a legal tender for sums over two pounds, nor bronze, including farthings, for sums over one shilling.

OLD MONEYS.—Guinea, 21*s*. ; Carolus, 23*s*. ; Moidore, 27*s*. 6*d*. ; Angel, 10*s*. ; Noble, 6*s*. 8*d*. ; Tester, 6*d*. ; Groat, 4*d*.

SCOTS MONEY.—Merk=13*s*. 1⅓*d*. ; Pound=1*s*. 8*d*. ; Shilling=1*d*. ; Plack=2 Bodles=4*d*. Scots.

* It is interesting to note that the legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one-fifth, and of the farthing one-tenth of an ounce avoirdupois. Further, the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.

By means of the above table, taken in conjunction with the column of the opposite page headed "Equivalent Weight of Standard Silver in Troy Ounces," the intrinsic value of any coin can be easily calculated with silver at several prices other than those given. It will only be necessary to take the numbers representing tenths, hundredths, and thousandths of ounces in the first column, find the numbers opposite to them in the column of the above table giving the price of silver, and add these together, taking care to move the decimal point successively one, two, and three places to the left ; the result will be the coin's intrinsic value in pence.

Price of Silver, 1896–1905.

The Average Yearly Price of Silver per standard Troy Ounce in the London Market during the last ten years was as follows :—

| 1896. | 1897. | 1898. | 1899. | 1900. | 1901. | 1902. | 1903. | 1904. | 1905. |

In the United States the price of silver is quoted in cents per troy ounce fine. In order to convert an English quotation into cents per ounce fine, first express the pence as a whole number and decimal fraction and then multiply by 2·192 ; to express a United States price on the English system multiply the cents by 0·4562.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—France, Belgium, Italy, Greece, and Switzerland constitute what is known as the "Latin" Union, and their coins are alike in weight and fineness, occasionally differing, however, in name. The same system has been in part adopted by Spain, Servia, Bulgaria, Russia, and Roumania, but they have not joined the Union. Francs and centimes of France, Belgium, and Switzerland are respectively designated lire and centesimi in Italy; drachmai and lepta in Greece; dinars and paras in Servia; pesetas and centimos in Spain; leys and banis in Roumania; leva and stotinkis in Bulgaria. Similarly the Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, employ coins of the same weight and fineness, their names being also alike. Most of the South American States possess a standard coin, equal in weight and fineness to the silver 5-fr. piece, generally termed a "peso." In Hayti the corresponding coin is a "gourde."

In most British Colonies English money is current. The currency of Ceylon, Mauritius, and the East Africa Protectorate is, however, based on the rupee of British India; that of the Straits Settlements (now replaced by a local currency on the dollar basis), Hong Kong, and Labuan on the Mexican dollar, and of Canada and British Honduras on the United States gold dollar. A British dollar, identical in weight and fineness with the Japanese "yen," was authorised by Order in Council in 1894, and was made legal tender in the Straits Settlements (demonetized in 1903), Hong Kong, and Labuan. New subsidiary currencies are about to be issued for circulation in Uganda and the East African Protectorate (based on the rupee), and in Nigeria (based on sterling). The exchange value of the moneys of those countries indicated by a * is determined by the rate of exchange for the day, and may be taken as approximately that given in the last column. The rate given in the daily papers generally represents the number of the standard coins that are equivalent to one sovereign. The Spanish rate is given in terms of pence per dollar (= 2 reales), the Russian in pence per rouble, Portuguese in pence per milreis, and the United States rate in pence per dollar. The approximate value of other silver coins must be sought in one of the columns headed "Intrinsic Value with Silver at per Troy Oz." The exchange value of the rupee depends on the rate for "India Council Bills," but by an Act of 1898, the British sovereign was made legal tender and equivalent to 15 rupees, the rupee being thus rated at 1s. 4d. In "bimetallic" countries pure gold is generally taken as being worth 15½ times its weight of pure silver. This proportion corresponds to giving standard silver a constant value of 60½ d., as in the last column of the table.

Metric Weights and Measures.

The Metric System is based upon the (assumed) length of the direct distance from the Equator to the North Pole. The ten-millionth part of this distance, as calculated in 1795, was adopted by the French Government as the unit of length, and called a mètre. All other measurements are derived from this unit; the cube of the tenth part of the mètre is the unit of capacity, called a litre, and the weight of a litre of water, at a certain temperature, is the unit of weight, called a kilogramme. The unit of land measurement is 10,000 sq. mètres, called a hectare. The above terms are now used in this country under the English names of meter, liter, kilogram, and hectare. In the designs at the left of the page, the figures refer to inches and centimeters, the former being divided into 16ths, 8ths, 4ths, and the latter into millimeters.

Time and Watch on Board Ship.

WATCH.—For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions: the Starboard (right side, looking forward) and the Port (left). The day commences at noon, and is thus divided:—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Afternoon Watch | ... ... | noon to 4 p.m. |
| First Dog | ,, ... ... | 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. |
| Second Dog | ,, ... ... | 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. |
| First | ,, ... ... | 8 p.m. to midnight. |
| Middle | ,, ... ... | 12 a.m. to 4 a.m. |
| Morning | ,, ... ... | 4 a.m. to 8 a.m. |
| Forenoon | ,, ... ... | 8 a.m. to noon. |

This makes seven WATCHES, which enables the crew to keep them alternately, as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having Dog Watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. into two Watches.

TIME.—Time is kept by means of "Bells," although there is but one bell on the ship, and to strike the clapper properly against the bell requires some skill.

First, two strokes of the clapper at the interval of a second, then an interval of two seconds; then two more strokes with a second's interval apart, then a rest of two seconds, thus:—

BELL, ONE SECOND; B., TWO SECS.; B. S.; B. SS. B. S.; B. SS.; B.

1 Bell is struck at 12.30, and again at 4.30, 6.30, 8.30 p.m.; 12.30, 4.30, and 8.30 a.m.

2 Bells at 1 (struck with an interval of a second between each—B. S. B.), the same again at 5, 7, and 9 p.m.; 1, 5, and 9 a.m.

3 Bells at 1.30 (B. S. B. SS. B.), 5.30, 7.30, and 9.30 p.m.; 1.30, 5.30, and 9.30 a.m.

4 Bells at 2 (B. S. B. SS. B. S. B.), 6 and 10 p.m.; 2, 6, and 10 a.m.

5 Bells at 2.30 (B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B.) and 10.30 p.m.; 2.30, 6.30, and 10.30 a.m.

6 Bells at 3 (B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B. S. B.) and 11 p.m.; 3, 7, and 11 a.m.

7 Bells at 3.30 (B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B.) and 11.30 p.m.; 3.30, 7.30, and 11.30 a.m.

8 Bells (B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B. S. B. SS. B. S. B.) every 4 hours, at noon, at 4 p.m., 8 p.m., midnight, 4 a.m., and 8 a.m.

Freezing point = 32° F. = 0° C. = 0° R.; Boiling point = 212° F. = 100° C. = 80° R. To convert degrees CENTIGRADE or REAUMUR into degrees FAHRENHEIT, or vice versa, use one of the following formulæ:

$$F = \frac{9\,C}{5} + 32 \qquad F = \frac{9\,R}{4} + 32 \qquad F = C + R + 32 \qquad R = \frac{4\,(F-32)}{9}$$

$$C = \frac{5\,(F-32)}{9}$$

Let F = Number of degrees Fahrenheit, C = Number of degrees Centigrade, and R = Number of Degrees Réaumur, then—

UNIFORMITY.—In 1824 an Act was passed rendering uniformity compulsory from the 1st of January, 1826, since which time the Imperial Statute System of Weights and Measures has been in general use, although some remains of the older forms still linger.

Avoirdupois Weight.

Drachm .....dr. = 27·34375 grains.
Ounce ..... ..oz. = 16 drachms, 437·5 grains.
Pound .....lb. = 16 oz., 256 dr., 7,000 grains.
Customary Stone...st., Butcher's Meat = 8 lb.
Legal Stone...st. = Horseman's weight = 14 lb.
Quarter .....qr. = 28 lb.
Cental or Quintal, cent. = 100 lb.
Hundredweight, cwt. = 4 qr., 112 lb.
Ton .....T. = 20 cwt., 2,240 lb.

Avoirdupois weight is used in almost all commercial transactions and common dealings, but in addition to the above there are special weights for various articles, the chief of which are :—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| A Quartern Loaf ..... | = | 4 lb. |
| A Peck of Flour, 2 Gallons ..... | = | 14 ,, |
| A Firkin of Butter..... | = | 50 ,, |
| A Firkin of Soft Soap ..... | = | 64 ,, |
| A Box of Fish, about ..... | = | 90 ,, |
| A Barrel of Gunpowder ..... | = | 100 ,, |
| A Barrel of Raisins ..... | = | 112 ,, |
| A Seam of Glass, 24 stones of 5 lb. | = | 120 ,, |
| A Barrel of Butter—4 firkins ..... | = | 224 ,, |
| A Barrel (or pack) of Soft Soap..... | = | 256 ,, |
| A Faggot of Steel ..... | = | 120 ,, |
| A Pig of Ballast ..... , ..... | = | 56 ,, |
| A Fodder of Lead, London and Hull | = | 19½ cwt. |
| A do. Derby=22½ cwt.; Newcastle | = | 21½ ,, |
| A Cask of Blacklead ..... | = | 11½ ,, |

A Sack—Flour, 280 lb.; Coals, 224 lb; a ton of Coals, 10 sacks.

The Metrical System of Weights is used in Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Norway, and some other countries, the unit of which is the Gramme=15·432 grains; the chief multiple of the Gramme is the Kilogramme=2·2046 lb.: in practical use this is found inconvenient for small purchases, and nearly all commodities are sold by the demi or half kilo. The Centner of 50 kilos=110¼ lb., very nearly represents the English cwt.; but heavy goods are sold by the Tonneau of 2204·621 lb., about 19 cwt. 77 lb., the Myriagramme being ignored.

In the United States and in Canada the cwt. is generally reckoned as 100 lb., and the ton of 20 cwt.=2,000 lbs.

In Russia the Pood of 36 lb. is the commercial weight : 62½ Poods=1 English ton.

Indian Weights (Bengal).

Tola, unit of postage=180 grains.
Chittak=5 Tolas ; Seer (16 Chittaks)=2$\frac{3}{5}$ lb.
Imperial or Indian Maund=82$\frac{2}{7}$ lb.

Madras.

Viss=3·09 lbs., Maund=25 lb., Candy=500 lb.

Troy Weight.

Carat ..... = 3·17 grains.
Pennyweight ...dwt. = 24 grains.
Ounce.....oz. = 20 dwt., 480 gr.
Pound.....lb. = 12 oz., 240 dwt., 5,760 gr.
Hundredweight..cwt. = 100 lb.

TROY is the weight used by goldsmiths and jewellers. The grains Troy, Apothecaries', and Avoirdupois are equal, and the same in England, France, the United States, Holland, and in most other countries ; but the carat varies : in France it is 3·18 grains, in Holland 3·0 gr., and in the U.S. 3·2 gr. In the U.K. the jewellery ounce is divided into 152½ carats or 600 pearl grains.

The oz. Troy and Apothecaries' = 1·09714 oz. avoirdupois; but the lb. Troy and lb. Apothecaries' =only 0·82286 lb. avoirdupois ; while 175 lb. Troy and Apothecaries' = 144 lb. avoirdupois.

Apothecaries' Weight.

Scruple ℈ = 20 Grains..... = 20 gr.
Drachm ʒ = 3 Scruples..... = 60 ,, Ounce ℥ = 8 Drachms ..... = 480 ,, Pound lb = 12 Ounces ..... = 5760 ,,

The avoirdupois oz. of 437½ grains, and the lb. of 7,000 grains, are the weights named in the British Pharmacopœia ; drugs are purchased by avoirdupois, but compounded by Apothecaries' weight. The Apothecaries' oz. and lb. may now be considered obsolete.

Hay and Straw.

Truss of Straw, 36 lb. Truss of Old Hay, 56 lb. Truss of New Hay (to September 1st), 60 lb.
Load, 36 Trusses—Straw, 11 cwt. 2 qr. 8 lb. ; Old Hay, 18 cwt. ; New Hay, 19 cwt. 1 qr. 4 lb.

Wool.

Clove, cl. = 7 lb.
Stone, st. = 2 Cloves 14 lb.
Tod, td. = 2 Stones 1 qr.
Wey, wy. = 6½ Tod 1 cwt. 2 qr. 14 lb.
Pack, pk. = 240 lb.
Sack, sk. = 2 Weys 13 qr.
Last, la. = 12 Sacks 39 cwt.

Since the advent of SHODDY, some of the above weights have become nearly obsolete, although the terms are still in use with different values : thus 16 lb. = 1 st. ; 28 lb. = 1 Tod ; 20 lb. = 1 Score ; 12 Score or 240 lb. = 1 Pack.

Worsted Yarn.

Wrap, 80 yards ; Hank=560 yards=7 Wraps ; Counts or Numbers are the number of hanks in a lb.

Cotton Wool.

Cotton Wool, Bale variable ; U.S.A. average 477 lb. ; Egyptian, 719 lb. ; East Indian, 396 lb. ; Brazilian, 220 lb.

Cotton Yarn.

Thread = 1½ yards.
Lea, or Skein, skn. = 120 Yards. } Also same
Hank, hk. = 7 Skeins, or Leas. } for Silk.
Spindle, spdl. = 18 Hanks.
Counts=the number of Hanks in 1 lb.
Bundle Hanks, either of 5 lb. or 10 lb.

Reels of Cotton vary from 30 to 1,760 yards, but by the new Act must be marked correctly.
Bundles of Cotton are chiefly made up for export.

An Inch of Rain.

An "inch of rain" means a gallon of water spread over a surface of nearly 2 square feet, or 3,630 cubic feet = 100 tons upon an acre.

Liquid Measure.

The Gill contains 8·665 cubic inches.
The Pint contains 4 gills or 34·660 inches.
Quart = 2 pints = 8 gills.
Gallon = 4 quarts = 32 gills.

| Pin = 4½ Gallons or ⅛ Barrel. | Gals. | Qts. | Pts. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Firkin or Quarter Barrel ..... | 9 | 36 | 72 |
| Anker (10 gallons) ..... | 10 | 40 | 80 |
| Kilderkin, Rundlet, or ½ Barrel | 18 | 72 | 144 |
| Barrel ..... | 36 | 144 | 288 |
| Tierce (42 gallons) ..... | 42 | 168 | 336 |
| Hogshead of Ale (1½ barrels)..... | 54 | 216 | 432 |
| Puncheon ..... | 72 | 288 | 576 |
| Butt of Ale ..... | 108 | 432 | 864 |

Practically, the only measures in use are gallons, quarts, pints, and gills, the others are merely nominal; e.g., the hogshead of 54 gallons, old measure, contains but 52 gallons, 1 quart, 1 pint, and 3·55 gills imperial measure; and of wine six nominal quart bottles go to the gallon. Of wines imported in casks the following are the usual measurements:—

Pipe of Port or Masdeu ..... = 115 gallons.
,, Teneriffe ..... = 100 ,,
,, Marsala ..... = 93 ,,
,, Madeira and Cape ..... = 92 ,, ,, Sherry and Tent ..... = 108 ,, Butt of Lisbon and Bucellas..... = 117 ,, Aum of Hock and Rhenish ..... = 30 ,,
Hogshead of Claret, 46; Port, 57; Sherry, 54; Madeira, 46 gallons.

In the United States the old British or "Winchester" wine gallon of 231 cubic inches is in use; the names of measures are the same, but the capacity of the gill is only 7·21875 cubic inches.

Apothecaries' Fluid Measure.

| | | Marked |
|---|---|---|
| 60 Minims ♏ (drops) | = 1 Fluid Drachm | f ʒ |
| 8 Drachms | = 1 Ounce | f ℥ |
| 20 Ounces | = 1 Pint | O |
| 8 Pints | = 1 Gallon | C., or Cong. |

1 Drachm = 1 Tea-spoonful. 2 Drachms = 1 Dessert-spuful. 4 Drachms = 1 Table-spoonful. 2 Ounces = 1 Wineglassful. 3 Ounces = 1 Teacupful. Prescribing medicine by the spoon, glass or cupful is unsafe, as all those vessels vary in size. Graduated glass measures may be purchased for a few pence.

Dry or Corn Measure.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Quart | = 2 Pints. | Strike | = 2 Bushels. |
| Pottle | = 2 Quarts. | Coomb | = 4 Bushels. |
| Gallon | = 4 Quarts. | Quarter | = 8 Bushels. |
| Peck | = 2 Gallons. | Load | = 5 Quarters. |
| Bushel | = 4 Pecks. | Last | = 10 Quarters. |

Boll of Meal = 140 lb.; 2 Bolls = 1 Sack.

Wheat and other cereals are commonly sold by weight, the bushel being thus reckoned:—

Wheat, English, 63 lb. Foreign, 62 lb.
Barley, English, 52 and 56 lb. French, 52½ lb.
Mediterranean, 50 lb.
Oats, English, 40 & 42 lb. Foreign, 38 & 40 lb.
Rye and Maize, 60 lb.
Buckwheat, 52 lb. to the bushel.

Grain of all kinds is frequently sold by the stone of 14 lb.

Coals were formerly sold by measure: 3 heaped bushels = 1 sack, 12 sacks = 1 chaldron. Coke, apples, potatoes, and some other goods are still sold by heaped measures and the sack of three bushels; of coke, four bushels are usual.

Fruit.—The Covent Garden bushel basket is 17½ inches in diameter at top, 10 inches at the bottom, and is 10 inches deep. The smaller market baskets are said to vary in size according to the season and the supply.

Cubic or Solid Measure.

Cubic Foot ..... = 1,728 Cubic Inches.
Cubic Yard ..... = 27 Cubic Feet, 21·033 bushels.
Stack of Wood... = 108 Cubic Feet.
Shipping Ton ... = 40 Cubic Feet merchandise.
Shipping Ton ... = 42 Cubic Feet of Timber.
Ton of displacement of a Ship = 35 Cubic Feet.

Measures of Length.

Mile Geographical, Admiralty Knot, or Nautical Mile, 6,080 Feet = 1013⅓ fathoms = 1·15 Mile Statute.
League = 3 Miles.
Degree = 60 Geographical, or 69·121 Statute Miles.
Inch, in. ..... = 72 Points, or 12 Lines.
Nail, ¼ ..... = 2¼ Inches.
Palm ..... = 3 Inches.
Hand ..... = 4 Inches.
Link ..... = 7·92 Inches.
Quarter (or a Span) = 9 Inches.
Foot ..... = 12 Inches.
Cubit ..... = 18 Inches.
Yard ..... = 36 Inches.
Pace, Military ..... = 2 Feet 6 Inches.
Pace, Geometrical.. = 5 Feet.
Fathom ..... = 6 Feet.
Rod, Pole, or Perch = 5½ yards.
Chain (100 Links) ... = 22 Yards (4 Poles).
Cable's Length ..... = 100 Fathoms, 600 Feet.
Furlong ..... = 40 Rods, 220 Yards.
Mile ..... = 8 Furlongs, 80 Chains, 320 Rods, 880 Fathoms, 1,760 Yards, 5,280 Feet, 63,360 Inches.

Although no longer sold by that measure, Calicos, &c., are sometimes said to be "Ell wide"—the English Ell being 1¼ yard, the Flemish Ell ¾ yard, and the French Ell 1½ yard.

The old Scottish Mile was 5,920 feet; ten Scots Miles being about equal to 11¼ Statute Miles. Irish Mile is 6,720 feet; eleven Irish Miles being equal to 14 Statute Miles.

Square, Surface, or Land Measure.

The Square Foot contains 144 Square Inches.
Yard = 9 feet = 1,296 inches.
Rod, Pole, or Perch = 30¼ yards = 272¼ feet.
Chain = 16 rods = 484 yards = 4,356 feet.
Rood = 40 rods = 1,210 yards = 10,890 feet.
Acre = 4 roods = 160 rods = 4,840 yards.
Yard of Land = 30 acres = 120 roods.
Hide = 100 acres = 400 roods.
Mile = 640 acres = 2,560 roods = 6,400 chains = 102,400 rods, poles, or perches, or 3,097,600 square yards.

An Acre roughly stated has four equal sides of 69½ yards; accurate measurement gives each side 208·71 feet.

The sides of a square half-acre would be 147·581 feet, and of a square quarter-acre, 104·355 feet.

The above Imperial Measure is now employed in the United Kingdom, in Canada, Australia, and the Colonies generally, also in the United States; but occasionally some older measurements are referred to. Of these—

The Lancashire and Irish Acre, each of 160 perches, contain 7,840 sq. yards, equal to 1·618835 Statute. 1 Statute = 0·617347 Lancashire or Irish.

The Cheshire Acre of 160 perches, each containing 64 square yards = 10,240 square yards.

The Cunningham Acre, equal to 1·291322 Statute; or 1 Statute Acre is equal to 0·7744 Cunningham.

The Scottish Acre = 1·261283 Statute (nearly 6,104 square yards).

Measures of Time.

60 Seconds ..... = 1 Minute.
60 Minutes ..... = 1 Hour.
24 Hours ..... = 1 Day.
(23*h.* 56*m.* 4*s.* = 1 Sidereal Day.)
7 Days ..... = 1 Week.
28 Days ..... = 1 Lunar Month.
28, 29, 30, or 31 Days ..... = 1 Calendar Month.
12 Calendar Months ..... = 1 Year.
365¼ Days ..... = 1 Common Year,
366 Days ..... = 1 Leap Year.
365*d.* 5*h.* 48*m.* 46*s.* ..... = 1 Tropical Year.

The Astronomical Day commences at noon, and is computed from 1 to 24 hours.

In 400 years 97 are Leap-years and 303 common, Leap-year being omitted every 100th year, but not omitted every 400th. (1900 was not a Leap year.)

Angular Measure.

60 Seconds "..... = 1 Minute.
60 Minutes '..... = 1 Degree.
30 Degrees° ..... = 1 Sign.
90 Degrees° ..... = 1 Quadrant.
4 Quadrants, or 360° ... = 1 Circumference, or Circle.

The Earth rotates at a velocity of 15 degrees an hour (about 17·366 miles a minute at the Equator); 1° is therefore equal to 4 minutes.

Circular Measure.

Diameter of a Circle × 3·1416 gives Circumference.
Diameter Squared × ·7854 gives Area of Circle.
Diameter Squared × 3·1416 gives Surface of Sphere.
Diameter Cubed × ·5236 gives Solidity of Sphere.
One Degree of Circumference × 57·3 gives Radius.
Diameter of Cylinder × 3·1416, and product by its length, gives the Surface.
Diameter Squared × ·7854, and product by the length, gives Solid Contents.

A Circular Acre is 235·504 feet, a Circular Rood 117·752 feet in diameter. The Circumference of the Globe is about 24,855 miles, and the Diameter about 7,900 miles.

Electrical Measures.

It is customary among electricians to express all measurements in terms of the centimeter, gramme, second (C.G.S.) system, either as force or work according to their nature, and, due allowance being made for the effect of gravitation, these units are called "absolute"; but it is fair to mention that the accuracy aimed at has not, and probably never will be, attained.

For practical and commercial purposes the chief units are the—

| | For the measure of |
|---|---|
| VOLT..... | Electromotive force = about 92·6% of that given by one Daniell's battery cell. |
| OHM ..... | Resistance = the resistance offered to the passage of a current of electricity by a thread of mercury 106 cm. long and 1 mm. cross section at the temperature of melting ice. |
| AMPÈRE ..... | Current = the current 1 volt will drive through 1 ohm. |
| COULOMB..... | Quantity = 1 ampère flowing for 1 second of time. |
| MICROFARAD | Capacity = ·000,001 coulomb at 1 volt pressure. |
| WATT ..... | Power = 44 ft. lb. per minute. |

Board of Trade Unit = 1,000 watts 1 hour.
746 watts = 1 horse-power.

In incandescent lamps of 16-candle power (nominal) about four watts are required per candle power to give good economical results for domestic purposes.

One Board of Trade unit will keep a 16-candle incandescent lamp alight for about 16 hours.

Fish Measure.

Herrings are sold by the Cran, containing 37½ imperial gallons or Half Cran of 18¾ imperial gallons (or Barrel, for white herrings, of 26⅔ imperial gallons) on the East Coast of Scotland from Shetland to Berwick, also at Castle Bay and Stornoway; but on the West Coast, Isle of Man, and in Ireland, by the Maze, which contains 5 long hundreds of 123 each. On the East coast of England they are sold by the Last, which contains 13,200 fish. They are counted by the Warp, which is 4. 33 Warps = 1 Long Hundred. 132; 10 Hundred = 1 Thousand, 1,320; 10 Thousand = 1 Last, 13,200.

Timber and Wood.

40 cubic feet rough, 50 cubic feet squared = 1 load.
50 cubic feet of planks = 1 load.
100 superficial feet = 1 square of flooring.
120 Deals = 100.
Width of Battens, 7 inches; Deals, 9 inches; Planks are 2 to 4 inches thick, and 10 or 11 inches wide. A Cord of Wood is 2½ tons, or 125 cubic feet.

Carpenters', Bricklayers', and Builders' Measurements.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Stock or kiln bricks ..... | 8¾ inches | × 4¼ × 2¾ |
| Welsh fire-bricks..... | 9 ,, | × 4½ × 2¾ |
| Paving bricks ..... | 9 ,, | × 4½ × 1¾ |
| Square tiles ..... | 9¾ ,, | × 9¾ × 1 |
| ,, ..... | 6 ,, | × 6 × 1 |
| Dutch clinker bricks ..... | 9¼ ,, | × 3 × 1½ |

A Rod of Brickwork 16½ feet × 16½ feet × 1½ brick thick = 306 cubic feet, or 11⅓ cubic yards, and contains about 4,500 bricks with about 75 cubic feet of mortar.

A Square of Flooring is 100 square feet.

A Piece of Wall Paper is 12 yd. long × 21 in. wide (English), and 9 yd. × 18 in. (French).

Ordinary bricks weigh about 7 lb. each; a load of 500 weighs over 1½ ton.

Sizes of Slates.

Water.

Cubic inch..... = ·0361 lb.
Gallon..... = 10·0000 ,,
Cubic foot = 62·321 lb. or 6·2321 gallons.
35·943 cubic feet (224 gallons) = 1 ton.

The gallon is = 277·274 cubic inches, = 0·160595 cubic feet, = 10 lb. distilled water.

Water for Ships: Ton, 210 gals., Butt 110, Puncheon 72, Barrel 36, Kilderkin 18.

Cisterns: 1 cubic foot is equal to about 6¼ gallons, or 62·321 lb. A cistern 4 feet by 2½ and 3 deep will hold about 187 gallons, and weigh nearly 16 cwt. in addition to its own weight.

EXAMPLE 1.—What is the present value of a Lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £100, interest being reckoned at 4 per cent.? ANSWER:—19·14 years' purchase, or £1,914.

EXAMPLE 2.—A man, aged 54, in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £100 a year net, wishes to commute that for a present payment, interest being reckoned at 5 per cent. How much will he receive? ANSWER:—Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (p. 376), it will be seen that the expectation for age 54 is about 17 years; and from the above table an annuity certain for 17 years, interest at 5 per cent., is worth 11·27 years' purchase. The present payment required would therefore be £1,127 approximately.

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate. The values of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age, when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest, are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example.

A quire of paper contains 24 perfect sheets; an outside quire 20, some of which may be torn.

ALL Founders' cast their type nearly to one uniform height, though the letters may vary considerably in their breadth.

The type chiefly used in this Almanack is named Nonpareil. The column contains 75 lines, and is, technically, 12 Pica ems wide; on an average every column actually contains about 3,000 letters. The compositor in making out his bill reckons that the column contains so many (1,800) ems; he then, doubling that number, charges as so many (3,600) ens.

A very minute type, used only occasionally, is:—

Brilliant. A column the size of this in the Almanack if set in Brilliant would contain 124 lines, and about 7,500 letters.

Printing is the art of producing impressions, from characters or figures.

Diamond is the next size; the column would contain 107 lines, and about 6,000 letters.

By reason of the new system of aggregation imposed by the Finance Act, 1900, new rates of duty have in certain circumstances been created, viz.:—½, 1½, 2½, and 3½ per cent.

In calculating duty the net value of an estate where the death occurred between 2nd August, 1894, and 30th June, 1896, is raised to the next complete £10; on deaths after that date until the 8th April, 1900, any fraction of £100 is ignored, such adjusted value determining both the rate and amount of duty. On deaths on and after 9th of April, 1900, the rate and amount of duty is calculated on the exact net value.

Gifts made by the deceased within a twelvemonth of death are subject to aggregation with the rest of the estate.

In addition to the above, where property liable to Estate Duty is settled by the will of the deceased, or having been settled by some other disposition which took effect since 1 Aug., 1894, passes under that disposition on the death of the deceased to some person not competent to dispose thereof, a further duty (Settlement Estate Duty) is payable at the rate of £1 per cent. on the Settled property, but from that payment the ad valorem stamp duty charged on the settlement may be deducted.

But where the net value of the property, real and personal, does not exceed £1,000, Estate Duty only is payable, and the property is exempt from Settlement Estate Duty, and from Legacy or Succession Duties.

|---|---|---|---|
| Small estates up to £300 and £500 gross are charged, at the option of the accounting parties, either by the preceding scale or with fixed duties of 30s. and 50s., and are exempt from all other death duties. | | | |
| Where the net value exceeds £100, but does not exceed £200, the ad valorem duty amounts to £1 only, provided that the death occurred on or after 1st July, 1896, and before 9th April, 1900. | | | |
| Interest at 3 per cent. per annum is also payable on the Estate Duty on personalty from the date of the death up to that of delivery of the affidavit or account. | | | |
| The Estate Duty on real property may be paid, if desired, by eight yearly or sixteen half-yearly instalments, and that on certain annuities may at option be paid in four yearly instalments, and 3 per cent. interest is charged on all unpaid portions of duty in these cases from twelve months after death. | | | |

LEGACY AND SUCCESSION DUTIES:—Also see "Estate Duty."

If the deceased died on or after the 1st June, 1881, every pecuniary Legacy or Residue, or share of Residue, although not of the amount or value of £20, is chargeable with Duty by the 44 Vict. c. 12, s. 42.—Except in the cases of small estates, see note to Estate Duty.

No succession duty is payable where the principal value of all the successions on the same death does not amount to £100 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 51, s. 18).

Rates of duties payable on legacies, annuities, and residues (£1 per cent. Legacy Duty practically abolished since 1881), and of Succession Duties where deceased died before 1st July, 1888, or where Estate Duty, Finance Act, 1894, is payable (in which latter case 1 per cent. is also practically abolished).

To Children of the Deceased, or their Descendants, or to the Father or Mother or other Lineal Ancestor of the Deceased (see above) ..... £1 per cent.

To Brothers and Sisters of the Deceased, or their Descendants ..... £3 per cent.

To Brothers and Sisters of the Father or Mother of the Deceased, or their Descendants ..... £5 per cent.

To Brothers and Sisters of the Grandfather or Grandmother of the Deceased, or their Descendants ..... £6 per cent.

To any Person in any other degree of collateral Consanguinity, or to a Stranger in Blood to the Deceased ..... £10 per cent.

Where deceased died on or after 1 July, 1888, and Probate or Estate Duty is not payable, Succession Duties for the relationships above are at rates of 1½, 4½, 6½, 7½, and 11½ respectively.

The Husband or Wife is chargeable with Estate Duty, but not Legacy or Succession Duty; and the Husband or Wife of a relation is chargeable at the rate at which the relation would be charged.

Penalties.—Persons paying or receiving any Legacy, Residue, or Share of Residue liable to Duty, without taking or signing the proper Receipt for the same; persons not giving notice of a succession, or not delivering an account, are subject to certain Penalties.

THE BANKERS' CLEARING-HOUSE.

THE BANKERS' CLEARING-HOUSE, in Post Office Court, Lombard Street, is the medium through which Bankers obtain the amount of Cheques and Bills in their hands for collection from other Bankers. The amount passing through this channel is enormous. The total for the year ending December 31st, 1905, was £12,288,000,000, an increase of £1,724,000,000 as compared with the year 1904, and the largest amount yet recorded. On Stock Exchange days the payments were £2,071,000,000, an increase of £534,000,000 on the year 1904. The payments on Consols account days for the same period amounted to £639,000,000, an increase of £42,000,000 as compared with 1904, and on the 4ths of the months the payments for 1905 amounted to £497,000,000, an increase of £52,000,000 as compared with 1904. The establishment is managed by a Committee of Bankers—Chairman, The Rt. Hon. Lord Avebury, F.R.S.; Deputy Chairman, Sir Felix O. Schuster, Bart.; Hon. Sec., R. Martin Holland; Acting Managers, Philip W. Matthews (Chief Inspector); Arthur E. Salt (Deputy Inspector.)

Newspapers.

The charge is ½*d.* for the inland transmission of any daily or weekly registered newspaper, the weight being disregarded. If more than one paper be included in a packet, the charge is as by an insufficiently paid letter, or transferred to the Parcel Post, whichever charge is the lower, with a fine of 1*d.* in addition to any deficient postage.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

Letters.

NATURE AND WEIGHT.—There is no limit except as to size, and anything may be sent by letter post (except explosive, offensive or obscene matter). The weight is unlimited. Maximum length 2 ft.; width 1 ft.; depth 1 ft. (These limits do not apply to official letters.)

CONVEYANCE OF SINGLE LETTERS BY RAIL.—On payment of 2*d.* to a servant of the railway, in addition to postage at the ordinary rate, Inland letters not exceeding 4 oz. may be forwarded by the next available train or steamship by those companies in agreement with the Post Office, to be called for at the station to which the letter is addressed, or to be transferred thence to the nearest letter-box for postal delivery. The letter must be taken to a passenger station of the railway company. Railway letters may be handed in at any express delivery post office for immediate conveyance to the railway station by special messenger on payment of the express fee of 3*d.* per mile.

EXPRESS DELIVERY SERVICE.—There are three systems by which any article (except those of a dangerous or offensive nature) may be specially delivered:—(1) By special messenger all the way, on week-days only (charge, which must be prepaid, 3*d.* per mile, or part of a mile, inclusive of all charges, but with special charges for bulky or heavy packages and for long distances where no ordinary vehicle plies). (2) By special messenger after transmission by post (charge 3*d.* as before, exclusive of postage, with special charges as before). (3) In advance of the ordinary deliveries at the request of addressee (3*d.* per mile for one packet, and 1*d.* for every ten or less additional packets). For (1), packets must be handed over the counter with "Express Delivery" clearly marked in left-hand top corner. For (2), may be handed in or, if not to be registered, may be posted, and must be clearly marked as before. No Express Delivery on Sundays (except certain letters specially marked and paid for), Good Friday (except in Scotland), and Christmas Day.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL and for the re-direction of letters must be given on printed forms, to be obtained from the local postmaster or from postmen. A separate form must be filled in for parcels. The notice holds good for twelve months, and may be extended by payment of 1*s.* for second and third and 5*s.* for subsequent years.

RE-DIRECTION.—Letters may be re-posted not later than the day after delivery (Sundays and public holidays not being counted), and must not previous to re-direction and posting be opened or tampered with. If re-posted later a charge will be made at the prepaid rate; if opened or tampered with, at the unpaid rate.

REGISTRATION.—Registered letters and parcels must be handed to an agent of the Post Office, and a receipt taken. By prepayment of a fee of 2*d.* in addition to the postage and registration fee, the sender of a registered letter may obtain an acknowledgment of its due delivery. The latest time for registering for the night mails is usually half an hour before the box closes for letters; in the case of parcels, half an hour before the latest time for posting ordinary parcels. If an inland packet marked "Registered" be put in a letter-box it will be liable on delivery to a charge of 4*d.*, less any amount prepaid for registration. The fees for registration and the limits of compensation are as follows:—Fee 2*d.*, compensation £5; 3*d.*, £20; 4*d.*, £40; 5*d.*, £60; 6*d.*, £80; 7*d.*, £100; 8*d.*, £120; 9*d.*, £140; 10*d.*, £160; 11*d.*, £180; 1*s.*, £200; 1*s.* 1*d.*, £220; 1*s.* 2*d.*, £240, and so on, to 1*s.* 10*d.* £400. These fees include the ordinary registration fee of 2*d.* The highest amount of compensation obtainable for any one packet is £400. Compensation in respect of money of any kind (coin, notes, orders, cheques, stamps, &c.) will only be given in those cases in which the money is enclosed in one of the Registered Letter envelopes sold by the Post Office and the packet is tendered for transmission by Registered Letter Post. The compensation given in respect of coin will in no case exceed £5. Compensation for damage to a packet sent by Registered Letter Post will only be given in those cases in which the packet is conspicuously marked with the words "Fragile, with Care."

DISPOSAL OF UNDELIVERED letters, packets, post cards, and parcels.—Inland letters undelivered, bearing full name and address of sender, are returned unopened; others are opened and returned if possible to senders, a registration fee of 2*d.* being charged should anything of value be inside. If without an address, and containing nothing of value, they are at once destroyed. Undelivered foreign letters are returned, unopened, after a short detention, to the countries whence received. If senders of ½*d.* packets place a request for their return, in the upper left-hand corner of the outside cover, in case of non-delivery, a second postage is charged the sender on their return, otherwise they are disposed of at the Head Office. If an undelivered parcel bears on the cover the name and address of the sender, it is retained at the Head Post Office of the District, and a printed notice is sent thence to him by post, informing him that the parcel (if not claimed in the meantime by the addressee) will be given up to him or to any person whom he may direct to call for it at that office, or will be returned to him by post, or will be re-directed to a fresh address. If the sender wishes to have the parcel re-directed, or sent back to him by post, he must return the printed notice with the necessary instructions, and, except when re-direction is free, with stamps to the amount of a fresh postage at the full rate, and of any other charges to which the parcel may be liable. The parcel is then forwarded. If no satisfactory reply is received within six days after the date of the notice the parcel is sent to the Returned Letter Office of the District. For re-issue by post from a Returned Letter Office a second postage is invariably charged. If a parcel which cannot be delivered does not bear on the cover the name and address of the sender it is sent to the Returned Letter Office of the District, where it is opened and examined. If the name and address of the sender are ascertained, the course described above is followed. If the name and address of the sender cannot be ascertained from the examination of the parcel, the name of the addressee of the parcel and the post office at which it was posted are entered on a list, which is exhibited at the Returned Letter Office, where personal application can be made. In default of proper application and payment of charges, undelivered parcels are liable to be disposed of three months after the date of arrival at the Returned Letter Office. Perishable parcels will be dealt with as may be requisite. Inquiries for missing letters, &c., should be made at the Secretary's office, G.P.O. (North), St. Martin's-le-Grand, between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.; Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. The Returned Letter Office is at Mount Pleasant, E.C.

POSTE RESTANTE (solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers).—Letters and parcels may be addressed to the Poste Restante at every Head Post Office in the United Kingdom and to all Branch Post Offices in London. Letters or parcels to be called for should have the words "Poste Restante" included in the address. No initials, or fictitious names, or Christian name only, will be taken in, but are at once sent to the Returned Letter Office for disposal; and all persons applying for "Poste Restante" letters must be able to say from what place or district such letters are expected, and must prove their identity. Foreigners must produce their passports. Poste Restante letters from abroad are not kept more than two months; at Provincial Post Offices only one month; letters posted in London, for one fortnight. After these intervals they are sent up to the Returned Letter Office. When, however, letters addressed "To be called for" bear a request for their return within a specified time, if not delivered, they are dealt with in accordance with such request.

SOLDIERS' AND SEAMEN'S LETTERS.—Letters to or from non-commissioned officers, private soldiers and seamen serving abroad, the Cape Mounted Rifles, and enrolled pensioners in Canada, not exceeding ½ oz., are forwarded for 1d*. If posted for a place abroad unpaid, or insufficiently paid, or the description of the soldier, &c., be not given, it will be detained and returned to sender for payment of the postage.

UNPAID AND UNDERPAID LETTERS.—If the postage of letters, books, or newspapers be not paid in advance, double postage will be demanded on delivery; and if the postage be insufficient, double the deficiency will be charged.

Halfpenny Packets.

Packets not exceeding 2 oz. in weight may be sent for ½*d.*; if exceeding 2 oz. they pass unconditionally at the letter rate. The limits of length, width, and depth are the same as those of letters.

Any matter wholly printed on paper (paper sent as stationery not admissible), books and periodicals, manuscript, invoices, deeds and agreements, circulars produced in identical terms by any mechanical process (but not to include typewriting or imitations thereof), prints or photographs (when not on glass, or in cases containing glass, or any like substance), together with the legitimate binding or mounting, and anything necessary for safe transmission. The packet must be open at the ends, but may be tied with string, or in an unfastened envelope, or cover easily removed, and must contain no communication in the nature of a letter.

RE-DIRECTION AND UNDER-PAYMENT.—See "Letters."

Newspapers.

WEIGHT.—Not over 5 lb. in weight, 2 ft. in length, or 1 ft. in width or depth. No writing in the nature of a letter is permitted, but the wrapper may bear the name and address of the sender, and a reference to any page of its contents to which it is desired to draw attention.

Parcels.

REGULATIONS.—The limit of weight is 11 lb. The parcel must not be more than 3 ft. 6 in. in length, or greatest length and girth combined, 6 ft.; marked in the left-hand top corner "Parcel Post" and handed across the counter of the receiving houses or given to a rural postman. It must not be posted in a letter-box, and the postage must be prepaid by stamps, affixed by the sender. The hours for Parcel Post business are the same as for general postal business. The name and address of sender should be on the outside of every parcel. A greater weight than 11 lb. must not be accepted from one person by a rural postman on foot, or 21 lb. by a mounted postman, unless he shall have received notice on the day previous that a greater weight would be sent; and either of them may refuse parcels if already loaded.

Particulars as to collection of parcels from sender and for prepayment of postage in money will be furnished on application to post office.

Parcels left "to be called for" are charged 1d.* a day after they have lain in the office one clear day, the maximum charge being 1s.* 5d.*

Parcels addressed to, or sent from, the Channel Islands are liable to customs duty, and the sender must make a declaration of contents at the office of posting. Parcels for the Isle of Man are treated as those for the British Isles generally.

No parcels are received on Sundays, Christmas Day, or (except in Scotland) Good Friday. For Bank Holidays, see page 380.

COMPENSATION.—Compensation to the amount of £2 can be claimed on unregistered parcels for loss or damage. To secure compensation where no insurance fee is paid, a certificate of posting should be filled up and handed in for the signature of the post-office official. The insurance fee in stamps can be paid only at a post office.

No compensation will be granted for loss or damage of parcels containing money, watches, or jewellery, unless registered, or for damage done to a fragile or perishable article.

REGISTRATION.—See "Letters."

RE-DIRECTION.—Parcels may be re-directed free of charge if the original address and the corrected address are both in a delivery from the same office, otherwise they are charged again at the ordinary prepaid rate.

STAMPS, ENVELOPES, POST CARDS, &c.

Stamps.

POSTAGE STAMPS (used also for receipts, telegrams, and certain Inland Revenue duties up to 2*s.* 6*d.*—for list of latter see p. 456) are sold of the respective values of ½*d.*, 1*d.*, 1½*d.*, 2*d.*, 2½*d.*, 3*d.*, 4*d.*, 5*d.*, 6*d.*, 9*d.*, 10*d.*, 1*s.*, 2*s.* 6*d.*, 5*s.*, 10*s.* and 20*s.* Books of 24 1*d.* stamps 2*s.* 0½*d.* These may be purchased at most offices between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., and at any office during the hours that attendance is given for telegraph business. Rural postmen are authorised to sell ½*d.* and 1*d.* stamps and registered letter envelopes.

Embossed or impressed postage stamps cut out of envelopes, postcards, letter-cards, newspaper wrappers, or telegram forms may be used as adhesive stamps in payment of postage provided they are not imperfect, mutilated, or defaced in any way. Embossed or impressed Inland Revenue stamps cannot be used in payment of postage, and stamps indicating the payment of a registration fee may only be used for registered correspondence.

Spoiled Stamps.

Payment of postage cannot be made by means of imperfect or defaced postage stamps. Stamps are considered defaced when marked on the face with any written, printed, or stamped characters. Stamps may, however, be perforated with initials or other identifying mark.

Applications for the recovery of the value of spoiled or unused stamps, whether postage or revenue, can be made to the Postmaster at most large Post Offices in the provinces.

Envelopes.

EMBOSSED ENVELOPES.—Embossed Halfpenny Envelopes are in two sizes—Commercial, in packets of 16 for 9*d.*, and Foolscap, 10 for 6*d.*; they are also sold singly. Penny Envelopes of the following sizes are kept in stock:—A, 4¾ × 3⅛, in packets of 20 for 1*s.* 10*d.*; C, 5⅝ × 3½, 16 for 1*s.* 5*d.*, and 240 for 21*s.* 3*d.*; and Foolscap, 9×4, 16 for 1*s.* 6*d.* and 20 for 1*s.* 10½*d.*

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES, for foreign and inland letters, bearing a threepenny stamp embossed on the flap for the payment of the registration 2*d.* and postage 1*d.*, are of five sizes, and are sold: F, 5¼ in. × 3¾ in., 3½*d.* each, or 12 for 3*s.* 3*d.*; G, 6 in. × 3 ¾ in., 3½*d.* each, or 12 for 3*s.* 4*d.*; H, 8 in. × 5 in., H², 9 in. × 4 in., 3¾*d.* each, or 12 for 3*s.* 9*d.*; K, 11½ in. × 6 in., 4*d.* each, or 12 for 4*s.*

Letter Cards.

LETTER CARDS are sold thus:—1 for 1¼*d.*, and 8 for 9*d.*, also in packets of 96 for 9*s.*

Post Cards.

POST CARDS impressed with a halfpenny stamp are sold at the rate of 10 for 5½*d.*, or 11*s.* per parcel of 240; a thicker quality being 11 for 6*d.*, or 5*s.* per parcel of 100. Reply Post Cards are about double the rates for single cards.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN POST CARDS are supplied in packets of 10, price 10*d.*; singly, 1*d.*—for reply, 2*d.* each.

PRIVATE CARDS bearing an adhesive ½*d.* stamp, and corresponding as nearly as possible to the size and weight of official cards, may be used. They are also admissible for foreign and colonial post provided they have "Post Card" printed on them and are in conformity with the official cards in size and weight.

Wrappers.

WRAPPERS bearing a halfpenny stamp may be had at ¼*d.* each or 7 for 4*d.*; 5*s.* 8½*d.* per packet of 120. With a penny stamp the price is, singly 1¼*d.*, or 4 for 4¼*d.*; 3*s.* 6½*d.* per parcel of 40.

LONDON POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.

FOR the purpose of facilitating the collection and delivery of letters, the Metropolis is divided into eight districts, marked:—

| | |
|---|---|
| East Central (E.C.) | South Eastern (S.E.) |
| Eastern (E.) | South Western (S.W.) |
| Northern (N.) | Western (W.) |
| North Western (N.W.) | West Central (W.C.) |

FOR THE COUNTRY AND ABROAD.—Letters and cards to go the same evening should be posted at chief district offices, branch offices, receiving houses, and pillar boxes before 6; in suburban places, half an hour to an hour and a half earlier.

LATE FEE LETTERS.—Inland letters and post cards bearing an extra ½*d.* stamp are forwarded by the night mails if posted at the town branch offices and receiving houses before 7 p.m., and at Mount Pleasant before 7.45, or at St. Martin's-le-Grand before 7.30. At certain district offices the hour for posting with the late fee is 7.30 and 8, when the letters are to go from the railways in their immediate neighbourhoods. Letters having an extra ½*d.* stamp may also be posted at the sorting carriage or platform barrier at the various railway termini up to the time of the departure of the train bearing the mails, varying from 5.15 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Foreign letters with an extra 1*d.* stamp may be posted in the E.C. District and at Metropolitan District Offices at times varying with the despatch of the mails; with an extra 2*d.* prepaid the time is extended.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN POST.

Letters.

The charge for letters throughout the British Empire is 1*d.* the half-ounce (in 1907 the rate will be 1*d.* per ounce), except to a few small islands, to which the charge is 2½*d.* (in 1907 the charge will be 2½*d.* for the first ounce and 1½*d.* per ounce afterwards).

The charge to all foreign countries is 2½*d.* the half-ounce (in 1907 the charge will be 2½*d.* for the first ounce and 1½*d.* per ounce afterwards).

Post Cards.

The rate to all places to which Post Cards are available is 1*d.* single, 2*d.* return. (See col. 1.)

 In addition to the concessions foreshadowed above, it will be possible to prepay the reply to a foreign or colonial letter, and writing will not be prohibited on the address side of foreign post-cards.

Books, Newspapers, Samples, &c.

NEWSPAPERS, BOOKS, PRINTED PAPERS, &c., ½*d.* per 2 oz.

PATTERNS AND SAMPLES, ½*d.* per 2 oz.; but with a minimum charge of 1*d.*

COMMERCIAL PAPERS, MSS., &c., ½*d.* per 2 oz.; but with a minimum charge of 2½*d.*

The limits of size to British Possessions or non-Union countries* are—length 2 ft., width or depth 1 ft., and must not exceed 5 lb. in weight. To countries in the Postal Union the length is limited to 18 in.; weight not to exceed 4 lb. If in the form of a roll, the limits of size in either case are 30 in. in length and 4 in. in diameter.

The above-named rates should in all cases be prepaid; no packet can be sent forward wholly unpaid, but, if by inadvertence the postage is insufficiently prepaid, double the deficit will be charged on delivery.

Foreign and Colonial Parcels.

The rules and regulations to be observed are similar to those relating to inland parcels, with the addition that every parcel must have a customs declaration respecting the contents. This must be on a form obtainable at any Post Office. The sender may arrange to prepay all charges to certain British possessions and foreign countries by paying a fee of 6*d.*, making a deposit of 1*s.* for each 10*s.* value of the parcel, and signing an undertaking to pay all Customs and other charges on demand; otherwise they are collected on delivery. Certain articles are prohibited; among them letters nearly everywhere; gold, silver, jewellery, and firearms to many places; opium to Hong Kong, Siam, and India; and pork and bacon to some places.

British Colonial Rates.

The "triple system" of 3 lb. 1*s.*, 7 lb. 2*s.*, and 11 lb. 3*s.*, is charged to the following Colonies, viz., India and Aden (or vid Italy, 3 lb. 2*s.*, 7 lb. 3*s.*, 11 lb. 4*s.*):—Ascension, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, Brit. East Africa, Brit. Guiana, Brit. Honduras, Brit. Parcels sent to the U.S. by the semi-official service are insurable at at about double the above rates.

MONEY AND POSTAL ORDERS.

Inland Ordinary Money Orders.

The highest amount granted in one order is limited to £40. The commission charged is for sums not exceeding £1, 2*d.*; £3, 3*d.*; £10, 4*d*; £20, 6*d.*; £30, 8*d.*; £40, 10*d.* No order may contain a fractional part of 1*d.*

Money orders will under no circumstances be paid on the day of issue. The rules and regulations are on the forms issued.

The Chief Money Order Office is at 144A Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

Inland Telegraph Money Orders.

Money may be transmitted by Telegraph Money Order from any Money Order office in the United Kingdom which is also a despatching office for telegrams, and may be made payable at any Money Order office which is also an office for the delivery of telegrams.

Commission at the same rate as for Ordinary Inland Money Orders, plus supplementary fee of 2*d.*, and cost of official Telegram of Advice. If the order is to be delivered at payee's address any charge for porterage must be prepaid.

Postal Orders.

Postal Orders are issued and paid at all Money Order offices in the United Kingdom during the ordinary hours of business on week days. They are also issued and paid in certain Colonies (excluding Canada, Australia and South Africa) and at the British Agencies at Constantinople, Panama, Salonica and Smyrna. They are issued, but not paid in India and British Guiana. They are issued, with a counterfoil to be retained by the sender, for every 6*d.* up to 19*s.* and for 20*s.* and 21*s.*; those of 6*d.*, 1*s.*, 1*s.* 6*d.*, 2*s.* and 2*s.* 6*d.* at a charge of ½*d.*; of 3*s.*, 3*s.* 6*d.* &c., up to 15*s.*, 1*d.*; those of 15*s.* 6*d.* &c., up to 21*s.*, 1½*d.* They must be presented for payment within 3 months from last day of the month of issue, or a fresh commission will be charged. Stamps (not perforated) to the amount of 5*d.*, but not fractions of 1*d.*, may be affixed to the face of an order.

Foreign and Colonial Ordinary Money Orders.

For sums not exceeding £1, 3*d.*; £2, 6*d.*; £4, 9*d.*; £6, 1*s.*; £8, 1*s.* 3*d.*; £10, 1*s.* 6*d.*, and for countries on which orders may be issued for more than £10, 3*d.* for every additional £2 or portion of £2.

Foreign and Colonial Telegraph Orders.

Commission at same rate as for Ordinary Foreign and Colonial Money Orders, plus supplementary fee of 6*d.*, and cost of official Telegram of Advice.

TELEGRAMS.

Inland.

Inland telegrams may be sent to all parts of the United Kingdom at the rate of 6*d.* for the first twelve words, and one halfpenny for every additional word; stamps in payment to be affixed to the form by the sender. Receipt for charges 1*d.* The address of the receiver is charged for, but not that of the sender when written on the back of the telegram form. Five figures are counted as one word. The charge includes delivery within the town postal limits, or within three miles of a head office—beyond that limit the charge is 3*d.* per mile from the office door. Porterage to be paid by sender. Telegram forms are of two kinds—one issued gratis; the other (A1), embossed with a stamp, may be purchased singly, or in books of 20, interleaved, and with a sheet of carbonic paper, price 10*s.* 2*d.* The usual hours are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

SUNDAY TELEGRAMS.—In most provincial towns the Telegraph Offices are open from 8 to 10 a.m. in England and Ireland; in Scotland from 9 to 10 a.m. In London the following offices are always open:—G.P.O., Central; G.N.R., King's Cross; G.C.R. Marylebone (except 11.30 a.m. to 3.30 p.m.; G.E.R., Liverpool Street and Stratford; London Bridge (S.E. & C.R.), St. Pancras (M.R.), Waterloo and Willesden Stations, and West Strand Post Office. The offices at Birmingham, Bradford (except between midnight Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday), Brighton (except between midnight Saturday and 7 a.m. Sunday), Bristol, Cardiff Docks (ship telegrams not delivered after dark), Derby, Devonport, Dover, Exeter, Falmouth, Holyhead, Hull, Leeds,

* The parcel post with the United States is carried on by means of two distinct services, namely, an official service with the United States Post Office and a semi-official service maintained through the Agency of the American Express Company. The sender of a parcel forwarded by the semi-official service may, without extra charge, direct that a parcel be sent through the New York Custom House in Bond for Customs examination at any one of the "United States Ports of Entry," or Inland Custom Houses. The addressees of such parcels must, however, make arrangements for the delivery of parcels so treated after they have been cleared at the Custom House of the Inland Port of Entry.

Parcels intended to be forwarded in bond must be plainly marked by the sender, "In bond to ," naming the Inland Port of Entry chosen; and the same words must also be written by the sender in the same handwriting on the Customs declaration.

Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Norwich, Nottingham, Penzance, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Sheffield, and Southampton are always open; as also are those at Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, in Scotland; and Belfast, Cork, Dublin, Londonderry, and Queenstown, in Ireland.

Note.—It is usually possible to get a telegram through from an office which is open to one which may, perhaps, be closed for telegraphic business by payment of the following extra fees: 1*s.* for the telegraphist, 1*s.* for the messenger, and 6*d.* an hour for the telegraphist if he has to wait for a reply. In the same way postmasters may accept telegrams after the usual hours on payment of 1*s.* for the postmaster, 1*s.* for the telegraphist, and 1*s.* for a messenger if it be necessary to call the telegraphist.

POST OFFICE TELEPHONES.

London Exchange.—The annual subscription, including one telephone at the subscriber's premises, £5. Within a distance of 2 miles from the subscriber's premises, for each call on any exchange in the county of London, 1*d.*; and on any exchange outside the county of London, 2*d.* For connection with any exchange outside the county of London within 2 miles, annual subscription, £4; 1*d.* for each call on same exchange; 2*d.* on any other exchange. The Call Office Fee, whether for subscribers or others, is 2*d.* The annual subscription for connection with an Exchange within 2 miles of premises with unlimited number of calls is £17.

Provincial Telephone System.—Applications for terms, &c., should be made to the Sec., G.P.O.

Telephone Trunk Lines.—Where the P.O. Telephone Exchanges in different towns are connected by Trunk lines, such lines may be used by local subscribers and the general public at the following rates: 3*d.* for 25 miles, 6*d.* for 50 miles, 9*d.* for 75 miles, 1*s.* for 100 miles, and an additional 6*d.* for every 40 miles over a hundred. Extra charges are levied if the conversation is between a subscriber to the NATIONAL TELEPHONE COMPANY'S System and a subscriber to a P.O. Telephone Exchange as follow: When the Trunk Wire charge does not exceed (for a conversation of 3 minutes) 1*s.* 6*d.*, the fee is 3*d.* more; if 3*s.*, 4*d.* more; and if over 3*s.*, then 6*d.* more for every 3 minutes the wire is occupied. Such fees are not chargeable on calls to or from the Tunbridge Wells or Hull Exchanges. The ordinary time allowed for a conversation on a trunk line is 3 minutes; but by paying a double fee the line may be engaged for the maximum of 6 minutes continuously.

Anglo-French and Anglo-Belgian Telephone.—Telephonic communication may be obtained through Post Office Exchanges or Call Offices from London and certain provincial towns in England to Paris, Brussels, and certain provincial towns in France and Belgium. Fee—8*s.* per conversation of three minutes (10*s.* for Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles and St. Etienne). Two consecutive conversations are permitted. NOTE.—Paris time is 10 minutes in advance of London time, but Greenwich time prevails in Belgium.

SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY ARRANGEMENTS.

At all offices in the PROVINCES which are open on Sunday, postage stamps are sold, and letters may be registered during the time such offices are open. The same regulation applies to CHRISTMAS DAY and GOOD FRIDAY. In LONDON, letters cannot be registered on Sunday, except at certain railway stations, but on Good Friday and Christmas Day postage stamps are sold and letters may be registered at all offices which are open. The hours at which telegraph business is attended to are, as a rule, from 8 to 10 a.m.; but no Money Order, Savings Bank, Insurance, or Annuity Business is transacted on these days, nor in Scotland on Sacramental Fast Days.

BANK HOLIDAYS AND FAST DAYS.—Where Bank Holidays are observed as public holidays, the counters of the head office and branch offices are closed at 12 noon (in some small places they are not even opened) except for telegraph business, the reception of parcels, the sale of postage stamps, and the registration of letters. At no provincial town in England or Ireland is there more than one delivery of letters on Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday; nor in Scotland on Sunday or the Sacramental Fast Days; and any person is at liberty to prevent even this delivery so far as relates to himself.

In London the holiday arrangements are of an exceptional character, and due notice of them is given by means of bills at the various offices.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANKS.

These are established at all Money Order Offices, and are opened for the receipt of deposits during the hours appointed for the sale of stamps, commencing at 8 a.m. Every such office is also open for the payment of withdrawals on week-days during certain hours, which are specified in a notice exhibited at the office.

Deposits can be made from 1*s.* to £50 in one year (ending 31*st* Dec.). When with interest the total exceeds £200, interest is allowed on £200 only. Interest is at 2½ per cent.

ANNUITIES AND LIFE ASSURANCE.—Immediate or deferred annuities from £1 to £100 may be purchased through the Post Office on the life of anyone over 5 years old. These are payable by equal half-yearly instalments. (Jan. 5 and July 5, or April 5 and Oct. 10.)

Life insurances, from £5 to £100, are granted to persons between 14 and 65 years of age. Children between 8 and 14 can be insured for £5.

If the amount of the annuity or insurance purchased is less than £100, further amounts may be bought, until the total sum amounts to £100.

The Post Office Savings Bank is at Blythe Road, West Kensington, W.

The Indian Empire.

The Indian Empire extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King through the Governor-General of India, or through any officer subordinate to him; while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any native prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or any officer subordinate to him (Act 52-3 Vict., c. 63, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government; and within the Indian sphere of influence lie the self-governed States of Afghanistan, Nepal, and Bhutan.

Boundaries and Area.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia from the sea to near Zulfikar on the Harirud; then with the Russian Empire along the frontier laid down by agreement in 1885 as far as the Oxus at Khamiab; thence along the Oxus by the Panjah branch up to the Victoria lake, and from the east end of that lake by the line demarcated in 1895 up to Chinese territory on the Taghdumbash Pamir. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire, mainly along the crests of the Himalayas, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive Islands, Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrein, and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from the 8th to the 37th degree of North latitude, and from the 61st to the 100th degree of longitude East of Greenwich. Calcutta, the capital, lies in 88° E. long. The total area of India is about 1,767,000 square miles, of which 680,000 square miles are under native administration. The British Provinces comprise 51 per cent. of the area, and nearly 79 per cent. of the population, which in 1901 numbered 294,361,056. (For details, see pp. 475–6.)

Physical Features and Products.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga, 28,200 feet, and Dwhalagiri, over 27,000 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush Mountains. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the tropical plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the N.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great Tarai jungle, full of big game and very insalubrious.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. Of these, two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Sang-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus; and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of nearly 1,600 miles, drains almost all the

The principal Government publications relating to India presented to Parliament in 1906 were: Statistical Abstract, 1895–6 to 1904–5; Moral and Material Progress Report, 1904–5; Tables of the Trade of India, 1900–1 to 1904–5; Review of the Trade of India in 1905–6; Sanitary Measures in India, 1904–5; Indian Financial Statement for 1906–7; Home Accounts, 1904–5, with Estimates 1905–6; Explanatory Memorandum regarding the Accounts and Estimates of 1906–7; Return of Net Income and Expenditure, 1894–5 to 1904–5; Administration Report on Railways in India for 1905; Army Administration (Cd. 2718 and 2842); Reconstruction of the Provinces of Bengal and Assam (Cd. 2746); Convention between England and China respecting Tibet (Cd. 3088).

Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after running close along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. There is an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers, each of which is of inestimable value to the country it drains. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the water-carrier and the fertiliser. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. So rich is the Indo-Gangetic plain that a population almost wholly agricultural, of about 50 millions finds support on the soil. The density of the population is extremely high in this region, averaging in the Bengal delta 552 per square mile, and rising in a few districts to 900. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Behar and the United Provinces. In Lower Bengal there are three harvests each year; pulse and various oil-seeds are reaped in April and May, the early rice crop in September, and the main rice crop two or three months later. The delta yields rice, the bamboo, and a large variety of palms. Further north, again, we find wheat, maize, millet, and barley; while to the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, tobacco, and many dyes, drugs, and spices are produced. Jute, opium, tea, and oilseeds swell the exports of India. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India Native States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhya Mountains. The Eastern and Western Ghauts all but complete the triangle of mountain ranges with which this region is surrounded. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghauts, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghauts lie so close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti River; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghauts, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of S. India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by the mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghauts, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak and ebony abound, as also do the blackwood, sandalwood, and bamboo. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The elephant, tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. In the valleys and on the higher plains many crops are raised in profusion, chiefly the same as those grown in the lower basin of the Ganges. Coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and cinchona are cultivated. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern table-land has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are salt, coal, and gold; and the output of the gold-mines of Mysore is steadily increasing.

Burma.—Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irrawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween. The delta region is flat; further inland are hills and rolling downs; while the north is mountainous. Rice is the chief staple. Millet, cotton, sesamum, and tobacco are also grown. The forests, particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports. Petroleum is produced in rapidly increasing quantities, and jade and rubies are mined.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast at the end of May and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which is 80 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, though small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

The People of India.

Population.—The third general census of India was taken on the 1st March, 1901. The enumeration embraced the whole of the Indian Empire, except a few outlying tracts and certain disturbed areas on the frontier. The final census returns gave a population of 294,361,056, as compared with 287,314,671 in 1891 (for details see p. 476). Deducting for purposes of comparison the population of tracts not enumerated in 1891, the increase in the ten years is only about 1½ per cent., as compared with an increase of over 11 per cent. in the previous decade. These statistics show that long-continued famine in Western India, combined with an abnormal prevalence of cholera, plague, and other diseases, had, during the decade, seriously enhanced mortality. The census total of 1901 is divisible into 231,899,507 (or 79 per cent.) for British India, and 62,461,549 (or 21 per cent.) for Native States. India is not over-populated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist.

Languages.—India has 147 vernacular languages, of extraordinary variety. The languages spoken by 292,563,771 persons in India are grouped in three families; and twenty-three languages belonging to these families are spoken by not less than one million persons each. The principal languages are Hindi (spoken by 60,354,137 persons), Bengali (44,624,048), Bihari (37,076,990), Telugu (20,696,872), Marathi (18,237,899), Panjabi (17,070,961), and Tamil (16,525,500), after which come Rajasthani, Kanarese, Gujarati, Oriya, Burmese, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, has become the literary language of Hindustan, and is the lingua franca of India. English is understood by many.

Religions.—The population by religions includes 207,147,026 Hindus (70 per cent. of the total), 62,458,077 Mohammedans (21 per cent.), 9,476,759 Buddhists, nearly all in Burma (3 per cent.), leaving 6 per cent. for all other religions, including 2,923,241 Christians (two-thirds of whom are in Madras), 2,195,339 Sikhs, 1,334,148 Jains, 94,190 Parsis, and 8,584,148 described as Animists, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. The Mohammedans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are infected with the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. Christian converts come mainly from the more degraded classes in Bengal and Madras.

Large Towns.—Tables below show the populations of the chief towns and the distribution of the people by occupations. There are 28 towns with a population of over 100,000, and 49 with 50,000 to 100,000. The urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise less than 10 per cent. of the total population.

Occupations.—About two-thirds of the population depend on agriculture. The cotton industry supports over 7,500,000 persons, more than two-thirds of whom depend on handloom weaving. There are 5,500,000 persons in Government service, civil or military.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. Infant marriage and enforced widowhood are extending through Brahmanical influence and notions of social distinction. There are nearly 26,000,000 widows in India. The males outnumber the females in the proportion of 1,000 to 963.

* Enumerated incompletely prior to 1901. † The North-West Frontier Province was formed in 1901 out of certain Punjab Districts and areas not previously included in India.
‡ Includes South Lushai and Manipur. § Certain areas were imperfectly enumerated owing to tribal disputes. ‖ Includes Shan States, Chin Hills, and Karenni.
N.B.—Revised figures showing area and population of the provinces of Bengal, the Central Provinces, and Eastern Bengal and Assam as reconstituted in 1905, are now furnished above. The Central Provinces and Berar have been amalgamated for administrative purposes.

A Brief Sketch of Indian History.

ALEXANDER'S invasion of India (327 B.C.) is the first landmark of Indian history. A dim outline of earlier events can be traced from the evidences of race and language, from the traditions contained in ancient Indian literature, from accounts of later Greek and Chinese writers, and from coins and inscriptions. The oldest Indian books are supposed to date from about 1400 B.C.; they are written in Sanskrit, a language akin to Persian and to the principal European languages. The people who wrote these books were Aryans, a race which, as their traditions indicate, had come, it may be about 2000 B.C., into India from north of the Hindu Kush. They had found in India a population of yellow-skinned type in the Himalayan districts, and a short, dark-skinned race, of the lowest civilisation, in the rest of India. Of both these types there are still survivals in India. The religion and metaphysics of the Aryans are to be found in the Vedas and Upanishads; their epics, the Mahabhárata and Rámayana, extol their mythical heroes; while in the Laws of Manu we find a picture of Indian society, rather as the priestly caste of the day (say 500 B.C.) wished it to exist, than as it actually then existed. The ascendency of the Brahman priesthood over the soldier class of Kshetriyas is represented as fully established. The system of caste generally prevails, and the life of the people is organised in village communities. In the sixth century B.C. a new religion arose, called Buddhism. Its founder was Gautáma, a prince of the Kshetriya caste, who took the name of Buddha, the "awakened," and died at a great age in 543 B.C. His tenets are contained in the Tripitaka, the Buddhist gospel. Buddhism was, in India itself, mainly a social reform, a revolt against the pride of caste and the exclusiveness of the Brahman priesthood; and within three centuries from the death of its founder it was the prevailing religion of India. For more than a thousand years it existed side by side with Brahmanism, which it never succeeded in ousting. At length it lost ground, either owing to internal dissensions or through persecution; and before the twelfth century it had become practically extinct in India itself, though it still flourishes not only in China and Japan, but also in Nepal, Burma, and Ceylon. Its decline in India was accompanied by a revival of Brahmanism, much modified. A branch of Buddhism, however, or a survival of a kindred creed, continues to exist in India in the distinct sect of the Jains. The followers of this creed, of which the antiquity and relations with Buddhism are much disputed, are still very numerous in Gujarat, and are also found in many other parts of India.

Herodotus tells us that the twentieth satrapy of Persia had at one time included part of the north-west of India. Alexander (327 B.C.) himself did not penetrate beyond the tributaries of the Indus, though he sailed down the river. At his death his Indian possessions fell to Seleucus, whose ambassador, Megasthenes, has left an account of the country under the rule of Chandragupta, the Greek Sandracottus. Megasthenes describes the democratic village communities of the Punjab, and speaks of the people as brave and truthful, and averse to litigation, and of the women as chaste; and he notes the absence of slavery. Asoka (260-220 B.C.), the grandson of Chandragupta, whose edicts throw light upon this period, was the great patron of Buddhism, then the State religion. Our last contributors to a knowledge of India before the period of authentic history are the Buddhist pilgrims from China, who visited the country between the fifth and seventh centuries.

The influence of the Greek conquest was swept away by the Scythians, who poured in many waves, between 126 B.C. and 544 A.D., over Northern India. Their inroads left a lasting influence on the character of the population, and profoundly modified the religious beliefs and domestic institutions of the Hindus.

The Arab conquest of Persia, towards the middle of the seventh century, brought the successors of Mohammed to the Indus, and in the N.W. of India they made some temporary acquisitions during the ensuing hundred years; but two centuries were to pass before the foundations of a durable Mohammedan empire were laid. It was in the year 999 that Mahmud declared the independence of the kingdom of Ghazni in Afghanistan—a declaration which he followed up by at least twelve expeditions into India between 1000 and 1024, one of which carried him beyond the Jumna, and another ended in the occupation of Gujarat. In 1024 he conquered and annexed the provinces of Lahore and Multan. The succeeding dynasties of Afghan kings held power in India for 500 years; but the advance of their power was gradual, for it was not till 1206 that Delhi was taken and the greater part of Hindustan annexed by Kutb-ud-din, with whose memory is connected the Kutb Minar near Delhi. The first Mohammedan invasion of the Deccan took place in 1294.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE.—The Mohammedan Mongols, or Moguls, after overrunning Central and Western Asia, arrived in 1219, under Genghis Khan, on the frontiers of India, but did not cross the Indus. During the reign of the last monarch of the Toghlak line, the famous Tamerlane (or Timur) burst into India at the head of a mighty host, captured and sacked Delhi in 1398, and laid waste a great part of Hindustan. A period of weak dynasties followed; frequent invasions from without, and general misrule and anarchy within, paved the way for larger conquests by the Mogul Emperors. In 1526 Sultan Babar, a descendant of Genghis Khan and Timur, overthrew the last of the Afghan kings at Panipat, and founded the MOGUL EMPIRE, which at his death extended from the Amu river in Central Asia to the borders of the Gangetic delta. His son, Humayun (1530-56), lost the whole of the territory conquered by Babar, but recovered a portion of it shortly before his death. Akbar the Great, his son (1556-1605), spent a long reign in firmly establishing the empire; at his death his dominions extended over Kabul, Kandahar, and all Hindustan. Moreover, of the Mohammedan kingdoms of the Deccan, Ahmednagar, Berar and Bidar had been absorbed, and Bijapur and Golconda forced to pay tribute. Akbar followed up his conquests by important financial reforms; he was tolerant in religion, and just to all classes of his subjects. Among the great men of his time were Raja Todar Mall, his able finance minister; Abul Fazl, the historian of his reign; and Faiz, the poet. Bairam Khan, Akbar's faithful guardian in his youth, revolted when the young king seized the reins of power, but was pardoned. The revenue of Akbar's empire is estimated to have been £19,000,000; and this gradually increased till under Aurangzeb, at the close of the 17th century, it is calculated to have reached £40,000,000. Jehangir (1605-28) received in 1616 Sir Thomas Roe, the ambassador of James I. His empress was the famous Nur Mehal. Under Shah Jehan (1628-1658) the Mogul Empire reached its zenith. Many public works and grand buildings, including the Taj Mahal at Agra, testify to his magnificence and taste. The close of Shah Jehan's reign was embittered by the rivalries of his four sons. Aurangzeb (1658-1707) defeated and killed his brothers; he kept his father a prisoner till death. Aurangzeb had great ability and courage, but religious intolerance, distrust and dissimulation characterised his chequered career. His reign, in some respects magnificent, ended in failure. The decline of the empire had begun. Four sons disputed the right of succession, and in 1707 Bahadur Shah gained the coveted crown. Dying in 1712, he was succeeded by his son, Jehundar Shah, who was murdered by Farokshär, a great-grandson of Aurangzeb. He in turn was put to death six years later, and Muhammad Shah, grandson of Bahadur, came to the throne. His viceroys became rebellious, and so contributed to the success of the Mahrattas, who in consequence subdued the Deccan. About 1724 part of the Deccan became practically independent under Nizam-ul-Mulk (ancestor of the present Nizam), while later on in Oudh, Sadat Khan, and in Bengal, Ali Vardi Khan, secured power. In 1738, to avenge an alleged insult, Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India, captured Delhi, and gave the city over to the mercy of his terrible followers, slew, it is said, more than 100,000 of the inhabitants, and carried off enormous plunder. All the country west of the Indus was lost to the empire. On the death of Muhammad, in 1748, the empire was fast going to decay.

THE MAHRATTAS.—As the Moguls declined, the power of the Mahrattas increased. They were Hindus, and their country may be roughly defined by drawing two lines from Nagpur to Surat and Goa on the west coast. The founder of their power was Sivaji (1627-1680), a chieftain of the family of Bhonsla. Balaji Vishvanath (1712-1720), Peishwa, or Prime Minister, succeeded in making that office of paramount importance and hereditary in his family, Sivaji's descendants thenceforth holding a merely nominal position as Rajas of Satara. Under the Peishwas, aided by Scindia, Holkar, and the Gaekwar, who formed independent States about this time, the Mahrattas rapidly extended their territory and influence. In 1760 Delhi was in their hands, and though they suffered a disastrous defeat at Panipat in 1761, at the hands of Ahmed Shah, the Afghan invader, they remained for some time the first power in India, and were the most dangerous opponents of the English. Too often their government degenerated into a system of organised plunder. Like the Pindaris, a horde of freebooters who followed in their train, they became a scourge to the country. It was not until both Pindaris and Mahrattas were finally overthrown in 1818 that India enjoyed the blessings of internal peace. The Mahratta empire, containing within itself the seeds of disintegration, was fated to bend before the superior sway of Europeans, who, at first attracted by love of adventure or hopes of gain, had gradually extended their power in India.

THE SIKHS.—The Punjab lay beyond the reach of the Mahrattas. There the decay of the Mogul empire gave the opportunity, not to a nation, but to a religious sect, to establish territorial dominion. The founder of the Sikh religion was Nanak Shah, a Hindu reformer, born at Lahore in 1469. He preached the One God, purity of life, and abolition of caste. He had ten successors, ending with Govind Singh (1708). The sect, though cruelly persecuted, survived, and gradually adopted a political organisation. It became a power under Ranjit Singh (1780-1839), who, originally appointed Governor of Lahore by the Afghan Amir, founded the kingdom of the Punjab. The powerful army he had organised brought on the collision which he himself had carefully avoided, and after two wars with the British power the Sikh kingdom was annexed, and became the province of the Punjab (1849).

EUROPEAN ADVENTURE.—From time immemorial the lucrative trade of Europe with India and the farther East has enormously enriched in turn each nation that has held it. In the 15th century it was mainly possessed by the Venetians on the European side, and by the Arabs on the Eastern side. The chief trading centres of the Arabs were Calicut, Ormuz, Aden, and Malacca. Seeing the large profits to be derived from this trade, the rising nations of Europe in the 15th century sought to obtain a share. Hence the ardour of the navigators who set out to discover an ocean route to India. The sea route round the Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Vasco da Gama, who anchored before Calicut in May, 1498. From that time until they lost their naval supremacy the Portuguese enjoyed practically a monopoly of Indian trade. The first Portuguese viceroy, Francis of Almeida (1505-1509), established numerous factories and fortresses, and occupied Ceylon and the Maldive Islands; while his successor, Alfonso de Albuquerque, captured Goa (1510), and extended the Portuguese dominion, notably on the Malabar and Malacca coasts. This dominion for 60 years from 1542 was tantamount to an entire regulation of the Asiatic coast trade with Europe from the Persian Gulf to Japan. When the crowns of Spain and Portugal were united in 1580 under Philip II., the Asiatic interests of Portugal were subordinated to the European interests of Spain, and the decline of Portuguese power in Asia was rapid. Till then the Portuguese brought Indian products to Lisbon, whence the Dutch carried them to the other ports of Europe. But when Philip II., on account of the Dutch revolt, shut Lisbon against them, the Dutch were driven to trade directly with the East. In 1602 they formed "The Dutch East India Company" by amalgamating previously existing trading societies, and between 1602 and 1620 the principal Portuguese settlements in the East were captured. In 1661 the Portuguese held only those remnants of their Indian possessions which they still hold. The Dutch occupied the Cape as a halfway station, and established themselves firmly in Ceylon and in Java and the neighbouring coasts and islands. In 1796 Ceylon was captured by the British and annexed to Madras. It was made a crown colony five years later. French and Danish East India Companies were established in 1604 and 1612 respectively. The latter achieved little, but, as will be seen directly, the French had a brief but brilliant period of influence in the middle of the 18th century.

ENGLISH DOMINION.—At the close of the 16th century the English, like the Dutch, became eager to share in the profits of Indian commerce. After the success of some smaller ventures, the London East India Company was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth by royal charter on 31st December, 1600. There were 125 shareholders, the capital was £70,000, and the official title was "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies." The early voyages were undertaken on joint-stock account, the amount of the capital varying with each venture. The new competitors were resisted by the Portuguese; but a permanent footing was obtained after a great victory off Surat in 1612. In 1615 the British ambassador, Sir Thomas Roe, aided by the influence of the Emperor Jehangir, greatly improved the position and prospects of the Company. In 1639 the English, who had acquired a narrow strip of land, six miles in length and extending one mile inland, on the coast below Masulipatam, built a factory there, surrounded it with a wall, mounted guns, and named it Fort St. George; fourteen years later (1653) this settlement of Madras became an independent Presidency. In Charles I.'s reign rival enterprises led to confusion and to piratical excesses in the East, but in 1657 co-operation and discipline were secured by the charter granted by the Protector Cromwell to a single company comprising the whole body of merchants. When, in 1662, Charles II. was married to Katharine of Braganza, a part of her dowry from Portugal was the Island of Bombay; and a year after receiving it (1668) he transferred all his rights and responsibilities connected with it to the East India Company for an annual payment of £10. In 1687 Bombay replaced Surat as the seat of the Western Presidency. Although in 1634 the Company had obtained certain treaty rights in Bengal from the Mogul, and six years afterwards a factory had been established at Hooghly, near the mouth of the Ganges, yet in that part of India they held no territorial possessions as in Bombay and Madras. In 1688 the exactions of the Mohammedan rulers forced them to abandon their settlement, but they were invited to return, and in 1690 were laid, amid swamp and jungle, the foundations of Fort William, which was destined to develop into the modern city of Calcutta. In 1698 a rival company called "The English East India Company," to distinguish it from the old "London Company," was started with a capital of two millions. After a period of conflict and trade losses, the rival companies came to terms in 1702; and in 1708, thanks to the prudence and tact of Lord Godolphin, they were finally amalgamated under the title of "The United Company of Merchants of England Trading to the East Indies."

When Great Britain engaged in war with France in 1744, the rival Companies of England and France came into collision, with the result that Madras was captured in 1746. Had Dupleix received continuous support from home, he might have succeeded in founding a French Empire in India. The first reverses of the English were retrieved by Clive, whose gallant defence of Arcot (1751) was followed up by a series of brilliant movements, culminating in the utter defeat of the French army at Wandewash in 1760, and in the capture of Pondicherry in 1761, which completed the ruin of the French Company. The territory retained by the French in India since that date is insignificant; and in these possessions they are forbidden by treaty to hold any considerable military force. The tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta (1756) summoned Clive from Madras, and the victory of Plassey over the Nawab of Bengal in 1757 made British influence predominant.

Clive was appointed first Governor of Bengal in 1758. In 1763, after his departure, the English were again embroiled in Bengal, but completely defeated their opponents at Buxar (1764). As a result of this battle, they received from the Emperor at Delhi the diwani or fiscal administration of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, and the jurisdiction over the Northern Circars. Clive returned a second time to Bengal as Governor, and before he left finally in 1767 he succeeded in reforming the services, in which great abuses existed. After an interval of misrule Warren Hastings (1772-85) was appointed Governor, and then Governor-General of Fort William in Bengal in 1774, on the creation of that office under the Regulating Act of 1773. He greatly increased the power and territory of the Company, notwithstanding the opposition of a hostile Council. Hastings was the first great administrative organiser of the British possessions. By repelling Hyder Ali's memorable invasion of the Carnatic (1780), and defeating the triple alliance of the Nizam, the Mahrattas, and Hyder Ali, he probably saved British India. The first administration of Lord Cornwallis (1786-93) was marked by a thorough reform of the Company's Civil Service, by the introduction of the Permanent Settlement of the Land Revenue in Bengal, and by the second Mysore War. After the uneventful rule of Sir John Shore, afterwards Lord Teignmouth (1793-98), came the administration of the Marquess Wellesley (1758-1805), which was distinguished by many important events. Mysore in 1760 had been seized by Hyder Ali, a Mussulman adventurer, and a powerful and inveterate enemy of the English. His son and successor, Tippoo, equally courageous and equally hostile to the English, was in 1798 in secret correspondence with the French, who had then the predominant influence in the military councils of the Nizam and of Scindia, were strongly established in the islands of Mauritius and Bourbon, and under Napoleon, then engaged in his Egyptian campaign, were aiming at a great Eastern Empire. Lord Wellesley saw the necessity of crushing this dangerous Power, and the Fourth Mysore War ended in the capture of Seringapatam (1799), the death of Tippoo, and the conquest and restoration of Mysore to a representative of the family of Hindu Rajas whom Hyder Ali had dethroned. The Treaty of Bassein (1802) broke up the Mahratta Confederacy. The campaigns of Lord Lake and Sir Arthur Wellesley, in the Second and Third Mahratta Wars, curtailed the power of Scindia and Holkar, and increased the strength and extent of the Company's dominions. Lastly, Lord Wellesley developed, if he did not initiate, a system of subsidiary alliances with Native States, which promised to give greater security than the balance of power attempted by his predecessors. Lord Minto (1807-13) established peaceful relations with the Sikhs, Cabul, and Persia, through the missions of Metcalfe, Mountstuart Elphinstone, and Malcolm respectively, and occupied Mauritius. On the renewal of the Company's charter in 1813 the monopoly of Indian trade was abolished. Under the Marquess of Hastings (1814-23) the Bombay Presidency attained its present dimensions on the annexation, in 1818, of the territory of the Mahratta Peishwa, whose power had lasted a little over a century. Lord Hastings also delivered the country from the ravages of the Pindaris of Central India, free-booters who organised bands, sometimes many thousands strong, that devastated the country in all directions; and he settled on their existing basis the relations of the Supreme Power with the feudatory States of Rajputana and Central India. A war with Nepal also occurred during this period. In 1823 Lord Amherst succeeded Lord Hastings. Encroachments on British districts by the King of Ava and his insolent refusal of all redress led to the first Burmese War, which cost 20,000 lives and nearly £14,000,000, but gave to India the fertile provinces of Aracan and Tenasserim, and, practically, Assam. While Lord William Bentinck was Governor-General (1828-35), steam communication with India was introduced, suttee (or widow-burning) was abolished, educated natives were admitted more freely into the service of the Company, and various measures were passed affecting education, finance, and justice. The new charter of the East India Company in 1833 abolished the remaining monopoly of Chinese trade, introduced reforms in the constitution of the Indian Government, made the North-West Provinces a separate administration, and did away with the restrictions on the residence of British subjects in India. The resolution of Lord Auckland (1836-42) to support Shah Shuja against Dost Mohammed brought on the first Afghan Expedition (1839-42), and the serious disaster attendant on the fatal retreat from Cabul. The administration of Lord Ellenborough (1842-44) saw the conquest of Sind by Sir Charles Napier and its annexation (1843). Lord Hardinge (1844-48) conducted in person the first Sikh War, and fought a series of severely-contested battles, ending with Sobraon (1846). Lord Dalhousie's administration (1848-56) was fruitful in events. The Second Sikh War resulted in the submission of the Sikhs, who at Chillianwallah and Goojerat gave further proof of their bravery. The annexation of the Punjab (1849) was followed by the second Burmese War (1852), which deprived the King of Burma of Pegu. Lord Dalhousie promoted the introduction of railways and the telegraph. He established cheap postage, promoted steam navigation with England vid the Red Sea, and opened the Ganges Canal, still one of the largest irrigation works in India. His annexation policy was much criticised at home. It proceeded on the principle that British being preferable to native rule, gross misrule or a break in the natural succession justified, in the interest of the subject populations, the transfer of a native State to the British Government. In 1849 Satara, and in 1853 Jhansi, thus became British territory; and on the death of the last of the Mahratta Princes of Nagpur, his territory was annexed, and became the Central Provinces in 1853. In 1856, after repeated warnings to the tyrannical Government of Oudh, that kingdom was also annexed. The proclamation was made in Feb., 1856, and the transfer took place without bloodshed or fighting. Earl Canning (1857-62), who succeeded Lord Dalhousie, left England pledged to pursue a policy of peace, but he was destined to face the greatest crisis that has threatened the British Empire in India. A mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May, 1857, at Meerut, and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of 40,000 rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow, the Central India campaign, and all the heroism of that momentous time will never be forgotten. The Great Mutiny proved the deathblow of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of its entire administration to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown; and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company." Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however, died in Nov., 1863. Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1864-69) took measures to reform the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. Lord Mayo (1869-72) effected many administrative reforms. He inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended. He was assassinated in 1872, while visiting the convict settlement at Port Blair. During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76), H.M. King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, visited India. Other important events of this viceroyalty were a famine in Bengal, and the deposition of the Gaekwar of Baroda for misrule and disloyalty. Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by the terrible famine in Southern India, by the Second Afghan War, and by the Queen's assumption of the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA in 1877. He was succeeded by the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84), whose peaceful term was marked by the extension of local self-government. His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88), during whose viceroyalty occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was added to the Empire. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-93) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and extending and consolidating British influence on the frontier. Hunza and Nagar, feudatories of Kashmir, were brought under more direct control; an arrangement was made with the Amir relative to the boundary of Afghanistan; and an outbreak in Manipur, where British officers were murdered, was suppressed. In domestic policy he took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He also reconstituted the Legislative Councils by introducing a more popular element. The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-98) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Eventually British control was strengthened, and peace for the time established. An earthquake devastated Assam in 1897; plague broke out in 1896 and has raged more or less severely ever since; and in 1897 an area of 570,000 square miles, with a population of 130 millions, was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the tribes along the whole border from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In suppressing this outbreak over 60,000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled in Lord Elgin's term of office, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong; the frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia, and China were also dealt with. Among the domestic proceedings of Lord Elgin's viceroyalty were the abolition of the Presidential army system, the reimposition of the cotton and other Customs duties, the creation of Legislative Councils for the Punjab and Burma, the modification of the law against sedition, and the celebration of the Queen-Empress's Diamond Jubilee. Lord Elgin was succeeded by Lord Curzon in January, 1899. In that year he made the pound sterling legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to the sovereign. He was thrice called on to defend Imperial interests by the despatch of troops from India, about 8,000 British troops being sent to South Africa in 1899, while about 20,000 native troops were sent in 1900 to China. During 1903-4 troops from India fought in Somaliland. Lord Curzon had to face one of the worst famines on record. In 1900 the tracts affected contained a population of 85 millions, of whom half were in native States. At one time over six millions were under relief. The loss due to this famine has been estimated at 50 millions sterling, while the expenditure of Government was very heavy. The increasing mortality from plague has been a subject of grave concern to Government. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. Among his measures for aiding cultivators were the institution of agricultural banks and departments, and reforms in revenue law and administration designed to free the cultivators from the moneylenders. The famine codes were amended. Lord Curzon's attention was also given to frontier administration. Not only were better arrangements made for controlling the tribes and for distributing the troops on the frontier, but a new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province. The Aden and the Perso-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. The Viceroy appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. A Railway Board was constituted to administer the railways, and a Commerce and Industry Department, in charge of a new Member of Council, was created. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. The reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. Indian princes and native troops visited England in 1902 to attend the coronation of H.M. King Edward VII. The Viceroy held a great Imperial Durbar at Delhi on 1st Jan., 1903, to celebrate the coronation of the first British Emperor of India. It was attended by the leading princes and nobles of India. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty. Lord Curzon returned to England for a few months in 1904. During his absence Lord Ampthill occupied the post of Viceroy. Lord Curzon, having been reappointed for a further period, returned to India in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, which had become unwieldy for administrative purposes, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. During 1905 (April) a severe earthquake occurred in N.W. India, and a standard time for all India was adopted. Lord Curzon carried out great reforms in the organisation of the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander-in-Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter which seemed to menace the supremacy of the civil authority, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905). Lord Minto, his successor, arrived in Nov., 1905. The Prince and Princess of Wales made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. There was a considerable agitation in 1905-6 among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—The original charter of the East India Company was granted by Queen Elizabeth at the end of 1600. The Regulating Act (1773), which created the first Governor-General and his Council, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. It was followed, in 1784, by Pitt's India Act, which, while leaving the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors, gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control, whose president represented India in the House of Commons. The Act of 1784 authorised the historic phrase "The Governor-General in Council." In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed; in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter, the trade of India was thrown open; while in 1833 the monopoly of the China trade was abolished, and a legal member was added to the Governor-General's Council. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India," 1858, which still regulates Indian affairs, all the territories formerly governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council of 15 Members. At least 9 Members of Council must have resided in India for 10 years, and must not have left India more than 10 years prior to their appointment. The term of office is 10 years, with power of extension up to 15 years. By an Act of 1889 the Secretary of State may leave 5 of the seats on his Council unfilled. In 1877 (under Royal Titles Act, 39 & 40 Vict., c. 10) Queen Victoria formally assumed the title of Empress of India.

India in Parliament, and Indian Legislation in 1906.

In 1906 many questions were asked in the House of Commons concerning India. A resolution against the opium traffic was accepted by the Government. Mr. Morley, the new Secretary of State, made a noteworthy Budget speech. Of the Acts passed in India the most important was the Indian Coinage Act.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H.I.M. EDWARD VII.

H.M. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England, and as a member of the Cabinet he is responsible to, and represents the supreme authority of, Parliament. No expenditure from the revenues of India is legal unless sanctioned by the Secretary of State for India and a majority of his Council. In matters requiring secrecy (e.g., foreign policy and the affairs of native States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council, and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council. In all matters the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India. Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office (see p. 164).

The King-Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of Madras and Bombay, the Commander-in-Chief, the Ordinary Members of the Councils of the Governor-General and of the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and the Judges in the High Courts. The appointments of Lieutenant-Governor are made by the Governor-General, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. The term of these appointments, except judgeships, is usually five years.

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India, in both civil and military affairs, is the Governor-General in Council. The Governor-General's Executive Council now contains six ordinary members, of whom three must have served in India ten years, as well as himself and the Commander-in-Chief, who is an extraordinary member. The Governors of Bombay and Madras have each an Executive Council of two members. All acts of the SUPREME GOVERNMENT IN INDIA run in the name of "The Governor-General in Council"; ordinarily, the opinion of the majority prevails, but the Governor-General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority of his Council. The Governor-General's Council, when it meets for purposes of legislation, consists of the above eight members and of not more than 16 "Additional Members for making Laws and Regulations," nominated by the Governor-General. There are similar Legislative Councils in Madras, Bombay, Bengal, Eastern Bengal and Assam, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, and Burma. The Indian Councils Act of 1892 increased the number of representative natives, and conferred a limited right of interpellation and of criticism in financial matters. Every Indian Act requires the Governor-General's assent, but the Crown may disallow it.

Important changes in administration were introduced during 1905. Business is now conducted by nine Departments—Finance, Foreign, Home, Legislative, Revenue and Agriculture, Public Works, Commerce and Industry (with Railway Board), Army, and Military Supply. Each Department is in charge of a Secretary to Government, and is also the special care of a member of the Supreme Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of routine and minor importance, and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor-General and his Council. The Governor-General himself superintends the Foreign Department. The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, excise, opium, salt, currency, banking, mints, and other financial matters. The Foreign Department conducts relations with Afghanistan, Nepal, and other conterminous countries, and, through its Political Residents and Agents in the various native States, supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power. Its Agents in the Persian Gulf, Muscat, and Turkish Arabia look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters. The Home Department deals with the civil service, education, public health, ecclesiastical and judicial affairs, municipalities, district local boards, prisons, police, &c. The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connection with the Legislative Department. The most important subjects that come before the Revenue and Agriculture Department are land revenue and surveys, forests, agricultural development, famine, and meteorology. The Public Works Department deals with irrigation, roads, buildings, &c. A new department for Commerce and Industry has been created, and placed in charge of a special member, to deal with trade and shipping, customs, ports, post-office, telegraphs, mines, factories, statistics, and certain railway questions, but railway administration is now entrusted to a Railway Board. The Army is under the Army Department, of which the Commander-in-Chief has charge in Council, while a Military Member of Council has charge of the Military Supply Department.

The division of India into three Presidencies is now misleading. It is a relic of the time when the early settlements in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay were each under a President and Council. British India is now really divided into 13 Local Governments and Administrations, viz.:—Under Governors, Madras and Bombay, still termed Presidencies; under Lieutenant-Governors, Bengal, Eastern Bengal and Assam (constituted in Oct., 1905), the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, and Burma; under Chief Commissioners, the Central Provinces, which since 1902 have included Berar, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, British Baluchistan, the new North-West Frontier Province, and the Andaman Islands. The chief Local Governments enjoy a large measure of financial and administrative independence. The Governors of Madras and Bombay have greater independence than the others, being alone permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State.

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector-Magistrate or Deputy-Commissioner, as the case may be. In subordination (in most Provinces) to a Commissioner, who corresponds direct with the Provincial Government, he has control in every department of administration, and is the responsible head of his jurisdiction. There are 259 Districts in British India.

There are separate High Courts for both civil and criminal cases in Madras, Bombay, Bengal (with jurisdiction also over the new province of Eastern Bengal and Assam), and in the Province of Agra. Appeals may be carried to the English Privy Council. The Punjab and Lower Burma have Chief Courts. The Central Provinces, Berar, Oudh, Sind, North-West Frontier Province, and Upper Burma have each a Judicial Commissioner.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

(1) MADRAS (area, 141,726 sq. miles; pop. 38,209,436) was the most important of the three Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, but it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. With a coast-line of 1,730 miles the province has no good natural harbour; though an artificial harbour has been completed at Madras at great expense. Many natives of Madras Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. The province is not naturally fertile. The irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c., are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and Madras Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal, while the Southern Mahratta line connects it with Bombay. The people are chiefly Hindus. There are over one million Christians, mainly native Roman Catholics. The languages principally spoken are Tamil and Telugu. The Governor of Madras is assisted by a Council, ordinarily of two members, to whom are added, for legislative business, other members not to exceed 21 (including the Advocate-General ex officio), of whom the first seven are appointed on the recommendation of the following bodies: Madras Corporation (1), other Municipal Councils (2), District Boards (2), Chamber of Commerce (1), and University (1); the rest are selected by Government. Madura (105,984) and Trichinopoly (104,721), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

CHIEF CITY, Madras. Population, 509,346.

(2) BOMBAY.—The Island of BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas, and by the lapse of the Satara State. Sind was conquered in 1843. The province (including Sind, but not Aden and Perim, which are also attached to it) contains 122,984 square miles (nearly equal in size to Prussia), with a population of 18,515,587; it is 1,050 miles in length. Eastern Sind is desert. The administration of Sind (which occupies about two-fifths of the Presidency) is in some respects separate. About 77 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus, and 20 per cent. Mohammedans. The Parsis, who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. The province has suffered greatly from plague and drought in recent years. Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, and Kanarese are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oilseeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India and the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (now combined with the Indian Midland system) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Southern Mahratta system; while Karachi is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system. The Governor is assisted by a Council similar to that in Madras, except that the first seven of the additional members are appointed on the recommendation of the following bodies: Bombay Corporation (1), other Municipal Corporations (1), District Boards (1), Sardars of the Deccan (1), Jaghirdars and Zamindars of Sind (1), Bombay and Karachi Chambers of Commerce (1 each), and Bombay University (1). Ahmedabad (185,889), Poona (153,320), Surat (119,306), and Karachi (116,663), the capital and chief port of Sind, are important cities. For Aden and Perim, see p. 492.

(3) BENGAL (reconstituted area, 115,819 sq. miles; pop. 50,722,067) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The Bengal Presidency includes practically all Northern and Central India, but the province comprises part of Bengal proper, Behar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached from the province in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. Bengal occupies the Ganges Valley eastward of Benares, and extends from the Himalayas to the mouth of the Mahanuddy. Only 5 per cent. of the population live in towns. Nearly 78 per cent. of the population consists of Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Hindi. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, producing rice, and is the most populous and productive in all British India. Orissa and Chota Nagpur are ill-watered and liable to drought. The chief products, besides rice, are opium, indigo, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and jute. In the hills bordering the great plain coal measures, yielding about six-sevenths of India's coal output, are worked. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running N. from Calcutta, is also important. Other extensive systems are the Bengal and North-Western in the north and the Bengal-Nagpur in the south. The Lieutenant-Governor is assisted by a Legislative Council of not more than 20 members, including 7 members appointed on the recommendation of the following bodies:—Calcutta Corporation (1), other Municipal Corporations (2), District Boards (2), Bengal Chamber of Commerce (1), and Calcutta University (1). Important cities are Patna (134,785) and Howrah (157,594), a great jute-manufacturing centre close to Calcutta.

CHIEF CITY, Calcutta. Pop., including suburbs and Howrah, 1,106,738.

(4) EASTERN BENGAL AND ASSAM (reconstituted area, 106,150 sq. miles; pop. 30,961,459). In 1905 the new province of Eastern Bengal and Assam was formed by the addition to Assam of 15 districts of Bengal, and was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor, with a Legislative Council of not more than 15 members. Assam had been constituted a separate administration in 1874, out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1825. A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Gauhati and Sylhet respectively. Rice, tea, jute, oilseeds, sugar, and tobacco are cultivated. About 58 per cent. of the people are Mohammedans, and 37 per cent. Hindus. There is a great variety of languages, Bengali and Assamese being the principal. The Assam-Bengal Railway traverses the province, and terminates at the growing port of Chittagong. The census of 1901 showed that Assam contained 775,844 immigrants from other parts of India, mostly coolies for tea-gardens.

CHIEF CITY, Dacca. Population, 90,542.

Lieutenant-Governor, Lancelot Hare, C.S.I., C.I.E. (Aug., 1906).....Rs. 8,333

(5) The UNITED PROVINCES of AGRA and OUDH, called "North-Western Provinces and Oudh" until 1902 (area, 107,164 sq. miles; pop. 47,691,782), form the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. In population they come next to Bengal. Originally these provinces (excluding Oudh) formed part of the Bengal Presidency, but in 1835 a separate administration was formed under a Lieutenant-Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief staple is wheat, while rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, indigo, cotton, sugar, opium, and oilseeds are widely cultivated. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and 14 per cent. Mohammedans. Hindi and Bihari are the chief tongues. The province is well served by the East Indian, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. In 1887 a Legislative Council, of not more than 15 members, was established. Six members are appointed on the recommendation of the following bodies:—Municipal Corporations (2), District Boards (2), Chamber of Commerce of Upper India (1), and Allahabad University (1). Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (188,022), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Benares (209,231), the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (197,170), and Meerut (118,129).

(6) The PUNJAB (area, 97,209 sq. miles; pop. 20,330,339) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas, traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849, and up to 1853 was under a Board of Administration. This Board was then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab is mainly agricultural, and, owing to the scanty rainfall, depends largely for its harvests on vast irrigation canals, which are still being largely extended, and are highly remunerative. The principal crops are wheat, millet, barley, maize, pulse, oilseeds, sugar, and cotton. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Wood is scarce. More than half the population are Mohammedans, and more than a third are Hindus. Of the former, the Pathans are found chiefly in the north-western hill districts. The Sikhs number over 2,100,000 in the Punjab and Punjab States, to which they are mainly confined. Punjabi and Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western Railway serve the Punjab. In 1897 a Legislative Council was constituted, consisting of 9 nominated members (5 official and 4 non-official). The ancient imperial city of Delhi, with 208,575 inhabitants, is the largest city; while Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 162,429 people.

(7) BURMA is bounded by China, by French Indo-China, and by Siam on the east, by the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam on the north, and by the Bay of Bengal. It is the largest province of the Indian Empire, having a total area of 236,738 sq. miles, with a population of 10,490,624. These figures include the Shan States and Chin Hills. Many immigrants come from Bengal, Madras, and China. Tenasserim and Aracan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1826, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. The Shan States are administered by local sawbwas, or chiefs, under the superintendence of a political officer. The province is thinly peopled; but, owing to remarkable prosperity, the population has greatly increased. The inhabitants—of the common Indo-Chinese stock—belong to numerous tribes, who are distinguished by a variety of manners, languages, and religions. Buddhism, now almost confined to Burma, is the religion of nearly 90 per cent. of the people. About 75 per cent. speak Burmese. The Burmese are much better educated than the natives of India proper, education being conducted by Buddhist monks. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Prome there is upland, hilly country. Rice, the main product of the delta region, is largely milled at Rangoon and exported. The principal export after rice is teak, which comes from the extensive forests of Burma and the Shan States, and overland from Siam. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum and jadestone; gold and silver are also known to exist. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Shweli, and the Myitnge, supply important navigable waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railway has reached Myitkina on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States, which lie in the Salwin basin. The Lieutenant-Governor of Burma has a Legislative Council of 9 nominated members (5 official and 4 non-official). The present capital, Rangoon, is fast increasing in population owing to commercial prosperity, while the old native capital, Mandalay, tends to decline.

(8) The CENTRAL PROVINCES and BERAR reconstituted area, excluding Berar, given below, 82,635 sq. miles; pop. 9,237,654). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Mahratta Kingdom of Nagpur. One district was detached and added to Bengal in 1905. The country is hilly and forest-clad, and contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. Much of the waste land is covered with scrub jungle. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Hindi and Marathi. Much has been done by constructing roads and railways (belonging to the Indian Midland and Great Indian Peninsula system and the Bengal-Nagpur line) to open up the country, which possesses coalfields and iron-ore, and is an important producer of rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds, and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

Since 1st October, 1902, BERAR has been amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar area, 17,710 sq. miles; pop. 2,754,016), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in our hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent. In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £167,000 a year to the Nizam, who thus obtains an assured instead of a fluctuating income therefrom. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields the finest cotton in India, besides millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

There is no Legislative Council for the Central Provinces and Berar, and all legislation is done by the Governor-General's Council.

(9) The NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE was constituted on November 9, 1901, by the transfer from the Punjab of portions of the district of Hazara, and the Trans-Indus districts of Peshawar, Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, and by the addition of the following Political Charges—Kurram, Malakand (Dir, Swat, and Chitral), Khaibar, Tochi, Gomal, and Shirani. It comprises an area of 16,466 square miles, with a population (mainly Mohammedans) of 2,125,480. The officer in charge is directly responsible to the Government of India. The province produces wheat, barley and other grains, oilseeds, cotton, &c. It has a considerable trade with Afghanistan.

(11) COORG (area, 1,582 sq. miles; pop. 180,607), annexed in 1834. The Resident at Mysore is ex officio Chief Commissioner and the chief executive and judicial authority.

Chief Commissioner, S. M. Fraser, C.I.E. Rs. 4,250

(12) BRITISH BALUCHISTAN (area, 45,804 square miles; pop. 308,246) was constituted a separate administration in 1888, under the Governor-General's Agent in Baluchistan, who also controls the affairs of the rest of Baluchistan up to the Persian frontier. The districts it comprises were acquired partly from Afghanistan by the treaty of Gundamuk (1879), partly from the Khan of Kalat by arrangement. British Baluchistan includes the Assigned Districts of Sibi, Pishin, Thal-Chotiali, Quetta, Nushki, Zhob, Chagai, Nasirabad, and the Bolan. The rest of the territory belongs to the native States of Kalat and Las Bela. Baluchistan consists largely of mountains and sandy deserts, and is sparsely populated. About 44 per cent. of the people lead a pastoral, nomad life. In religion they are Sunni Mohammedans. The Afghan-Baluch frontier was demarcated in 1896–7. To Chaman, on this frontier, a railway runs through Baluchistan vid Quetta. A new trade-route between India and Seistan, in Persia, vid Nushki, in northern Baluchistan, was opened in 1896. A railway from Quetta to Nushki has recently been completed. The Khan of Kalat is the head of a loose confederacy, and is amenable in all important matters to the Governor-General's Agent. He receives about £11,000 for quit-rents and subsidy. British troops occupy Quetta, commanding the Bolan Pass, and have the treaty right to occupy any other position.

Chief Commissioner of British Baluchistan, Major Sir A. H. McMahon, K.C.S.I., C.I.E. ...Rs. 4,000
Judl. and Rev. Commr., A. Williams ...Rs. 2,500

(13) The ANDAMANS and NICOBARS (area, 3,143 square miles; pop. 24,649) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. The Andamans, in two groups, the Great and Little Andamans, are covered with luxuriant vegetation, and inhabited by a tribe of Negritos. The race is dying out. Since 1858 these islands have been used as a penal settlement by the Indian Government. Port Blair, with its safe and spacious harbour, on South Andaman, is the convict station. The number of convicts in 1904-5 was 14,112. Much valuable timber, worked by convict labour, is obtained. The Nicobar Islands lie almost due south of the Andamans. They formerly belonged to Denmark, and were first occupied by the British in 1869. They comprise 19 islands (seven uninhabited), of which the northernmost (Car Nicobar) contains half the total population. The principal products are coco-nuts. The inhabitants, Malay in type, are indolent, and are becoming extinct.

Chief Commissioner and Superintendent, Major H. A. Browning, I.A. ..... Rs. 2,500

The Laccadive Islands comprise 14 islands (nine inhabited), distant 200 miles from the Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency, in which they are included. (Pop. 10,274.)

Aden, Perim, and Protected Chiefships. From old time Aden, situated on a peninsula of volcanic origin, on the southern coast of Arabia and lying on the Red Sea trade-route between Europe and the East, has been an important trade centre. Aden trade decayed after the Portuguese discovery of the Cape route, but with the opening of the Suez Canal it regained more than its old importance. It was occupied by the British in 1839. It is now a great coaling-station and port of call, and an emporium for the trade of N.E. Africa and S. Arabia. It is the only fortified point between Egypt and Bombay, and may be regarded as an outpost of the Indian Empire. Aden and Perim—a small island at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, occupied in 1857—are legally part of the Bombay Presidency, and according to the census of 1901 they had an area of 80 square miles and a population of 43,974. Aden is a free port, except for dutics on salt, arms, and intoxicating liquors and drugs. The traffic in arms and ammunition is subject to special regulations. Aden trades with the Arabian and African coasts in cotton goods, grain, coffee, tobacco, coal, salt, hides and skins, sugar, &c. India, the United Kingdom, and the United States have a considerable trade with Aden, which exchanges their goods for the products of the adjacent coasts. The total of imports and exports in 1905-6 was over £6,587,000. In the same year, 1,369 vessels entered Aden and 372 entered Perim. Aden has a Port Trust and a Chamber of Commerce. In the hinterland of Aden the British Government has treaty engagements with, and subsidises, the neighbouring Arab tribes, both inland and along the coast, from Perim to Muscat territory at Ras Sair. As the result of an agreement arrived at in 1902 with Turkey, a line fixing the boundary of the tribes with which the British Government has treaty relations has been demarcated by a joint British and Turkish Commission from Sheikh Murad, on the coast opposite Perim, to the river Bana.

The Kuria Muria Islands, to the S. of Omān, have been in British possession since 1854. The British Government has treaty relations with the Sheikh of the island of Sokotra, which has an area of 1,400 square miles and a primitive mixed population of 12,000, who keep cows and goats and export clarified butter (ghi).

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.

The higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1. Open competitive examination in England. 2. The Indian Army. 3. The patronage of the Secretary of State 4. The patronage of the Local Governments.

The Civil Service of India.—Important changes in the regulations took effect in 1906. The next examination will commence in London on 1st August, 1907, the number of appointments (usually about 50) depending on the requirements of the local Governments. Candidates must be over 22 and under 24 on that date, and of good health and character. Application for admission to compete must be made on or before the 1st July, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London, W. Examination fee, £6. The selected candidates will be on probation in England for one year, and will receive an allowance of £100 if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State for India, conduct themselves well, comply with all rules laid down for their guidance, and be certified as entitled to appointment. A final examination is held in Indian law, languages, history, &c. Seniority in the service depends on the order in which candidates stand in the list resulting from the combined marks of the competitive and final examinations. Selected candidates must qualify in riding. Successful candidates are allotted to the various provinces upon a consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes, but always subject to the needs of the public service. Within a certain time of the candidate's arrival in India, he must elect to serve in the executive or the judicial branch of the administration, the summit of the profession in one branch being the Lieutenant-Governorship of a Province, in the other a Judgeship of a High Court. The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences at Rs. 4,800 a year. The number of civilians at present in the Indian Service is about 1,100, including a few natives who have attained their position by nomination.

Indian Army.—The Native Army absorbs the larger proportion of the officers; but out of a total of about 3,470 officers some 500 are in civil employment. A certain number of appointments are offered to cadets of the Royal Military College, and a certain number to candidates from the Universities (regulations obtainable from War Office). King's Cadets, nominated by the Secretary of State for War, King's Indian Cadets, and Honorary King's Cadets, nominated by the Secretary of State for India (rules on application to Military Dept., India Office), are allowed to choose whether they will join the Royal Military College for appointment to the Indian Army or for commissions in the British Cavalry or Infantry. After the claims of these cadets have been satisfied, remaining appointments in the Indian Army are allotted in order of merit to successful candidates at the final examination at Sandhurst. Election is final, no transfer being subsequently possible except by exchange. On receiving his commission a successful candidate is gazetted as second lieutenant on the unattached list of the British Army (receiving the pay of that rank), provided with a passage to India, attached for a year to a British regiment, and then transferred to a native regiment as second lieutenant. Unless he is found fit in every respect and passes certain language and professional tests before the end of the third year from appointment to the Indian Army, he will be removed from the Service. Any officers who may from time to time be required to supplement the direct supply from Sandhurst will be drawn from the R.A. and Cavalry and Infantry of the Line serving in India, subject to certain conditions. A lieutenant's pay commences at Rs. 2,700 a year.

The Public Works Department includes a staff of engineers engaged in the construction and maintenance of State public works. They are recruited from the corps of Royal Engineers or the Indian Army, from persons appointed by selection in the United Kingdom, and, in respect of natives, from the civil engineering colleges in India. Other qualified persons are occasionally admitted. In 1907 not less than 12 appointments of assistant engineers will be made by a selection committee including at least one eminent engineer. Candidates must be between 22 and 24 years of age on 1st July, 1907, must be of good health and character, be able to ride, have obtained a University degree or equivalent diploma in engineering, and have had experience of important work. Intending candidates should apply on a prescribed form to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, S.W., before 1st May, 1907. Assistant engineers in India commence at Rs. 4,200 a year, and there is a prospect of pension and also a provident fund. It is not known whether any appointments in the Accounts Branch, Indian Public Works Department (commencing salary Rs. 3,600 a year), will be made in 1907.

Telegraph Department.—Future arrangements are not yet settled, but will probably resemble those for assistant engineers in the Public Works Department. No recruitment, however, of assistant superintendents from the United Kingdom will be necessary until the autumn of 1908.

The Forest Department of India is recruited from this country. The next selection of candidates will be made in the summer of 1907, under new regulations, particulars of which will probably be shortly available. Successful competitors will spend three years on probation, two at Oxford University and one in Continental forests for practical work, at their own expense. Assistant Conservators commence at Rs. 4,200 a year. There is a prospect of pension and a provident fund. The number of appointments in 1907 will be not less than 8. Intending candidates should apply to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office.

Indian Police.—An examination is to be held in this country in June, 1907, for 39 appointments: Madras, 5; Bombay, 4; Bengal, 6; United Provinces, 7; Punjab, 5; Burma, 5; Central Provinces and Berar, 3; Eastern Bengal and Assam, Candidates must be between 19 and 21 on 1st June, 1907, and applications must be sent before 1st May, 1907, to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, on a printed form to be obtained from him. There is a strict medical examination, and a test of proficiency in riding. Selected candidates will be allotted as probationers to provinces "upon consideration of all the circumstances, including their own wishes." On passing the prescribed examinations, which must be done within two years of arrival in India, and being found otherwise fit, a probationer is appointed an assistant-superintendent. A general increase of pay has recently been introduced, and a larger number of higher posts created. The initial salary of a probationer is Rs. 3,600 a year. There is a prospect of pension and a provident fund.

Indian Medical Service.—Examinations are usually held in January and July. The number of appointments offered is about 15. Candidates must be between the ages of 21 and 28 at the date of examination, of good health and good character, and must possess a registrable qualification to practise both medicine and surgery in the United Kingdom. They may be married or not. Successful candidates are required to attend an entire course of instruction at the Army Medical School and elsewhere, during which period they receive certain allowances to cover cost of maintenance. A final examination is then held, and the position on the list of the Service depends on the combined results of the preliminary and final examinations. Officers will be liable for military employment in any part of India, but, in view of transfers to civil employment, they are allowed to choose the civil area to which they shall be posted, according to their position on the list. Officers in one civil area may be transferred elsewhere or recalled to military duty. The commencing grade pay of a lieutenant is Rs. 4,200 a year; the highest medical appointment carries a salary of Rs. 36,000. Full information can be obtained from the Military Secretary, India Office, S.W.

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is very small, and is chiefly dependent on the uncertain requirements of the Government of India in the Judicial, Educational, or Ecclesiastical Departments.

Appointments, usually of distinguished graduates of the Universities of the United Kingdom, are made to the Indian Educational Service by the Secretary of State. The age is usually from 23 to 30. Appointments are in the first instance for two years, the salary beginning at Rs. 500 a month, with annual increments of Rs. 50 a month to Rs. 750 or Rs. 1,000, and with prospects of promotion if service is extended. The number of appointments varies from year to year, and is not large.

The Ecclesiastical Establishment, which forms a civil department, consists of the Bishops of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay (others whose names are found at page 245 are not Bishops on the Establishment), and 150 Chaplains of the English and Scottish churches. Chaplains (who must be under 34 years of age) are on probation for three years after appointment, and receive a salary of Rs. 5,760 a year. Applications should be addressed to the Secretary of State, India Office. Certain allowances are also paid from Indian revenues to other clergymen, and to priests and ministers of other denominations when serving in British regiments.

Appointments are also made by the India Office to the Royal Indian Marine (limits of age for officers 17 to 22, for engineers 18 to 25), Bengal Pilot Service (age 18 to 22), Civil Veterinary Dept. (age not over 26), Financial Dept., Enrolled List (age 20 to 25), Geological Survey Dept. (age not over 25), Customs (age 20 to 25), Agricultural Service (age 23 to 30), and Military Nursing Service (age 25 to 35).

The patronage of the Local Governments is considerable, but no one who is not a native, a covenanted civilian, or an officer of the Indian Army can be appointed to a post of over Rs. 200 a month without the sanction of the Government of India—the departments excepted from this rule being: Opium, Salt, Customs, Survey, Mint, Public Works, and Police.

Pay, Leave, and Pension Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations, of which a partial summary will be found in the India List, published by Messrs. Harrison, 59, Pall Mall, S.W. This volume also contains the full regulations regarding Indian appointments.

GROSS AND NET REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE. The statement of Gross Revenue and Expenditure exhibits all revenue receipts and payments therefrom, but as the entries on both sides are swollen by railway, irrigation, post office, telegraph, and mint receipts and payments, a clearer view of the financial position is obtained from the following statement of Net Revenue and Expenditure. In this departmental receipts, which are a set-off against Expenditure, have been deducted, as also refunds and assignments, cost of cultivating and manufacturing opium, &c.

In 1903-4 there was a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of £3,996,000, in 1904-5 of £3,456,000, and in 1905-6 (revised estimate) of £1,755,700.

CAPITAL EXPENDITURE.—In addition to the expenditure from revenue there was a capital outlay in 1904-5, not charged to revenue, of £5,897,000 on State Railways, and of £361,000 on Irrigation Works, making a total of £6,258,000.

BURDEN OF TAXATION.—If taxation proper be divided among the population of British India, without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise, Customs, and other duties which fall on persons in the native States, the burden in 1905-6 was 1*s.* 10½*d.* per head, or, if land revenue (which is equivalent to rent) be added, 3*s.* 5¼*d.* per head. In 1903 the burden of taxation was lightened by a reduction of 20 per cent. in the salt tax and by the raising of the minimum income assessable to income tax. In 1905 the salt tax was further reduced by 25 per cent.

DEBT AND ASSETS.—On 31st March, 1906, the debt of India amounted to £230,515,000, viz., Sterling Debt, £146,457,000, and Rupee Debt (converted into sterling at 1*s.* 4*d.* the rupee), £84,058,000. There is no unfunded debt. Miscellaneous obligations (Savings Bank balances, &c.) amounted in addition to about £17,995,000. Up to the same date the Indian Government had devoted £94,935,000 to the construction of railways, and £26,593,000 to the construction of irrigation works. It had purchased, by cash payments, annuities, or the issue of India stock, eight railways, on which, at the time of purchase, £97,257,000 had been spent. It had lent £12,129,000 to native States, corporations, agriculturists, &c., and had advanced £7,580,000 to railway companies. Other assets were the Gold Reserve Fund of £12,165,600 and the cash balances in India and England, £11,733,000 and £8,437,000 respectively. The assets of India now exceed the liabilities. In May, 1906, a loan of £2,000,000 (3 per cent.) was raised in England, at an average price of about 94⅜ per cent., and a 3½ per cent. loan of 4½ crores (£3,000,000) in India at about 97½ per cent.

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue. It may be said generally that the State is the landlord in India. The land revenue is the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal, about one-fourth of Madras, and part of Assam the land revenue has been permanently fixed; elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in thirty years). The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces. In parts of Bengal and Bombay, the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab, the N.W. Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari), and the estate is assessed as a whole. Elsewhere (especially in Burma, Berar, Sind, Assam, and most of Madras and Bombay) the raiyatwari tenure prevails, and each raiyat, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State. In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent. of the actual rental, while in temporarily settled raiyatwari districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent. of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent. Private improvements are exempt from assessment. The land revenue paid to the State in 1904-5 amounted to £19,847,000, of which £803,000 was due to irrigation and credited under that head.

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Poppy may be grown only in parts of Bengal and the United Provinces, in the Punjab (for local consumption), and in the Central Indian (Malwa) native States. Except in these States the manufacture is a Government monopoly. In 1904–5 48,000 chests of Bengal (including United Provinces) opium were sold for export, at an average rate of Rs. 1,587 per chest. The monthly auction sales at Calcutta realised £5,269,947, the cost of production being £1,964,441, and the net receipts £3,305,506. In addition £784,908 was derived from the duty (Rs. 500 and Rs. 600 a chest) levied in Bombay on Malwa opium. Most of the opium produced is exported to China and the Straits Settlements. Duty and licence fees on opium consumed in India (credited to Excise) yielded about £1,000,000. The total opium revenue, therefore, exceeded £5,000,000.

EXCISE.—Licence fees and duties are levied on the sale of intoxicating liquors and drugs. The revenue, owing partly to stricter administration, and partly to enhanced duties, has greatly expanded since 1897–8, and amounted to £5,306,000 net in 1904–5.

CUSTOMS.—Increase of trade has enlarged the revenue to £4,267,000 net in 1904–5. (For rates of duty see page 499.) The export duty on rice yielded £879,000, and the countervailing Excise duty on Indian cotton goods £159,000.

INCOME TAX.—This is levied on non-agricultural incomes of Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 2,000 at about 2 per cent., and on those above Rs. 2,000 at 2½ per cent. It yielded £1,263,000 in 1904–5.

STAMPS.—Stamps yielded £3,697,000 in 1904–5. Most of the revenue is from court fee and commercial stamps.

SALT.—The duty on salt, which was Rs. 2½ a maund (82 lb.) up to March, 1903, in practically the whole of India, was then reduced to Rs. 2, and in March, 1905, to Re. 1½. The rate for Burma remains as before at Re. 1. The total consumption of salt in British India in 1904–5 was estimated at 39,978,000 maunds, yielding a net revenue of £5,094,000.

FORESTS.—Over 92,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 150,000 square miles are under State management. They yielded in 1904–5 a net revenue of £1,599,000. A third of the revenue comes from Burma.

TELEGRAPHS.—The length of telegraph wires in India on 31st March, 1905, was 227,750 miles, on which the number of messages sent was 9,098,000. They yielded in 1904–5 a revenue of 3·88 per cent. on their capital cost of £5,824,000. In addition the Indo-European Telegraph Department gave a profit of nearly 4½ per cent. on its capital of £932,439. Owing to reductions in rates there is at present a net loss on telegraphs.

POST OFFICE.—The Post Office, which conveyed 679 millions of letters, postcards, newspapers, &c., and issued 18½ millions of money orders, was worked at a net profit to Government of £56,000. Reductions in postal rates have recently become operative.

RAILWAYS.—The number of miles of railway open for traffic on 31st March, 1906, was 28,634, of which 956 were opened in 1905–6. The mileage under construction or sanctioned was 2,767 miles. Of the mileage open or in hand on 1st April, 1906, about 53 per cent. was on the standard gauge (5 ft. 6 in.), and about 43 per cent. on the metre gauge. Up to the end of 1905 there was a capital outlay of £244,626,000, and the average cost per mile was £8,530. The net earnings of the Indian railways in 1905 were £14,494,000, or a return of nearly 6 per cent. on the capital, against receipts of £13,917,000, yielding the same return, in 1904. The number of passengers increased to 248 millions, and the goods traffic to 55 million tons. The net gain to the State on the working of the railways in India was £861,000 in 1903–4 and £2,105,000 in 1904–5. Moreover, these results were arrived at after charging as part of the year's expenditure interest on capital outlay and sums of £674,900 in 1903–4 and £698,000 in 1904–5 on account of the redemption of capital through annuities. The total capital expenditure on railways in India was £6,991,000 in 1903–4 and £7,839,000 in 1904–5. Rates are very low, third-class passengers travelling on the average five miles for a penny. A Railway Board was constituted in 1905 to manage the construction and working of the railways. In 1905–6 the State purchased the Bombay, Baroda and Central India and the Bengal Central Railways, and secured a lease of the South Behar Railway.

IRRIGATION.—On irrigation works the Government up to 31st March, 1905, have laid out a total sum of £31,500,000, which, apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded a profit to the State of about 7 per cent. The area irrigated was over 20 million acres, while the annual value of the crops raised is estimated at about 87 per cent. of the capital outlay. In accordance with the recommendations of the Irrigation Commission further works, estimated to cost eventually nearly £30,000,000, will be undertaken, and three large canals in the Punjab, besides less important works, have been put in hand. Two-fifths of the revenue, £257,000, comes from the Punjab.

HOME CHARGES.—The net expenditure in England, chargeable to Revenue, amounted in 1904–5 to £18,828,000:—Railway Revenue Account, including Railway Debt, £6,659,000; Interest and Management of Debt, other than that for Railways, £2,933,000; Stores, £2,983,000, of which £189,000 were Marine and £2,300,000 Military; Army non-effective charges, £2,999,000; Civil and Marine non-effective charges, £1,358,000. Furlough payments amounted to £642,000, of which £332,000 was under the head of Military. The Home charges for 1905–6 are estimated at £18,072,000. The expenditure of the Indian Government in England is met by bills or telegraphic transfers drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and sold by him in London for sterling.

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use in India is the silver rupee, which contains 165 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy. Until June, 1893, the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees, and the rupee circulated at nearly its intrinsic value. Owing, however, to the fall in the value of the rupee, legislation of that date closed the mints to the public, with a view to eventually fixing the exchange. For a time the rupee continued to fall, but subsequently it rose, and since January, 1898, has been practically stable at 1*s.* 4*d.* This rate has now a legal sanction, since an Act of 1899 makes the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign, the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount. At the present low price of silver, the rupee at 1*s.* 4*d.* is worth much more than the value of the silver which it contains. Some years after 1893 the coinage of Indian rupees almost ceased, but in recent years there have been large coinages.

ince 1st April, 1900, the profit from silver oinage has been held as a special reserve—ow called the Gold Standard Reserve Fund—hich is mostly sent to England for investment sterling securities, for the purpose of main-aining the rate of exchange between England nd India. On 31st March, 1906, the investments f this fund in sterling Government stocks mounted to a nominal value of over £12,000,000. ndia has a paper currency, and the 5-rupee note legal tender everywhere in India proper. Other otes are a legal tender only within the circles f issue. A nickel currency was adopted in 1906 r annas, and bronze for other coins of small nomination.

ARMY.—The Army in India consists, first, of ritish troops, about 78,800; and, secondly, of e native troops (largely Mahommedans), about 4,350 (for details see page 487). For police ties and frontier service the regular military is pplemented by frontier militia and local levies. addition, the native Army Reserves number ,755 men, and the Imperial Service Troops rnished by native States contribute 17,540, cluding cavalry, transport corps, and sappers. rther, there are 30,380 European and Eurasian olunteers (efficients). The Army was renum-red and renamed in 1903. Considerable anges have taken place during 1902–6 in the rganisation, &c., of the Army. An Army Order Oct., 1904, provided for a redistribution of e Army, enabling all three arms to be trained gether in the various centres. The Army ow consists of the Eastern, Western, and orthern Commands, and the Secunderabad nd Burma Divisions. Factories for making fles, cordite, and gun carriages are being rected. The transport service is being im-roved. A Staff College is being established at uetta. Additions to soldiers' pay and enlarged penditure on armament, stores, transport, ctories, &c., have increased the net military penditure from £14,968,000 in 1895–1900 to 19,586,000 in 1905–6. For the next few years ere will be increased expenditure for artillery, -erves of arms and ammunition, redistribution troops, increase in officers, supply of stores, fence works, and improvements in general ficiency. The health of the Army has improved recent years.

The ROYAL INDIAN MARINE consists of the ur troopships of over 1,500 tons given below, ree other steamers of about 1,000 tons each, nd smaller craft for harbour and river naviga-on, surveying, and submarine mining. The ardinge was added during 1901, and the ufferin in 1904. The trooping service between ngland and India is carried out by hired eamers, under the superintendence of the irector of Transports at the Admiralty. The rincipal officers and troopships of the R.I.M. re as follows:—

irector R.I.M., and Resident Transport Officer, Bombay, Capt. G. H. Hewett, R.N. ... Rs. 2,500
ssist. ditto (Bombay), Capt. F. H. Elderton, D.S.O.
eputy ditto (Calcutta), Capt. W. Chandler.

EDUCATION during 1905 benefited by increased grants for primary education. Reforms in university education are in progress, and increased attention is now being given to the development of primary, commercial, agricultural, and technical education. In State institutions education is secular. The institutions in 1904–5 numbered 156,736 and the scholars 5,036,240, of whom only 560,340 were females. Of the institutions, about 70 per cent. are maintained by the State or aided by grants, the remainder being private and unaided. There are five Universities, viz., those of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and the Punjab University. The Indian Universities Act of 1904 provides for a teaching system. Of the total expenditure on education in 1904–5, £3,209,000, £944,000 came from fees, and £1,578,000 from provincial revenues or local and municipal funds. The census of 1901 showed that only 1 male in 10 and 1 female in 144 can read and write.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule. The municipalities in 1904–5 were 746 in number, controlling a total population of 16,663,000, and receiving an income of £2,592,000 from taxation (octroi, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, conservancy rates, &c.), of £2,689,000 from loans, &c., and £920,000 from other sources. The members of municipal bodies are chiefly natives and non-official. In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative. Nearly one-half of their total expenditure of £2,565,000 in 1904–5 was devoted to civil works, one-fifth to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals.

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—There are about 7,000 officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction. Many of the superior and by far the majority of the inferior officers are natives. In 1904 about 1,758,000 persons were tried, and 830,000 convicted in criminal cases, and of these 467 were sentenced to death, 2,070 to penal servitude, and 149,000 to imprisonment. The strength of the police in 1904 was 26,020 officers and 133,250 men, of whom 48,960 carried firearms. There were 740 prisons, with a daily average of 95,030 prisoners, in 1904. At the convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) there were 14,212 prisoners on 31 March, 1905.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The statistics of births are unsatisfactory. Both birth rate and death rate are high. The death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1904 ranged from 26·56 per 1,000 in 1898 to 38·91 in 1900. In 1904 it was 33·05. Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhœa, small-pox, and (since 1896) plague, being other chief causes. The deaths from plague in the four years to 1904 were nearly 3,500,000 in India as a whole. About 22,000 people are killed by snakes every year. In 2,368 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 22,900,000 patients were treated in 1904. According to the census of 1901 there were 97,340 lepers in India.

SURVEYS.—The Survey Department superintends forest and cadastral surveys, as well as trigonometrical and topographical surveys, special explorations, and map production. Marine, geological, and botanical surveys are in operation, while the archæological survey has been recently extended. The Meteorological Department is of great service in forecasting rainfall.

Among the countries constituting the British Empire, India comes second to the United Kingdom itself in the volume of its sea-borne trade, which is greater than that of Canada and Australia combined. The ordinary course of Indian trade shows a large yearly net export of merchandise and a net import of treasure. The above table exhibits the leading figures for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling. It will be observed that the year 1905-6, like the preceding years, was remarkably prosperous. During the three years ended 1905-6 India absorbed over £42,000,000 of gold and silver.

As will be seen, the great bulk of the imports consist of manufactured articles, while nearly 70 per cent. of the exports consist of food and raw materials. Of the imports in 1905-6, cotton goods and yarn constituted about 41 per cent. (nearly all from the United Kingdom), and metals and metal manufactures 15 per cent. The imports of cotton goods in 1905-6 were of unprecedented magnitude. Large imports of machinery were a sign of industrial activity. Sugar imports continue to grow, but mineral oil declines owing to the fast increasing output in Burma. The imports of Government stores are mainly railway materials. In the export trade there was some decline in rice, and especially in wheat and other grains, but exports of cotton goods, jute and jute goods, tea, coffee, hides and skins, raw wool, and lac have increased. Jute, raw and manufactured, has been sold at record prices. The exports of indigo have fallen rapidly in recent years.

The following table shows the distribution of Indian sea-borne trade in 1905-6:—

In imports, the United Kingdom comes easily first with nearly two-thirds of the total, no other country sending more than about 4 per cent. In exports, the United Kingdom is much less prominent, on account of the wide demand for India's raw produce for food and manufactures. About 65 per cent. of India's total trade is with Europe, and about 23 per cent. with Asia.

Customs Duties.—Under the Indian Tariff Act, most goods imported pay a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem. Cotton yarn and thread are exempted from duty; but the tax on other cotton goods is 3½ per cent., a corresponding Excise duty being levied on those woven in Indian mills. There are special duties on arms and ammunition, which are taxed mainly for police purposes. Spirits pay generally Rs. 7 a gallon; and salt pays Re. 1 a maund (82 lb.) in Burma, and Rs. 1½ in the rest of India. Refined petroleum pays 1 anna a gallon. Iron and steel goods pay 1 per cent. Machinery, coal, raw cotton, jute and wool, grain and pulse, oilcake, manures, living animals, unmanufactured tobacco, quinine, gold, precious stones and pearls, and a few other articles are free from duty. Bounty-fed sugars pay, on import into India, countervailing duties calculated according to the amount of the bounty given. There is an export duty of 3 annas per maund on rice. The Government of India have adopted an attitude of strong opposition to preferential tariff proposals. They point out that two-thirds of India's imports come from the United Kingdom, while among the remainder are many articles which this country cannot produce. The exports are chiefly commodities that are untaxed or lightly taxed in foreign countries, and if retaliatory imposts were levied on these India's trade would decline and her capacity to meet her financial obligations abroad would be impaired.

Shipping.—In 1905-6 the number of vessels which entered from and cleared to foreign countries was 9,269, with a tonnage of 12,598,321 tons. Of this tonnage, approximately 63 per cent. was from or to the United Kingdom and British possessions; and 82 per cent. of the total trade of India was under the British flag.

Ports.—The chief ports are Calcutta and Bombay, which together do about 75 per cent. of the total trade. Next come Rangoon, Karachi, Madras, and Chittagong. These ports are administered by port trusts having wide powers, but subject to Government supervision.

Foreign Land Trade of India.—As registration is difficult, the statistics include much that is really trade with border tracts administered by, or States subject to, the Indian Government. The most important countries are Afghanistan, Nepal, Kashmir, and the Shan States. The course of this trade in merchandise and treasure has been as follows:—

| | Imports. | Exports. | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|
| | 000 omitted. | 000 omitted. | 000 omitted. |
| 1903-4 ..... | £5,230 | £3,964 | £9,194 |
| 1904-5 ..... | 5,712 | 4,501 | 10,213 |
| 1905-6 ..... | 6,265 | 4,902 | 11,167 |

Agriculture is by far the most important occupation of the people of India. Out of a surveyed area of 556 million acres in British territory in 1904-5, for which returns exist, 247 millions were cropped or fallow, 105 millions cultivable, 136 millions not cultivable, and 69 millions under forests. In 1904-5 the total area cropped was 239 million acres, of which 10 per cent. was under wheat, 31 per cent. under rice, and 37 per cent. under other food-grains and pulses, 6 per cent. under oilseeds, and 7 per cent. under cotton, jute, and other fibres. The area under wheat has been considerably increased by the aid of irrigation in the Punjab and United Provinces. Sugar, spices, tea, opium, and tobacco are other important crops. The cultivation of indigo has greatly declined. The agricultural departments (central and provincial), which were greatly developed in 1906, supply information as to crop prospects, new staples, manures, crop experiments, implements, cattle-breeding, &c., and distribute seeds. Owing to the increasing world demand for raw cotton, great efforts are being made to cultivate a superior long-stapled cotton in India.

Minerals.—The output of the coal mines in India in 1905 was 8,418,000 tons. The production has much increased in recent years. Six-sevenths of the total comes from Bengal. The production of crude petroleum in India (chiefly Burma) has increased from 13 million gallons in 1895 to 145 millions in 1905. The production of salt averages about 1,200,000 tons annually. The output of manganese ore has been much increased, and amounted in 1904 to 253,900 tons. About 20,000 tons of saltpetre are produced annually, mostly for export. The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was 631,000 oz. in 1905. There is an increasing output and export of mica, rubies, and jade.

Manufactures.—In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive, though they suffer more and more from the competition of machine-made goods. Cotton-weaving is by far the most important hand industry. Power mills have grown up under European auspices, but are now largely owned by natives. The 203 cotton mills at work in 1905-6, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad, representing a capital of £11,700,000, contained 5,234,000 spindles and 52,300 looms. Up-country cotton mills have increased. Complaints are made of the long hours worked in some Bombay mills. The production in 1905-6 was 681 million lb. of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 164 million lb. of woven goods. There is a tendency to produce finer yarns, and to pay more attention to weaving. The 38 jute mills, nearly all in Calcutta and its vicinity, with a capital of £5,396,000, contained 453,000 spindles and 22,000 looms. There were, in 1904, 6 woollen and 8 paper mills, 27 breweries, and various other factories. There is an Indian Factory Act.

NATIVE STATES OF INDIA.

THE Native or Feudatory States, whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King-Emperor, comprise about two-fifths of the area, but only one-fifth of the population of India. The administration of these States, with a few temporary or unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject, in varying degrees, to the control of the Supreme Government. The chiefs have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States; the military force they maintain is strictly limited; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and in case of misgovernment the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers. Since 1858 six native chiefs have been deposed. In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c., the Supreme Government has jurisdiction. Some States pay tribute, most do not. Generally speaking, the States are governed by their native Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the help and advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States. A common characteristic of all native States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Legislative Councils of the Governor-General or of the Provincial Governments cannot legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction.

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore) and Kalat (Quetta and Pishin) are still technically Native States territory. The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs. Excluding these countries, the native States have a combined area of 679,393 square miles, and a population of 62,461,549. The aggregate revenues of the chiefs are about £15,000,000, out of which a tribute of £634,000 (£233,000 from Mysore) was paid to the Government of India in 1904-5. They maintain troops of inferior military organisation to the aggregate number of 85,000 men in addition to their Imperial Service troops, numbering 17,540 in 1906. In many treaties with Indian States it is provided that they shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of native States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. The States vary greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad, for instance, is as large as Italy, and the Nizam enjoys a gross revenue of about £2,400,000. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub-division, there are many chiefs of single villages. In the case of such petty estates, it is not correct to speak of native rule; the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity. The amount of control thus exercised over a native State in its internal affairs depends upon a number of considerations, and varies from State to State. The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connection with the majority of their subjects. Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Mohammedan, but most of his people are Hindus. Although the native States, large and small, number as many as 680, only about 200 are of any real importance. The majority of these States represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century. Thus the rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India. Lord Curzon reformed the Chiefs' Colleges and inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles.

The salutes enjoyed by the native princes may be taken to indicate their relative importance. Those with eleven guns or more are addressed by the title of His Highness. Some of the chiefs, who by their enlightened administration or for other causes have earned the special approbation of Government, have had their salutes increased; but such increase is personal and lapses at death. On page 501 is a list of chiefs having salutes of thirteen guns or more, with some particulars as to their States. In each group the States are given in alphabetical order. In addition there are 35 chiefs having salutes of eleven guns, and 26 chiefs with salutes of nine guns.

The native States may be classed under fifteen heads:—1. The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the North-East Frontier. 2. The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Jaipur (Vizagapatam) Agency. 3. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal (including Kashmir). 4. The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the north-west frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range, a distance of 800 miles. The names of many of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis, &c., have become familiar owing to the frequent expeditions against them in recent years. 5. Kalat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes. 6. The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej. 7. The three northern Mohammedan States of Khairpur in Sind, Bahawalpur to the north-east of it, and Rampur, from which Warren Hastings expelled the Rohillas in 1774. 8. The ancient sovereignties of Rajputana, lying between Sind and the United Provinces. 9. The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda, and to the south and east of Rajputana. 10. Gujarat, including Kutch and the numerous petty chiefships of Kathiawar. 11. Baroda. 12. The Southern Mahratta States. 13. Hyderabad. 14. Mysore. 15. The Malayalim States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in the far south-west.

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, are under the direct supervision of the Governor-General in Council. Other States are under the various Provincial Governments. The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, Gwalior, Indore, Baroda, and Travancore and Cochin. Hyderabad is the premier State in India. The present Nizam was installed in 1884. Its capital, Hyderabad (448,466), is the fourth city in India in population.

* Within their own territories these chiefs have salutes of 21 guns permanently.

† The present chief has a personal salute of two additional guns, or, in the case of Jaipur, of four additional guns.

The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, 122,618) was granted to Gholab Sing by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846). It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. The present Maharaja came to the throne in 1885, since which date the administration of the State has been much improved under the advice of the British Resident. A British force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar; while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops, depending for their support on the Peshawar border. Of the Sikh States the most important is Patiala. Rajputana extends some 460 miles from north to south, and is 530 miles in breadth; it has a population of 9,723,301. About half of the area is desert. It comprises 19 States of varying size and importance. Of these 16 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs, two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Mohammedan. The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur (capital, Jaipur, 160,167). The Rajput dynasties, which are the most ancient in India, go back before the Moghul Empire, and resemble feudal monarchies. A large part of the area of Jodhpur, Bikaner, and Jaisalmir is desert. The Governor-General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer; he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers, distributed among the States to overlook the administration, and give advice when it is required. The Central India States, which are one-third less in extent than Rajputana, are split up into nearly four times as many States, of which all but 17 are petty chiefships. The two most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one-half of the whole area. In Jan., 1903, the Maharaja Holkar of Indore abdicated in favour of his son, a lad of twelve. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency. Bhopal, one of the principal Mohammedan States in India, is now for a fourth generation under female rule. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed, but the native administration was continued under an adopted heir. In 1881 Mysore, which had been administered by the Indian Government since 1831, was restored to native rule. The present Maharaja attained his majority in 1902, and was formally installed by the Viceroy. Numerous minor States are under the supervision or control of the adjacent British Provinces of Bengal, Assam, the Punjab, United Provinces, Central Provinces, Bombay, and Madras. The important States of Travancore and Cochin, attached to Madras, represent ancient Hindu dynasties. The former stands third in population among the native States, and is exceedingly prosperous. Its Christian population numbers about 700,000. Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1890, when also the boundaries of Sikkim and Tibet were defined by the Sikkim-Tibet Convention.

Countries within the Indian Sphere of Influence.

THE native States of Nepal and Bhutan, though in India, enjoy a large measure of independence, and may be more conveniently treated as within the Indian sphere of influence than under the heading of Native States. Outside India, but within its sphere of influence, is Afghanistan. For French and Portuguese possessions in India, see pages 587 and 614.

NEPAL.

Sovereign, H.H. Maharaja Sir Dhiraj-Prithvi Bir Bikram Jang Bahadur Shah Bahadur Shamsher Jang, K.C.S.I., b. 1875; suc. 1881. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Prime Minister, H.H. Maharaja Sir Chandra Shamsher Jang, G.C.S.I., Rana Bahadur (1901).

Nepal (500 miles long by 100 miles broad; area, about 54,000 sq. miles; pop. about 5,000,000), lying between British India and Tibet, occupies the S. slopes of the Himalayas, and includes, among other lofty peaks, Mt. Everest (29,141 ft.). Amid the wild, sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys. The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound. Nepal is divided into four provinces and fifteen districts. It trades with British India, to which its exports in 1905-6 were £2,345,000, while its imports amounted to £1,071,000. The principal trade route is that between Katmandu and Segowlie in Bengal. Nepal exports rice and other grains, oilseeds, ghi, cattle, jute, hides, spices, &c., and imports cotton goods, sugar, spices, tobacco, provisions, salt, petroleum, metals, &c. The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent and Customs duties, is about £1,000,000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religion is Buddhism. The country was conquered in 1767 by the Gurkhas, who claim to be Rajputs and are Hindus in religion. The Maharaja is a Sisodiya Rajput (Hindu). Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814. Relations have now long been friendly, and in the recent difficulties with Tibet Nepal co-operated with the Indian Government. The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the native rulers. The British Political Resident at the capital does not interfere in internal affairs. The army numbers about 35,000. The real political power rests with the Prime Minister. Representatives of Nepal greet each new Viceroy with messages and presents. Complimentary missions are also sent quinquennially to China. By arrangement with Nepal, India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments.

CAPITAL, Katmandu (pop. 50,000)—British Resident, Maj. J. Manners Smith, C.I.E. V.C. Rs. 2,750

BHUTAN.

Bhutan (area, about 20,000 sq. miles; pop. about 400,000) also lies on the S.E. of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal. In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India. The government is dual in form, with a spiritual chief, the Dharma Raja—who is an incarnation of the founder of the State—and a temporal chief, the Deb Raja, a Tibetan Buddhist, who governs. The chief councillor and virtual ruler, known as the Tongsa Penlop, was created a K.C.I.E. in 1905. The relations between Bhutan and India are friendly, and, like Nepal, Bhutan cordially co-operated with the Indian Government in recent difficulties with Tibet. Its trade with India in 1905-6 was £96,000. It receives an annual subsidy of £3,333 from the Indian Government. There is no British Resident.

CAPITAL, Punakha.

AFGHANISTAN.

Amir of Afghanistan and its Dependencies, His Highness Siraj-ul-millat-wad-din Amir Habib Ulla Khan, G.C.M.G.; b. 1872, succ. October 7, 1901. Salute in British territory, 21 guns.

Afghanistan (called Khorassan by the natives) lies on the N.W. frontier of India. Its area is estimated at 215,000 sq. miles. It is bounded on the W. by Persia (boundary fixed 1857 and 1904), on the S. by Baluchistan (boundary fixed 1896–7), on the N. by Asiatic Russia, and on the E. by the Punjab and N.W. Frontier Province (boundary fixed in 1895). The northern boundary was demarcated in agreement with Russia in 1887. It runs from Zulfikar on the Persian frontier, about 35 miles N. of the Paropanisus, as far as Kushk, the Russian railway terminus on the branch line from Merv. It then runs N.E., crossing the Murghab near Maruchak, to the Oxus. The line is marked by pillars or by natural features. The Oxus forms the northern boundary from Khamiab to Lake Victoria, whence the line to the Chinese frontier was fixed by the Pamir agreement of 1895. The Amir, in return for an increased subsidy from India, agreed to administer the narrow strip called Wakhan, lying between the new boundary and the Hindu Kush. At one point Russia and India are less than ten miles apart. On the Indo-Afghan frontier from the Pamirs to the Gomal Pass are many Pathan tribes, who are much influenced by mullahs.

Afghanistan is divided into five provinces, Kabul, Kandahar, Herat, Turkestan, and Badakshan (with Kafiristan and Wakhan), which are under governors, with subordinate nobles and judges, police, and revenue officers. Mountains, chief among which are the Hindu Kush, cover three-fourths of the country, the elevation being generally over 4,000 feet. The climate is dry, with extreme temperatures in winter and summer. The very mixed population is estimated at 5 millions. The Afghans (or Duranis) have been predominant since the middle of the 18th century, especially in Kandahar, while the Pathans of the Indo-Afghan frontier come next in importance, followed by the Ghilzais (military and commercial), Tajiks (aboriginals, who are cultivators or retail traders), &c. All are Sunni Mohammedans, except the Hazaras and Kizilbashes, who belong to the Shiite sect, and the Kafirs, who are idolaters. Their language is Pushtu. The late Amir (1880–1901) established an autocracy, and introduced a regular civil and military organisation, including offices for public works, posts, police, treasury, trade, &c. Considerable quantities of rifles and artillery have been supplied by the Government of India, purchased in Europe or made in Kabul, where factories for guns, rifles and ammunition, as well as for various commercial products, have been erected. The late Amir first formed a central army, estimated at 150,000 men, paid and controlled by himself, with transport services, &c. This army does not appear to possess much discipline or cohesion. There is a Supreme Council or Cabinet of chief officials, and a General Assembly composed of royal Sirdars, Khans, and Mullahs. The laws are Islamic sacred laws, tribal laws, and those of the Amir, who is the Court of Appeal. The law is bulky and the criminal law severe. There is bribery and evasion of the law. Officials are often corrupt. The only education is by the Mullahs. Most of the people are industrious cultivators, and the country has become more settled, peaceful, and prosperous. There is excellent irrigation and all profitable soil is utilised. There are generally two crops a year, one of wheat, barley, or pulse, the other of rice, millet, &c. Wheat is the staple food. Sheep and transport animals are bred. Afghanistan is rich in fruits of many kinds. Salt, rubies, and gold are mined. The roads are generally unsuitable for wheeled traffic, but have lately been improved, particularly where they may serve military purposes. Goods are conveyed by pack-animals. The trade of Afghanistan with India in 1905–6 was over £1,339,000. The exports to India are mainly fruits, raw wool, living animals, hides, ghi, and drugs; while the imports therefrom are chiefly cotton yarn and piece goods, metals, tea, and sugar. Heavy import and export duties were imposed by the late Amir. The chief passes and trade routes are the Khaibar, from Peshawar to Kabul (191 miles), and the Bolan, from Quetta to Kandahar (125 miles). The Sind-Pishin railway runs to Chaman, on the frontier, 65 miles from Kandahar, from which a fine road of 318 miles runs to Kabul. There is a large export of wool to Persia and Russia, cotton and silk goods, sugar, &c., being taken in exchange. Russia gives bounties and rebates. The annual revenue is unknown, and consists largely of payments in kind. There are taxes on land, customs duties, contract and registration fees, revenue from Government lands, monopolies, and factories, and mining royalties. It may amount to £1,000,000, including the subsidy of £120,000 a year from the Government of India. There is a native British Agent (a Mohammedan) at Kabul. The Amir has an agent with the Government of India, and an agent at Peshawar, and also commercial agents in England and India.

By agreement with the Amir, the "buffer State" of Afghanistan has no foreign relations with any Power except the Government of India. In all other respects it is independent, and the rule of the Amir despotic. In 1839 the country was occupied by British troops, but a revolt in 1842 at Kabul resulted in the destruction of an English army, and the abandonment of the country to its native rulers. A second British invasion in 1879 led to the temporary occupation of Kabul and Kandahar. The modern history of Afghanistan may be said to date from 1881, when Abdurrahman, the late Amir, was recognized by the British Government as ruler, and only the chief passes between Afghanistan and India were retained under British control. In 1904 the Amir's eldest son visited the Viceroy. As a result of a British mission to Kabul in the winter of 1904–5, the engagements which had existed with the late Amir since 1893 were renewed by the treaty of March 21, 1905. Under this treaty the British Government engaged to refrain from interference in internal affairs, but promised to preserve the safety and integrity of Afghanistan against any unprovoked attack, provided that the Amir acted as a friend and ally, and followed unreservedly the British Government's advice in all his external relations. The Amir will visit India at the beginning of 1907.

CAPITAL, Kabul (about 150,000). The chief commercial centre is Kandahar (50,000). The other provincial capitals are Herat (18,000), Tashkurgan (17,000), and Faizabad.

British Agent at Kabul, Malik Khuda Bakhsh Tiwana.

Foreign Countries Contiguous to India.

PERSIA borders on Baluchistan, through which a new trade route runs vid Nushki to Persian Seistan, but traffic is small (£57,268 in 1905-6). A railway was opened in 1905 from Quetta to Nushki, whence there is a caravan route, with wells, rest-houses, telegraph, &c. The demarcation of the Perso-Baluch frontier was partially carried out in 1872 and 1895, and was completed by Col. McMahon, who, under the treaty of 1857, was appointed in 1901 to arbitrate in a dispute arising from a change in the course of the Helmund, and issued his award in 1905. Boundary pillars were also fixed between Afghanistan and Seistan.

The Persian Gulf.—For three centuries England has taken the lead in Persian Gulf trade. She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter-tribal warfare on land and sea, erected light-houses, made surveys, laid down buoys and cables. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, 97 per cent. being carried in British vessels. The bulk of it is done by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt. The Arabian shores are low-lying deserts, the Persian coasts mountainous; while at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains. The heat is intense in summer. Natural harbours are few. The southern shores are Turkish, until the independent Arab tribes on the Pirate Coast are reached.

Bahrein (capital, Manama), governed by Sheikh Esa, is the largest of a group of islands, half-way up the Gulf, near the Arab coast (El Katr). It is the head-quarters of the pearl fisheries, which employ 30,000 hands, and a distributing centre for the adjacent mainland. Pearls, the only notable export, are sold to Europe through Bombay brokers. Rice, cotton goods, dates, and spices are the chief imports. In 1905 the exports were £1,363,000, and the imports £1,620,000. Trade is chiefly with India and Turkey. The people (about 75,000) are Mohammedans. The Sheikh has been in treaty relations since 1867 with the Government of India, which has a Political Agent at Bahrein.

The independent tribes on the Pirate (Arab) Coast are bound together under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea. Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs. The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf, stationed at Bushire, is the recognised arbiter in the quarrels of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag. The trade of the Arab coast ports in 1905 was £670,000, mostly exports of pearls to India vid Lingah and Bahrein. Important caravan routes converge at Koweit, the proposed terminus of the Bagdad railway, which has an excellent harbour, recently buoyed by the British India Steam Navigation Company, whose steamers call fortnightly. Practically all foreign trade is with Bombay. The Sultan of Omân (Muscat) is in treaty relations with, and subsidised by, the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at his Court (see page 609).

Political Resident, Persian Gulf, Bushire, Major P. Z. Cox, C.I.E.....per mensem Rs. 2,750
Do., Turkish Arabia, Baghdad, Maj. L.S. Newmarch Rs. 2,500
Political Agent, Muscat, Maj. W. G. Grey, Rs. 1,480
Pol. Agent, Bahrein, Capt. F. B. Prideaux Rs. 1,000
(For Persia, see pp. 610-612).

ASIATIC RUSSIA.—The pressure of Russian competition is felt politically and commercially through Persia and Afghanistan. Russian Turkestan, bordering on Afghanistan, comprises the province of Trans-Caspia, the Khanate of Bokhara, and the Pamir Region. Trade relations with Afghanistan are restricted by the Amir.

Trans-Caspia (area, about 220,000 sq. miles; pop. in 1897, 372,000).—The chief towns are Askhabad (19,500) and Merv (8,750). The Trans-Caspian Railway runs from Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian, vid Merv, crosses the Oxus at Charjui, and traverses Bokhara to Samarkand (pop. 59,000) and Tashkent. The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushkinski Post on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat, and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railway system. Another important strategic and commercial line (1,175 miles) connecting Tashkent directly with the main Russian system at Orenburg was opened in 1905. Tashkent, the capital of Turkestan, has 164,000 inhabitants, of whom one-fifth are Russians. The railways have much increased Russian trade. The soil, which is irrigated and highly cultivated in the oases, produces cotton on a large scale.

Bokhara (area, 92,300 sq. miles; pop. about 2,500,000) has been a vassal State since the Russians captured Samarkand in 1868. By the treaty of 1873, no foreigner can enter Bokhara without a Russian passport. The Amir, Syed Abdul Ahad (succeeded 1885), is autocratic. The revenue is about £800,000. The Uzbegs, fanatical Sunni Mohammedans of Turkish extraction, are the dominant race, but Turcomans, Kirghiz, Tajiks, and Sarts are numerous. The people are largely nomadic. The country consists mainly of mountains and deserts, but a portion is well irrigated and produces cotton, silk, cattle, &c. The Amu-Darya, or Oxus, which flows from the Pamirs and separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers. The capital, Bokhara (pop. about 100,000) is a great commercial city. Karshi (60,000) and Charjui (7,600) are other busy trade centres.

Russian territory stretches into the Pamir Region—the "Roof of the World"—a wind-swept, icy mountain-land, snow-bound for half the year. Its southern boundary was fixed in 1895 by the Anglo-Russian Pamir agreement.

CHINA.—India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province of China proper, Yunnan.

Chinese Turkestan (area, about 550,000 sq. miles; pop. about 1,250,000) is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuen-lun. The eastern portion is desert. There are three routes into China, three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan, and two still more difficult ones into India. The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined. The country is poor. Yarkand, Khotan, and Kashgar are large towns. Russia has special treaty rights in the north. There are British and Russian consuls at Kashgar. Trade with India has to be carried over the lofty Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet), or through Kashmir and Hunza over the Kilik Pass (15,800 feet) in the Hindu Kush. Ladakh, in Kashmir, is the entrepôt for this diminishing trade, valued in 1905-6 at £46,000.

Consul, Kashgar, G. Macartney, C.I.E....Rs. 1,450

Tibet, called Bodyul by the natives, is a dependency of China, containing an estimated population of 1,500,000. It forms the northern frontier of India, from Kashmir to Burma, but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas. In Tibet rise almost all the great rivers of India and China. The highest peak is Gurla Mandhata (25,350 ft.). It is itself a plateau of extraordinary altitude, seldom lower than 10,000 feet, and protected by the vast ranges of the Kuenlun on the north and the Himalayas on the south. Much of the country is still unexplored. The once mysterious capital, Lhasa 11,830 ft.), is 333 miles from Darjiling (Bengal). It is the religious centre of Lamaism, a special form of Buddhism, with about thirty great monasteries, and contains an estimated population of 30,000 (of whom 20,000 are monks), closely packed in dirty, irregular streets. Owing to the opposition of the Lamas, or monks, who control the country, access was denied to European travellers after 1846. Tibet offers a unique example of a theocracy. The ruler is the Dalai or Grand Lama, though China is represented by two Ambans for foreign and military affairs. The country is said to possess minerals. Northern Tibet is an arid region, but in the south there are fertile tracts in the valley of the Tsang-po. There is a large trade with China, in spite of the difficulties of transport over long, mountainous routes. The imports into India from Tibet are wool, borax, salt, living animals, and musk, and the exports from India to Tibet are cotton and woollen goods, coral, and grain. The Indian trade with Tibet in 1905-6 was about £290,000. Trade passes from Bengal through Sikkim or direct from the Punjab and the United Provinces. The route from Simla to the frontier, 180 miles, and that from Siliguri to the Tibet-Sikkim frontier, are being improved. Under the Anglo-Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890, a trade mart was opened at Yatung, beyond the Sikkim frontier. Owing to the failure of the Tibetans to observe this Convention, a Political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort, under Colonels Younghusband and Macdonald. After a very arduous march, and sharp fights at Tuna, Gyangtse, and elsewhere, Lhasa was reached on 3 August, 1904. A new convention having been signed (7 Sept.), the mission left Lhasa on 23 Sept. and returned safely to India. This convention provided for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet; for the establishment of trade marts at Gyangtse and Gartok as well as Yatung, and unrestricted traffic by existing routes according to a tariff to be agreed upon; for the appointment of British and Tibetan agents at the trade marts; and for payment of an indemnity of £500,000 (reduced to £166,667), pending which the Chumbi Valley would be occupied. The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to or permit the intervention of any foreign Power. By the Convention of Peking (27 April, 1906) China agreed to the terms of the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, sanctioned telegraph lines to the trade marts, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory. The new trade marts have been opened. A survey party proceeded at the close of 1904 from Gyarngse up the Tsang-po valley to the Mansarowar Lake (14,900 ft.) and back, returning thence to Simla. The Chinese Emperor appointed the Tashi Lama to succeed to the dignities of the Dalai Lama, who fled to Mongolia before the arrival of the British Mission at Lhasa. In Dec., 1905, the Tashi Lama visited India, and was received by the Prince of Wales.

Yunnan (area about 146,000 sq. miles; pop. about 12,500,000), a Chinese province to the N.E. of Burma, is a plateau of about 5,000 feet, intersected by large rivers and dotted with fertile plains. The Chinese occupy the plains, while aborigines inhabit the mountains. The people are poor. Large tracts are sparsely peopled and uncultivated. By agreements between Great Britain and China in 1894 and 1897, a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan, and arrangements were made about trade, extradition, &c. The boundary of Yunnan towards Assam and Tibet is undefined. Yunnan, as the hinterland of both French Indo-China and Burma, is of some political importance, but its commercial value has been exaggerated. By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan. The W. part of Yunnan is reached by a long and difficult, but much-frequented route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma, and the direct trade is about £500,000 a year. Burma imports from Yunnan raw silk, living animals, opium, &c., and exports raw cotton, cotton yarn and piece-goods, and jade. A railway from Bhamo to Tēng-yuēh is under survey. Hsia-kuan and Tali-fu are the chief trade centres in W. Yunnan. The shortest route to southern, eastern, and central Yunnan is through French Tonkin. A railway from Laokai, on the Tonkin frontier, to Yunnan-fu is under construction. The trade between Yunnan and Tonkin was £1,440,000 in 1905. Other trade routes are up the Canton or West River to E. Yunnan, and up the Yang-tze-kiang to N. Yunnan. There are treaty "ports" at Tēng-yuēh, near the Burma frontier, 120 miles from Bhamo, opened in 1902, and at Mengtzu, near the Tonkin frontier. The roads in Yunnan are bad, and transport, which is by pack-animals, is expensive. The chief products are opium, rice, wheat, and beans. Tin is worked in the south, copper in the north-east, and salt in many parts. Mining and trade are impeded by officialism and corrupt exactions. British consuls are stationed at Tēng-yuēh (Momein) and Yunnan-fu (see p. 577). Opium and tin are the only important exports. The annual production of opium is estimated at 5½ million lb., valued at about £1,500,000. Tin (valued at £525,000 in 1905) goes through Tonkin to Hong Kong, whence cotton yarn and piece-goods, petroleum, &c., are sent in exchange. There are post-offices, telegraphs, and banking facilities in the chief towns. CAPITAL, Yunnan-fu (pop. 70,000).

FRENCH LAOS.—Through the cession of a portion of Laos by China in 1894, France obtained access to the left bank of the Mekong at a point where this river forms the boundary of the Shan States of Burma. The territory forms part of French Indo-China (see pp. 587-8).

SIAM marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles, but the border country is for the most part mountainous and difficult, and no great trade is carried on over the frontier except with Zimme or Chiengmai in North Siam. In 1905-6 the total trade was £425,000. The boundary of Burma and North-West Siam was demarcated in 1891. (For Siam see pp. 619-20.)

British Dominions beyond the Seas.

THE following accounts of the different British Colonies and Possessions have been revised by the local Governments, to whom the Editor begs to return his warmest thanks. He is also indebted to the "Colonial Office List," which contains information upon every subject connected with the Dominions beyond the Seas.

CEYLON,

an island in the Indian Ocean, to the south-east of the peninsula of Hindustan, is situated between 5° 53½′—9° 50′ N. lat. and 79° 48′—81° 54′ E. long. Its area is (with outlying islands) 25,481 square miles, or more than three-fourths of that of Ireland. Its greatest length is from north to south, 270 miles; and its greatest width 140 miles.

The climate varies with the altitude of the district; but on the whole, though tropical, it is healthy, except in the low-lying jungle. There are no great extremes of temperature, and throughout the low country the thermometer varies little in the course of the year, the mean temperature at Colombo being nearly 81° F. The coolest months are December and January; the hottest are April and May.

The estimated population at December 31, 1905, was 3,950,123, the most important element being the Singhalese, descendants of colonists from the valley of the Ganges, who first settled in the island about B.C. 543. (Census, 1901: Singhalese, 2,330,807; Tamils, a race of Southern India, 951,740; Moormen and "other races," 253,625; Burghers and Eurasians, 23,482; and Europeans, 9,211. "Other races" include a sprinkling of Veddahs, who are perhaps the aboriginal race of the island, and of Afghans and Malays.) In 1507 the Portuguese landed in Ceylon and formed settlements along the coast; but about 150 years later they were dispossessed by the Dutch. In 1796 the British took possession of the Dutch settlements on the island, and annexed them to the Presidency of Madras; but five years after, in 1801, Ceylon was erected into a separate Crown colony. In 1815 the King of Kandy was deposed and banished; and his dominions, which had up to that time maintained their independence of European rule, were annexed to the British Crown.

The staple products of the islands are agricultural. The most important for home consumption is rice in its two forms of padi and dry grain. The principal exports are tea, coffee, and products of the coco-nut palm, cinchona, rubber, cocoa, cinnamon, cardamoms, ebony, and a little vanilla.

About one-fourth of the island is under cultivation, and the leading areas in 1905, in acres, were:—Rice, 610,000; other grain, 120,000; tea, 380,000; coffee, 4,000; coco-nuts, 820,000; cinchona, 500; cinnamon, &c., 64,000; cocoa, 33,000; and tobacco, 25,000. Among the more important native industries are gold, silver, ivory and tortoise-shell work, pottery, mats, fans, and wood-carving. Ceylon is famous for precious stones, especially catseyes, rubies, &c.; and the pearl fishery in the Gulf of Mannar, off the N.W. of the island, yielded a revenue of Rs. 2,405,645 in 1905. The manufacture of salt is a Government monopoly, and yielded in 1904 a revenue of Rs. 1,089,667.

There are 561 miles of railway open, 494 being 5 ft. 6 in. gauge and 67 miles 2 ft. 6 in.; and in 1904 the post and telegraph offices numbered 375, there being 3,197 miles of telegraph wire.

The Government of Ceylon is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 5 members, and a Legislative Council of 18 members, including the Governor and the Executive Council.

The Legislative Council contains representatives of the principal races and interests in the island.

For administrative purposes the island is divided into 9 provinces, at the head of each of which is a Government agent. The larger towns have municipalities or local boards; and in the country districts the natives retain their village councils and tribunals for matters of minor importance.

The MALDIVE ARCHIPELAGO lies to the S.W. of Ceylon, a few degrees north of the equator. Malé, the seat of government, is about 400 miles distant from Ceylon, to which the islands have always been nominally tributary. The Sultan acknowledges his allegiance by sending an annual embassy to Colombo. The natives are Mohamedans. The islands are unhealthy, and the main exports are dried fish, cowry shells, coco-nut coir, and tortoiseshell.

Colombo, distant 6,300 miles; transit, 17 days.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

The Settlements forming what is known as the Colony of the Straits Settlements are Singapore, Penang, or Prince of Wales's Island (with Province Wellesley and the Dindings), and Malacca; the name being derived from the Straits of Malacca, on which the Settlements are situated. The Cocos or Keeling Islands, a coral group in the Indian Ocean, on the route from Ceylon to Australia, have since 1886 been a dependency of the Straits Settlements. Christmas Island, also in the Indian Ocean, was formally annexed to the Settlement of Singapore in 1900, and the Cocos Islands in 1903. The colony has an entire area of about 1,500 square miles. The population in 1901 was 572,249 (Singapore, 228,555; Penang, Prov. Wellesley and Dindings, 248,207; Malacca, 95,487). The great bulk of the population consists of Chinese and Malays.

The Government consists of a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 8 members, and a Legislative Council of 8 official and 7 unofficial members, appointed by the Crown. Two of the unofficial members are nominated by the Chambers of Commerce at Singapore and Penang. The resident Councillors of Penang and Malacca have seats in both Councils. The law of the colony is the common and statute law of England as it was 1826, qualified by Indian Acts until 1867 and since then by local ordinances. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and three puisne judges, and constitutes also a court of appeal, from which there is yet another appeal in certain cases, viz., to the Privy Council. There is also in Singapore and Penang a Vice-Admiralty Court; and in each settlement there are ordinary magistrates' courts, together with Courts of Requests.

The climate of the colony is almost uniform throughout the year, and foliage is perennial. The rainfall in 1905 amounted in Singapore to 90 inches, in Penang to 80·52 inches, and in Malacca to 71·99 inches.

The exports comprise—gutta-percha, gambier, copper, india-rubber, horns, hides, canes, sugar, rice, sago, tapioca, spices, dye-stuffs, copra, rattans, coffee, tobacco, gums, tin, &c.

SINGAPORE is an island situated off the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, from which it is separated by a narrow strait about three-quarters of a mile in width; its length is about 27 miles, and its breadth 14 miles; it comprises, with the adjoining islets, an area of 206 square miles. It was first occupied in 1819, and formally ceded to the British Government by the Sultan of Johore in 1824. The seat of government for all the settlements is the town of Singapore, situated on the south side of the island in lat. 1° 16′ N. and long. 103° 53′ E., with 228,500 inhabitants in 1901. The harbour, in the extent of its shipping, is one of the greatest ports in the world, being a port of call for vessels trading between Europe or India and the Far East, the North of Australia, and the Netherlands Indies. For its defence several batteries to carry heavy guns have been constructed, at a cost of nearly £100,000, paid by the colony, for which the Imperial Government has furnished guns. The trade returns for 1905 (including inter-settlement trade) amounted to $460,673,463, the value of exported tin being $38,979,833.

The number of merchant vessels entered and cleared in 1905, exclusive of native craft, was 10,510, with a tonnage of 12,764,374. The total for the whole colony was 18,501, with a tonnage of 18,890,600. The total native craft entered at all three ports during the same year was 16,429 (tonnage, 767,293). The climate is fairly healthy for Europeans, except for the absence of any marked change of temperature throughout the year. It is a free port; no duties are levied upon anything except opium, spirits, wines, and beer consumed in the colony. The opium and spirit trades are farmed out to Chinese, and the Chinese element is conspicuous among the trading classes.

PENANG is the northernmost of the Settlements. It includes Pulo Penang or Prince of Wales's Island (on the eastern side of which is Georgetown, the port and capital—population 1901, 128,830), and the strip of mainland opposite, known as Province Wellesley (population 1901, 115,264).

The DINDINGS, 80 miles to the south of Penang, have also been included in the Settlements for administrative purposes under the Resident Councillor, who also has consular authority over the Siamese Tributary States on the west coast of the peninsula between Province Wellesley and British Burma (population 1901, 4,113). Penang island, about 15 miles long and 9 broad, is situated off the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, in lat. 5° 28′ N., long. 100° 21′ E., and was ceded to the Government of India in 1786 by the Raja of the neighbouring territory, Kedah. Area, 107 square miles. At the time it was founded, Penang was the only British settlement in further India; now it is the emporium for all the trade of the northern and more prosperous parts of Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. Its aggregate trade for 1905 (including inter-settlement trade) amounted to $172,727,461; the export of tin from the port being $41,927,073 in 1905.

PROVINCE WELLESLEY is a strip of coast about 45 miles in length with an area of 288 square miles, ceded by the Raja of Kedah in 1798, with some land S. of the Krian river acquired more recently. The province is in a high state of cultivation as compared with the neighbouring territory, containing rice, sugar, spices and tapioca plantations.

The Dindings are at present little developed; but they contain what is considered the best port on the western side of the peninsula, named Lumut, where a District Officer is stationed, and steamers call regularly at Pulo Pangkor. They comprise a group of islands (of which Pulo Pangkor is the largest); and a strip of the mainland on the west coast of the peninsula cut out of the State of Perak, and measuring about 22 miles long by about 10 miles in width.

MALACCA, the largest of the Settlements, situated on the western coast of the peninsula, between Singapore and Penang, and about 110 miles to the N.W. of Singapore, comprises an area of about 659 square miles. It is one of the oldest European settlements in the East, having been taken possession of by the Portuguese in 1511, and held by them till 1640, when the Dutch drove them out. In 1795 it was captured by the British, and retained till 1818, when it was restored to the Dutch; it finally became a British possession, in pursuance of the treaty with Holland, 17 March, 1824, being exchanged for the British settlements in Sumatra.

THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES.

These States are situated on the mainland of the Malay Peninsula, and are closely connected with the Straits Settlements; they consist of the States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which have by treaty (1895) renewed their engagements with the British Government, and are administered under the advice of a British Resident General, who controls the Residents subject to the instructions of the High Commissioner, who is also Governor of the Straits Settlements.

The first three States are on the west coast, and extend from the border of Province Wellesley to that of the independent State of Johore. Pahang is on the east coast. All are governed by their native rulers under the above-mentioned control.

There are 396 miles of railway open, and a line connecting Penang with Singapore is under construction, all constructed from revenue. 1,785 miles of first-class roads, and 623 miles of bridle-paths, while the principal rivers are navigable for small boats. The chief export and source of revenue is tin, of which about seven-tenths of the world's supply is produced. Coffee, sugar, rice, and rubber are extensively cultivated. The climate is very uniform, and may be described as hot and moist. There is no well-marked dry season, and the rainfall in the low country is about 95 inches. The average maximum temperature is 90°, and the minimum 70°.

The States maintain a highly efficient regiment of Sikh troops (the Malay States Guides), and are policed by a mixed force of Indians and Malays, officered by Europeans.

HONG KONG.

The Crown Colony of Hong Kong consists of an island situate off the south-eastern coast of China, at the mouth of the Canton River, in 22° 10′–22° 17′ N. lat. and 114° 6′–114° 18′ E. long., and of a portion of the mainland.

Hong Kong was first taken possession of by Great Britain in January, 1841, and was formally ceded by the Treaty of Nankin in 1842, British Kowloon being subsequently acquired by the Peking Convention of 1860: and the "New Territory," being the southern part of the Kwangtung province, by a lease signed June 9, 1898. It is a military and naval station for the protection of British commerce. The island is about 11 miles long and from 2 to 5 miles wide, with an area of 30½ square miles; the whole colony comprises an area of about 400 square miles. The island lies close to the mainland, being separated at one point by a narrow strait (Lyeemoon) not more than a quarter-mile wide. The city of Victoria lies along the northern shore of the island, facing the mainland; and between the mainland and the city is the harbour, which is one of the finest in the world, with a water area of some 10 square miles. The port is free, and is fortified. It possesses excellent docks, capable of holding the largest vessels for the purposes of repair, while others are being constructed. There is a considerable ship repairing and construction industry. In the year 1904 shipping to the extent of 11,205,516 tons entered the port.

The island is broken in shape and mountainous, the highest point being Victoria Peak, which is over 1,800 feet high. The Peak District is a favourite place of residence, and is reserved for Europeans. The hot season lasts from May to October. During the winter months, from November to March, the climate is cooler, drier, and more invigorating. The thermometer ranges from a minimum of 32° in February to a maximum of 93° in August. The average annual rainfall is 85 in., of which not less than 70 in. are received between May and September, when the S.W. monsoon prevails.

Hong Kong is the centre of a vast trade in many kinds of produce, chiefly opium, sugar, flour, oil, amber, cotton, ivory, betel, sandalwood, rice, tea, woollens, silks, salt, &c.

The population of the colony in 1905 was 377,850, of whom 360,228 were Chinese. The white residents, including naval and military, numbered 10,835.

Much encouragement is given by the Government to education in the colony. In 1905 there were 83 schools subject to Government supervision, attended by 5,323 pupils. There were also many private schools, attended by 4,052 pupils, and special schools for European and non-European children.

Hong Kong is a Crown colony, and its government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 8 members, together with a Legislative Council of 14 members, including himself and a representative from the Chamber of Commerce. There is also a Sanitary Board, partly elected, which controls all sanitary measures.

WEIHAIWEI.

The territory of Weihaiwei was leased to Great Britain by China by a convention made on the 1st day of July, 1898, and lies in latitude 37° 30′ N., longitude 122° 10′ E. It is situated in the Chinese province of Shantung, and comprises the island of Liu Kung, all the islands in the Bay of Weihaiwei, and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coast-line, with a total area of about 285 square miles, and an estimated population of 150,000, in which are included 4,000 resident on the island of Liu Kung. In addition to the leased territory there is a sphere of influence which comprises that portion of the province of Shantung lying east of the meridian 121° 40′—an area of 1,500 square miles. The winter is cold, but dry and bracing. The summer heat is not excessive, and the rainfall is, as a rule, small.

The Government is administered by a Commissioner, who discharges his functions under the Weihaiwei Order in Council of 24th July, 1901, by which he is empowered to make ordinances, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, for the administration of the territory, and provision is made for a High Court, in which all jurisdiction, civil and criminal, is vested, subject to an appeal to the Supreme Court of Hong Kong, and for District Magistrates' Courts. The village communities are administered through their headmen. Weihaiwei is a port of call for steamers running to and from the North of China, and there is regular steam communication with the port of Shanghai.

BORNEO.

Borneo was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521, and is situated in the Eastern Archipelago, extending from lat. 7° 4′ N. to 4° 10′ S., and from long. 108° 50′ to 119° 20′ E. It is about 850 miles in length and 600 in breadth, and contains an area of 280,000 square miles, divided by the equatorial line into two nearly equal portions. The population is probably about 1,846,000, consisting chiefly of Dyaks, Malays, Kyans, Papus or Negritos, Chinese, and Bugis (the aboriginal Celebes). Rather more than two-thirds of the island is now included within the Dutch possessions in the East Indies. The remainder of the island is under British protection.

THE BRITISH NORTH BORNEO COMPANY.

The territory of British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island of Borneo, with a total area of about 31,000 square miles, and a coast line of over 900 miles. The population is about 175,000, consisting mainly of Mohammedan settlers on the coast, and aboriginal tribes inland, with some Chinese traders and artisans. The interior is mountainous, Mount Kinabalu being 13,700 feet high, and is densely timbered.

The chief town is Sandakan, on the north-east coast. The appointment of the Governor is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State. For administrative purposes the whole district is divided into ten provinces. The laws are based on the Indian codes of criminal and civil procedure, by local proclamations. There is an Imam's Court for Mohammedan law.

| Imports ..... | 3,239,310 | 2,896,271 | 2,836,676 |

The principal sources of revenue are opium, spirit farms, birds'-nests, court fees, stamp duty, licences, import duties, royalties, land sales, &c. The chief products are timber, tobacco, sago, rice, gums, gutta-percha, coco-nuts, rattans, and all varieties of jungle produce. The country is suitable for the cultivation of sugar, tapioca, pepper, and gambier on a large scale. Coal and gold have been found. Exports of leaf tobacco, (1904) $2,516,661; (1905) $2,652,689.

Borneo is now connected by cable with the outer world by a branch of the cable between Labuan and Singapore, and between Labuan and Hong Kong. A telegraph line has been constructed from Mempakol, where the cable reaches land, to Sandakan, where there is also a telephone exchange. A railway is in course of construction from Brunei Bay into the interior, some 50 miles having been completed. A railway from Jesselton in Gaya Bay to Beaufort, 56 miles, was opened in 1901.

There is a native military force of 600 men under European officers, with one machine and four mountain guns. There is a Church of England and a Roman Catholic mission, and churches at Sandakan, Kudat, and Jesselton.

The Sarawak territory lies on the west coast of Borneo, with a seaboard of 400 miles, an area of about 50,000 square miles, and a population of about 600,000, composed of various races. The government of this district was obtained in 1842 from the Sultan of Borneo by the late Sir James Brooke, who became well known as Raja Brooke of Sarawak, and was uncle of the present Raja. Other concessions have been made in 1861, 1882, 1885, 1890, and 1904, when the Limbang River was obtained. The Lawas River was purchased from the B. N. Borneo Co. in 1906. The country produces sago, gutta-percha, india-rubber, beeswax, birds'-nests, gold, silver, diamonds, antimony, quicksilver, tobacco, rice, rattans, coal, gambier, and pepper. Gold exports, (1904) $1,789,773; (1905) $1,824,320.

LABUAN

is an island of the Malayan Archipelago, situated about 6 miles off the north-west coast of Borneo, in 5° 16′ N. lat. and 115° 15′ E. long. Its area is about 31 square miles; and its population is 8,411. It was ceded to Great Britain by the Sultan of Borneo in 1846, being at that time uninhabited. The island has a fine harbour, and possesses extensive coal-mines, which are now being developed, the annual export being nearly 50,000 tons. The exports consist of cloth, rice, sago, earthenware, brassware, &c. Victoria Harbour, in the south-east, is the principal inlet, and affords good anchorage; a rifle range is often utilised by passing ships of the Royal Navy; there is a cable station of the E.E. and A. Telegraph Company on the island. Revenue (1905), $47,055; expenditure, $51,854; imports, $1,087,664; exports, $1,301,349.

The government is administered by the Governor of the Straits Settlements.

Governor, Sir J. Anderson, K.C.M.G.
Colonial Sec., M. S. H. McArthur.

The British Possessions in North America include the whole of the northern part of that continent, excepting Alaska, and the small islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and extend from the United States northern boundary to the Arctic Ocean. From a physical point of view the whole region may be divided into an eastern and a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line. The eastern division comprises three areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Quebec, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 150,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. (3) The northern area, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian mountain range. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here, between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains and the Gold and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded. The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The country possesses great mineral wealth, and coal, gold, silver, copper, nickel, lead, petroleum, and asbestos are produced, while iron, phosphates, salt, graphite, &c., occur; the total value of the minerals produced in 1901 was about $70,000,000. The soil is generally fertile; all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated, and Canada, with its vast wheat-growing belt in Manitoba and the North-West, justifies its claim to be "Britain's Granary."

THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

The Dominion of Canada includes the various Provinces of North America formerly known as Upper and Lower Canada (now Ontario and Quebec respectively), New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, and the territories of the Hudson Bay Company, now styled Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, the North-West Territories, the Yukon Territories, and Ungava (a strip of coast from Ungava Bay to the Straits of Belleisle); in fact, the whole of British North America except Newfoundland and Labrador. This territory, nearly as large as Europe, stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and is estimated to contain a total area of 3,745,574 square miles, and a population of 5,766,606, which, notwithstanding its diversity of origin, is fast being welded into one harmonious and homogeneous whole. The descendants of the French colonists reside chiefly in the Province of Quebec, where, out of a total population (1901) of 1,648,898, 1,429,260 are Roman Catholics, the majority of whom still very generally use the French language. A Religious Census of Canada was taken in 1901, and the numbers were:—Roman Catholics 2,229,600, Methodists 916,886, Presbyterians 842,442, Church of England 680,620, Baptists 316,477, Congregationalists 28,293, and Lutherans 92,524. Canada possesses an Active Militia numbering 55,765 men (including infantry, cavalry, and artillery), and a reserve estimated at 1,030,000. The table on page 513 shows the expansion of the revenue, particulars being given for 1868, 1878, and 1888-1906. The revenue has increased from $13,687,928 in 1867-8 to $80,139,360 in 1905-6, and there has been a total net surplus since Confederation of $117,591,935. The population has increased from 1,538,500 in 1841 to 5,371,315 in 1901, and 5,766,606 (estimated) in 1906, the intermediate enumerations being (1851), 2,380,988; (1861), 3,182,418; (1871), 3,635,024; (1881), 4,324,810; and (1891), 4,833,239. In 1881 there were 35 cities and towns of 5,000 inhabitants and upwards, having a total population of 660,040; in 1901 there were 62 of such cities and towns, and their total population was about 1,330,000. Montreal, the largest city in the Dominion, has a population of 267,730 (or with suburbs, over 350,000), and Toronto, the capital of Ontario, has over 208,000 inhabitants. Ottawa, the political capital, had in 1901 60,000 inhabitants; Winnipeg, in Manitoba, from 241 in 1871, has grown to 42,300 in 1901, and the census of 1906 gives 90,234. Vancouver, in British Columbia, which had no existence in 1885, numbers over 26,000. The city of Dawson, the "business centre" of the Klondyke gold region, was a barren waste in 1897, and in 1901 had a population of 9,142. The general rate of increase throughout the Dominion in the last decade was a little over 11 per cent.

Canada was originally discovered by Sebastian Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first settlement (Quebec) was founded by them in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America. In 1870 the Province of Manitoba was formed, and, with the remainder of the Hudson Bay Territory, then known as the North-West Territories, admitted into the Dominion. In 1905 the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta were created, having previously formed part of the North-West Territories. British Columbia was admitted to the Dominion in 1871, and Prince Edward Island in 1873. By chaps. 3 and 27 of the Acts of 1905, the four provisional districts of Alberta, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, and Athabaska were formed into the two Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and were admitted into the Dominion on the 1st Sept. 1905, Newfoundland alone remaining a separate colony.

GOVERNMENT.

Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief, Right Hon. the Earl Grey, G.C.M.G. (appointed 1904 for five years) ..... £10,000
Aides-de-Camp, Capt. G. F. Trotter, D.S.O., M.V.O., Grenadier Gds.; Capt. D. O. C. Newton, Middx. Regt. ..... each 205
Governor-General's Secretary & Military Sec., Col. J. Hanbury-Williams, C.V.O., C.M.G. ..... 750
Comptroller of the Household, Arthur Guise.
Private Secretary, Arthur F. Sladen.

The executive government and authority are vested in the King, and exercised in his name by the Governor-General, aided by a Privy Council. The legislative power is a Parliament, consisting of an Upper House, styled the Senate, and a House of Commons. The Senate consists at present of 87 members, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 3 for British Columbia, 4 for Manitoba, 4 for Alberta, and 4 for Saskatchewan. The members of the Senate are appointed for life by the Crown on the nomination of the Ministry for the time being; each nominee must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a naturalborn or naturalised subject of the King, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The House of Commons is chosen every five years at longest, and consists at present of 214 members; 86 being elected for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 18 for Nova Scotia, 13 for New Brunswick, 10 for Manitoba, 7 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 5 for Alberta, 5 for Saskatchewan, and 1 for Yukon. The House of Commons is also composed of natural-born or naturalised subjects of the King; no property qualification is necessary, and its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, each of which returns a member on a majority of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Each province has also a separate Legislature and administration, with a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General, at the head of the Executive. Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by a separate judge, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO contains a total area of 222,000 sq. miles, and a population of 2,167,978, according to the census of 1901.

The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of 98 members elected for four years (no property qualification being necessary), representing 97 electoral districts into which the Province is divided, but which differ from those sending members to the Dominion Parliament. The Executive Council consists of eight members, acting as the Ministry of the Province; the legislature meets every year at Toronto. The principal cities are Toronto, the capital of the Province, with great shipping interests on the Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial and commercial activity (population, 207,971); Hamilton, the Federal capital, with a large lumber trade and woodenware manufactories (59,902); London (37,983), Kingston (18,043), Belleville (9,117), Chatham (9,075), Stratford (9,959), Guelph (11,496), St. Catharines (9,946), Brantford (16,613), St. Thomas (11,485), Windsor (12,154).

In 1905 the total area of cleared land was 13,925,902 acres, of which 8,897,898 acres were under crops, the total value of the land being $649,201,365. The total area under pasture was 3,291,235 acres, with 366,613 acres of orchards and gardens. Average production in bushels per acre: Fall wheat, 22·5; spring wheat, 18·8; barley, 31·4; oats, 39·6; rye, 16·9; peas, 19·0; corn, 70·9; buckwheat, 21·7; beans, 16·7; potatoes, 108·0; mangolds, 481·0; carrots, 335·0; turnips, 426·0; hay (tons), 1·94. The total wool clip amounted to 4,634,922 lb., the average weight of the fleeces being 6·59 lb. 1,141 cheese factories produced 154,879,438 lb. of cheese, valued at $12,908,118, and 248 creameries made 9,625,021 lb. of butter ($1,785,911). There were 672,781 horses, 2,889,593 cattle, 1,324,153 sheep, 1,896,460 pigs, and 9,737,993 poultry in 1905, the total value of the live stock being $172,438,314, and the value of animals sold or slaughtered in the year was $39,364,846. Fruit is grown on an extensive scale; there are vineyards and peach orchards of 50 or 60 acres in extent, and innumerable apple orchards. The Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph supplies a general education, together with a technical training in agriculture. The students meet part of their expenses by labouring on the experimental farm, the annual balance of cost for board, washing, and tuition being from £10 to £15 for natives and from £20 to £30 for students from other parts. Free grants of land are obtainable in this Province, and improved farms can also be bought at advantageous rates.

THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC contains an area estimated at 346,928 square miles, and a population (census 1901) of 1,620,974.

The Government of the Province is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Council, consisting of 24 members appointed for life, and a Legislative Assembly of 74 members elected for five years to represent the same number of electoral districts in the Province. The principal cities are Quebec (population, 68,824), the capital of the Province, with a large export timber trade, and the great seaport town of Canada; and Montreal (population, 300,000), the commercial metropolis, and the principal centre of the grain export trade north of New York, situate at the confluence of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. Other important cities are Three Rivers (8,334), Hull (11,265), Sherbrooke (10,110), St. Hyacinthe (10,016), Levis (7,301). Ocean-going steamers ascend the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal. The tonnage of sea-going vessels that arrived at and departed from the ports of Montreal and Quebec in 1892 was 1,440,481 tons and 945,403 tons respectively.

The lumber industry is still by far the most important trade, but the settled portion of the country has been too much denuded of wood, and the provincial Government has found it necessary to organise an effective service of rangers to prevent the destruction of trees by forest fires. The forest lands cover an area of 100,000,000 acres, of which 40,000,000 are under licence to cut timber. The wood-pulp industry is assuming great importance; several large factories have recently been built, and the value of the output, which was only $800,000 at the last census, is now probably ten times that amount. Improved farms may often be obtained in the eastern townships, largely occupied by settlers from Great Britain, at from £4 to £6 per acre, including dwelling-house, outbuildings, and fencing; while unimproved lands may be bought from the Government at from 10 to 60 cents per acre, and the purchase-money paid in five instalments. The area of land subdivided for the purpose of settlement unsold on 30 June, 1904, was 6,537,464 acres. In 1904 there were 1,122 cheese factories, 525 butter factories, and 517 butter and cheese factories combined, forming a total of 2,186.

NOVA SCOTIA, a Province of the Dominion, is a peninsula between 43° 30′—46° N. lat. and 61° 66° 15′ W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about sixteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 20,600 square miles, one-fifth part of which consists of lakes, rivers, and inlets of the sea; of the whole, about 5,000,000 acres are fit for tillage—that is, nearly half the entire area—and the soil in the western half of the Province, particularly in the Annapolis Valley and around the Basin of Minas, is unsurpassed for fertility, owing to the rich marine deposits left on the shore-land by the tides of the Bay of Fundy. The climate is delightful, and the winter is not so cold as in other parts of the Dominion. The population of the entire Province in 1901 was 459,116. In 1891 there were 6,080,695 acres of land occupied (1,993,697 improved), of which 659,548 acres were under crop, 994,123 acres in pasture, and 30,036 acres in gardens and orchards, the remainder being woodland. Hay is the most important crop of the Province, occupying one-fourth of all the improved land, and yielding 500,000 to 700,000 tons. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and Nova Scotia apples are claimed to be the best in the world (2,065,000 bushels in 1901), the principal district being the Annapolis Valley. Halifax, the capital, is one of the terminals of the Inter-Colonial Railway, and has a magnificent harbour covering ten square miles, which is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies and South America, with a dockyard and a dry dock which can accommodate the largest vessels afloat.

The coal deposits are extensive and of good quality (5,245,247 tons in 1903); iron ores are plentiful, and extensive manufactures of iron and steel are carried on at Sydney, Cape Breton; gold mines are being profitably worked. The principal fisheries are upon the eastern coast, and the largest catches in value made are cod, halibut, haddock, mackerel, herring, salmon, and lobsters. The manufacturing interest is growing. There is a Government agricultural college and experimental farm near Truro for men and women. Improved farms of 100 to 250 acres, with house and buildings, may be obtained at from £100 to £1,000, whilst the Government offer uncleared Crown lands at $80 per 100 acres, and 80 cents per acre for any additional quantity. Hunting, shooting and fishing abound; among wild animals there are bears, foxes, moose-deer, otter, mink, sable, musquash, hares, racoons, and squirrels; and among the feathered game are the woodcock, plover, snipe, partridges, ducks, geese, and curlew.

Nova Scotia has a Provincial Government, administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council, a Legislative Council of 21 members, and a Legislative Assembly of 38 members.

CAPE BRETON ISLAND, formerly a distinct Colony, now incorporated with Nova Scotia, contains an area of 3,125 square miles, with a population of 97,190 inhabitants. The chief town is Sydney, on the eastern coast, having valuable collieries in the neighbourhood, other towns being North Sydney, Sydney Mines, and Port Hawkesbury. The Intercolonial Railway connects the island with the mainland.

NEW BRUNSWICK is situated between 45°—48° N. lat. and 63° 47′—69° W. long., and comprises an area of 28,200 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 331,120. It was first colonised by British subjects in 1761, and in 1783 by disbanded troops from New England. The chief industrial pursuits arise from the produce of the forests and the fisheries. Coal is found; also silver, lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities. According to the census of 1891 the occupied land amounted to 4,471,250 acres, of which 1,509,790 acres were improved, 1,018,704 acres being under crop, 479,607 acres in pasture, and 11,479 acres devoted to gardens and orchards. Free grants of land are offered, and settlement encouraged. Improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. Sport of all kinds is abundant. The fisheries include salmon, cod, mackerel, herring, and shad, and were in 1895 of the value of $4,403,158, ranking second in importance to those of Nova Scotia. St. John is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and is connected by the Intercolonial Railway with Montreal.

The Provincial Government of New Brunswick is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 45 members elected by the people.

CAPITAL, Fredericton. Pop. (1901), 7,117; chief cities, St. John (40,711) and Moncton (9,026).

MANITOBA, formerly the Red River Settlement, was formed into a distinct Province in 1870, and admitted into the Confederation on 15th July in the same year. It is situated in about the centre of the continent, between 49°—53° N. lat. and 95°—101° W. long. (these parallels and meridians forming its boundaries). Its area is 72,864 square miles. Its population, census 1906, was 360,000. The Assiniboine and Red Rivers intersect the Province, and the soil is fertile and productive; emigration is invited and encouraged, and liberal grants of land are made to settlers. In 1905 4,256,838 acres were cultivated, of which 2,643,588 acres were under wheat, and the crops were 55,761,416 bushels of wheat, 45,484,024 oats, 14,064,175 barley, and 33,774 flax, rye, and peas. The main line of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railway traverses Manitoba, and there are several other lines in operation. The Red and Assiniboine Rivers are also navigable for a considerable course in the Province.

The Government of the Province is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 5 members and a Legislative Assembly of 40 members.

THE PROVINCE OF SASKATCHEWAN was formed by an enactment of the Parliament of Canada taking effect September 1, 1905, out of the territory (formerly known as the North-West Territories) which was acquired from the Hudson's Bay Company and added to the Dominion in 1870. Saskatchewan covers the area included between longitude 102° and 110° W. of Greenwich, with a small extension east of 102° at the south-eastern corner, and between latitude 49° and 60° N. The Surveyor-General of Canada estimates the Province to contain over 250,000 square miles, of which 86,000 square miles are land suited for grain-growing, 32,000 are land requiring irrigation, 106,387 are land suitable for ranches or other description of farming, and 27,000 square miles are water.

The census of 1901 showed the number of people within the area as 91,450, whilst the quinquennial census taken on June 24, 1906, showed the population to have increased to 275,000. The Province is being rapidly opened up by the means of railways, and is now traversed by the C.P.R. and the Canadian Northern Railway, while the Grand Trunk Pacific will cross the Province from east to west, with a network of branches. Several other railway projects are under consideration for opening up communication between the Province and the deep-water ports on Hudson's Bay, by which it is expected that for a number of months in each year the distance between Saskatchewan and European markets will be reduced almost to that of New York, the greater part of which will be by water.

The principal products of Saskatchewan are grain and cattle, and Government encouragement is being given to the dairy industry. In 1898 there were but 276,253 acres under wheat, whilst in 1905 there were 1,130,084. In 1898 4,780,440 bushels (17·3 per acre) were produced; in 1905 the yield increased to 26,107,286 bushels—an average of 23·09 per acre. The average yield of wheat in bushels per acre over the eight-year period 1898–1905 was 19·88. In 1905, in addition to wheat, 19,213,055 bushels of oats, 893,396 bushels of barley, 398,359 bushels of flax, besides other products in smaller quantities, were produced.

The range country in the Province is of limited extent, being almost entirely confined to the south-western corner, adjoining the range country of Southern Alberta. In 1905 22,332 head of stock were exported. The northern two-thirds of the Province is known only to the traders of the Hudson's Bay Company and the Indian missionary.

The Government is vested in the Lieutenant-Governor, aided and advised by an Executive Council of four members chosen from time to time by the Lieutenant-Governor. Following the regular procedure of similar British institutions, the members of the Executive Council seek re-election to the Legislative Assembly, in which manner the fullest responsibility to the people is secured. The Province is divided into twenty-five electoral districts, each of which is represented in the Legislative Assembly by one member.

There are three Judges residing at present within the Province, who are members of the Supreme Court of the North-West Territories.

Matters relating to education are dealt with by the Education Department, presided over by the Commissioner of Education. Areas in rural districts approximating twenty-five square miles in extent are established as school districts, and their affairs each managed by an elective board of trustees.

The climate has a wide range—from 90° to −40° at its greatest extremes. Rainfall is not excessive, and there is an unusual amount of sunshine at all periods of the year.

THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES of Canada comprise the present unorganised part of British North America lying to the north of the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. Their administration is entrusted to the officers of the Royal North-West Mounted Police, the Comptroller of the Force, Lieut.-Col. Fred. White, C.M.G., being also Commissioner of the Territories, with full executive, legislative, and administrative authority. The Territories for nearly 250 years have been under the almost absolute control of the Hudson's Bay Company, but of recent years the Dominion of Canada has taken an increasingly active part in the administration of the affairs of the country. Several expeditions to Hudson's Bay with a view to ascertaining the feasibility of the navigation of the Bay and Straits have been made, and at several points on the shores of the Bay police posts are maintained, being visited from time to time by an exploring ship sent into the Bay for that purpose.

THE PROVINCE OF ALBERTA was erected into a Province by an enactment of the Parliament of Canada, taking effect Sept. 1, 1905, out of the territory acquired from the Hudson's Bay Company, and until the date above mentioned it formed part of the North-West Territories. The total area of the Province is about 253,000 square miles, including about 2,500 square miles of water, and the population (1906) is estimated at 185,000. The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of twenty-five (25) members, elected for four years, representing 25 electoral districts into which the Province is divided. The Executive Council consists of four members.

Alberta is rapidly developing into a grain-producing territory, and where, twenty years ago, there existed a wilderness with scattered bands of primitive Indians and strong detachments of North-West Mounted Police for the sole inhabitants, there is now a succession of wheat fields, homesteads, villages, and towns. The soil is remarkably productive, and settlers from the United States, Eastern Canada, and the British Isles arrive in annually increasing numbers. The total area in crops, year 1906, 540,000 acres. Spring wheat, 97,760 acres, yielding 3,332,292 bushels; winter wheat, 43,661 acres, yielding 907,421 bushels; oats, 322,923 acres, yielding 13,192,150 bushels; barley, 75,678 acres, yielding 2,201,179 bushels. The Provincial Government operate 18 creameries, where they manufacture butter. This season they have disbursed $250,000 to patrons. Free homesteads are available for thousands of settlers in desirable localities.

The principal cities are Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Calgary, Medicine Hat, and Lethbridge.

CAPITAL, Edmonton.

THE PROVINCE OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND lies in the southern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, between New Brunswick and Cape Breton, that is to say, between 46° 7′ - 47° N. lat. and 62° - 64° 30′ W. long. It is about 140 miles in length, and from 4 to 34 miles in breadth; its area is 2,000 square miles (about equal to that of the English county of Norfolk), and its population (census 1901) 103,259. The island was first settled by the French, who held it for many years as a fishing station. The British took it from them in 1745, but afterwards restored it; they seized it again, however, during the Seven Years' War (1756–1763), and compelled the greater part of the French inhabitants to leave, and from that time it has remained British. The island is divided into three counties (King's, Queen's, and Prince), each of which elects 10 representatives. Its inhabitants are almost exclusively engaged in agriculture, considerable attention, however, being devoted to the fisheries and to the breeding of horses and sheep. There were (1891) 718,092 acres of improved land, of which 536,175 acres are under crops, 178,072 acres of pasture land, and 3,845 acres of gardens and orchards. The soil consists for the most part of a rich red loam, uniform in character and peculiarly suited to the growth of grasses. Nearly the whole of the land is now cleared, and improved farms can be bought at about 20 dollars an acre.

The Provincial Government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected by the people.

CAPITAL, Charlottetown, on the shore of Hillsborough Bay, which forms a good harbour, is distant from Liverpool 2,630 miles, transit about 8 days. Population, 12,080. Summerside (pop. 2,875) and Georgetown (pop. 1,060), on the east coast, are also ports of considerable size, and the centres of shipbuilding trade.

BRITISH COLUMBIA occupies the western frontier of the Dominion of Canada, extending from the summit of the Rocky Mountains and the 120th meridian of longitude west by the 60th parallel of north latitude to the boundary of Alaska; thence southward and along the Pacific coast (including QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS and VANCOUVER ISLAND) to the Strait of Fuca; thence easterly along the 49th parallel of latitude to the summit of the Rockies. The area of the mainland is calculated at 383,300 square miles; Queen Charlotte Islands at 6,000 square miles; and Vancouver Island at 14,000. Coal (output, 1905, 1,384,312 tons) is obtained from the latter, and in the south-eastern parts of Kootenay district near the Crow's Nest Pass; there are also extensive deposits in the Queen Charlotte Islands, in Southern Yale, and in the Skeena River district. The main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway runs through the Province, and several branch lines have been constructed, while the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway runs from Victoria to Wellington on Vancouver Island, and the Nelson and Fort Sheppard runs south from Nelson; the Red Mountain Railway from Rossland to the American boundary; the Kaslo and Slocan Railway connects the mines of the Slocan district with Kaslo on Kootenay Lake; the Nakusp and Slocan line connects with the C.P.R. at Arrow Lakes. The Columbia and Western Railway has been built from Trail to Rossland in the Trail Creek mining district, and thence to Midway, in the Yale district, and a short line runs from Victoria to Sidney on Haro Strait. The Grand Trunk, Pacific, C. P. R., and Canadian Northern are preparing to build trunk lines through the Province. Vancouver and New Westminster cities are connected by an electric tramway. There is a very extensive reserve of timber on the coast, consisting of Douglas fir, spruce, red and yellow cedar, and hemlock; some 150 mills are in operation, with a daily capacity of about 3,400,000 feet. The principal centres of the mines are Rossland, Slocan, Nelson, and Lardeau in West Kootenay, Fernie in East Kootenay, Boundary in Yale, Alberni, Cowichan, and Clayoquot on Vancouver and Texada Islands, and the old placer diggings in Cariboo. The output of the mines was valued at $22,461,325 in 1905, and that of the fisheries at about $7,500,000. Salmon canning (total pack, 1905, 1,167,460 cases) on the Fraser River and the coast inlets is the principal branch of the fishing industry, but deep-sea fishing is rapidly growing in importance.

The population of the Province, now estimated at 250,000, was in 1901 178,657, classified as follows:—Whites, 133,599 (including half-breeds); Indians, 25,593; half-breeds, 3,356; Chinese, 14,869; Japanese, 4,596; negroes, 523. Several lines of steamships ply to and from the Orient, one to Australia and one to San Francisco.

CAPITAL of the Province, Victoria; population (1906), 26,000. Vancouver City, 80 miles from Victoria; population, 45,000. New Westminster, 8,000; Nanaimo, 7,000; Rossland, 6,000; and Nelson, 6,500.

The CANADIAN PACIFIC stretches across the entire continent, from Montreal to Vancouver on the coast of British Columbia, a total distance of 2,911 miles. Starting from the seaports of Quebec and St. John's, N.B., the lines run to Montreal (the headquarters of the company), where the trans-continental line proper begins, passing through Ottawa, Carleton Junction, Renfrew, North Bay, Sudbury Junction, Port Arthur, Fort William, Rat Portage, Keewatin, Ignace, Winnipeg, Carberry, Brandon, Moosomin, Qu'Appelle, Regina, Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Maple Creek, Medicine Hat, Crowfoot, Calgary, and Stephen—the last-named on the summit of the Rocky Mountains—and then through the Selkirk Range to Vancouver, on the Pacific coast. The share capital amounts to $139,000,000 and $89,200,000 Debenture Stock. Chairman, Sir William C. Van Horne. President, Sir Thos. G. Shaughnessy. Secretary, Charles Drinkwater. The total length of the Canadian Pacific Railway system is 8,568 miles, 300 of which are cut through the solid rock. The last spike was driven on the 7th November, 1885, and the road was opened for general traffic on 28th June, 1886, since which time there has been a daily mail service between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The time occupied in making the road was four years six months, an average of 2·6 miles per day. The distance from China, Japan, and the Pacific coast generally to Liverpool is from 1,000 to 1,200 miles less by the Canadian Pacific Railway than by other routes.

THE GRAND TRUNK was originally formed in 1853 by an Act of the Legislature, and in 1893 a number of lines were consolidated, forming a continuous line through the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. The total loan and share capital of the company amounts to over £71,000,000 sterling. The mileage of the lines owned and leased is 4,639 miles, including 1,059 miles in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois; in addition to which the company controls the Central Vermont Railway, 536 miles, making the mileage of the entire system 5,175 miles. The eastern extremities of the line are Quebec and Portland, Maine, and it extends westward to Detroit, Chicago, Grand Haven, and Muskegon, supplying the means of communication with Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara, Buffalo, Detroit, and all the principal cities and towns in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

The INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY of Canada and the PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND RAILWAY, owned and operated by the Dominion Government of Canada, are the great thoroughfares for travel through the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island. The mileage of the Intercolonial is 1,446 miles, and of the Prince Edward Island Railway 261 miles. The building of an inter-provincial railway was one of the stipulations embodied in the British North America Act, 1867; and in November, 1872, the already partly-constructed Intercolonial Railway, together with the Nova Scotia Railway and the European and North American Railway, were consolidated under the name of the "Intercolonial Railway of Canada." The railway was extended to Montreal on March 1, 1898. It is the only railway connecting Nova Scotia and the greater part of New Brunswick with the rest of the Dominion of Canada, and connecting Montreal, Levis, Riviere du Loup, Campbellton, Moncton, St. John, Halifax, Sydney, and North Sydney. At North Sydney connection is made with the Reid Newfoundland Company's Steamship Line for all points in Newfoundland. Between Prince Edward Island and the mainland there is connection throughout the year by steamship service.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

This island, situated between 46° 37′—51° 39′ N. lat. and 52° 35′—59° 25′ W. long., on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is about 317 miles long and 316 miles broad, and contains about 40,200 square miles, and at the census of 1901 it had a population of 217,037, not including those resident in the portion of Labrador (3,947) within the jurisdiction of Newfoundland. Of these 75,989 are Roman Catholics, 73,008 Church of England, 61,388 Methodists, 1,497 Presbyterians, and 9,099 various. At the end of the year 1905 the estimated population was as follows:—

| Labrador | 3,994 |

This is the oldest English colony, for it was discovered by John Cabot in 1497; the first land seen was hailed as Prima Vista—the present Cape Bona Vista. The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays, and the greater part are engaged in fishing—for cod in summer, and seal fishing in winter and spring; agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment. Lakes and rivers abound; it is estimated that about one-third of the surface is covered with water. The interior is practically in a state of Nature; but 638 miles of railway have opened up large tracts of rich agricultural, mineral, and timber lands hitherto of small value. The trans-insular line runs to Port-aux-Basques, viâ Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connections to Placentia, the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Burnt Bay (in Notre Dame Bay). The climate is salubrious, and the people are a strong, healthy, hardy, industrious race. The thermometer seldom falls below zero in winter, and ranges in the shade in summer from 70° to 80°.

The principal exports of the Colony are codfish, value $7,907,480; cod, whale, and seal oil, value $909,538; sealskins, $314,048; tinned lobsters, $376,490; copper, copper ore, iron pyrites and other minerals, $1,535,428. The total value of the fishery products in 1903 was $10,117,446.

LABRADOR, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of America, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belleisle, on the south, to Cape Chudleigh, at the entrance of Hudson's Straits, on the north; it possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries. There are a few Moravian missionary settlements on the coast, and also some posts of the Hudson's Bay Company.

The Government is administered by a Governor appointed by the Crown, a responsible executive of nine, a legislative council of not over eighteen, appointed for life, and a House of Assembly of thirty-six, elected by the people every four years. In 1890 the franchise was given to all males of twenty-one years and over.

BRITISH GUIANA,

which includes the settlements of Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice, is situated on the north-east coast of South America. The boundaries have recently been definitely determined by the awards of the arbitrators in the Venezuela-British Guiana and Brazil-British Guiana boundary cases. It has a total area of 90,277·4 square miles, and a seaboard of more than 300 miles. The Essequibo River intersects the country in its entire length, the Corentyne River separates it from Dutch Guiana, and the Cuyuni is the great waterway on the west. The colony is bounded on the south by Brazil, on the west by Venezuela, and on the north and N.E. by the Atlantic Ocean. The two towns are Georgetown (estimated population, Dec. 31, 1905, 48,802) and New Amsterdam (estimated population, Dec. 31, 1905, 9,131). The climate is hot, but not generally unhealthy. The cultivated portion of the country, amounting to 189,457 acres (of which 72,390 acres are in sugar-cane), is confined to the sea-coast and to a short distance from the rivers. It is very like Holland, being below the level of the sea, and intersected with canals constructed by its former Dutch owners. The seasons are divided into dry and wet, the two dry seasons lasting from the middle of February to the end of April, and from the middle of August to the end of November. The temperature ranges between 75° and 90° F. The birth-rate in 1905 was 33·6, and the death-rate 27·4 per 1,000. The chief product is sugar, which forms 60 per cent. of the export trade. The leading exports for the year 1905-1906 were as follow:—Sugar, value £1,208,155; rum, £121,739; gold, 95,043 oz., valued at £352,031; diamonds, 4,202 carats, valued at £5,045; timber, £24,939; and balata, £40,312. The population, 31 Dec., 1904, was 301,923, of whom about one-third were Indian immigrants. There are about 10,000 aboriginal Indians, belonging chiefly to Arawak, Acawoi, Carib, and Warau tribes; they are occupied largely in fishing, hunting, and raising crops of cassava.

The Government consists of a Governor and a Court of Policy of 15 other members, 7 official and 8 elected by the direct vote of the people, in which the Governor has an original and a casting vote, and a veto on any measure at any stage. The Court of Policy discharges the functions of a Legislative Council, except as to levying taxes, which is the prerogative of what is called the Combined Court, composed of the Court of Policy and of 6 Financial Representatives elected directly by the people. There is, besides, the Executive Council, consisting of the Governor, 6 official and 3 unofficial members nominated by the Crown, which exercises all the executive and administrative functions of government other than those before mentioned. There are 814 miles of post-office telephone wire, with 4 miles of aerial cable and 535 of telegraph lines, 93 miles for railway signals and 24 miles submarine cables, and 72 post-offices; also post-office telephone exchanges in Georgetown and New Amsterdam, with over 450 subscribers. There is a line of railway along the east sea-coast from Georgetown to Rosignol, Berbice, 60½ miles in length, owned by the Demerara Railway Company, and another line has been opened along the west coast of Demerara, extending from Vreed-en-Hoop to Greenwich Park, 15 miles in length. There is another line connecting the Essequibo and Demerara Rivers, 29 miles in length, and an electric tramway service in the capital.

BRITISH HONDURAS.

This colony comprises about 7,562 square miles of territory in Central America, extending from 18° 29′ 5″ to 15° 53′ 55″ N. latitude, and from 89° 9′ 22″ to 88° 10′ W. longitude. Its extreme length and breadth are 174 m. and 68 m. respectively; it abuts on the Atlantic, and is bounded on the north by Yucatan and Mexico, on the west and south by Gautemala, and on the east by the Caribbean Sea. The climate generally is damp and hot, but not unhealthy. The temperature ranges from 50° to 98°. The average lies between 75° and 80°, but this is considerably tempered by the prevailing sea-breezes. The country consists chiefly of primeval forest, with savannahs and so-called "pine-ridges," which are open sandy plains covered with a wiry grass and dotted with pine-trees, affording fair runs for cattle. The ground is level and swampy along the coast-line, and generally flat for about ten to twenty miles inland; after which hills from 500 ft. to 4,000 ft. high succeed each other to the western boundary. The census (1901) gives the population at 37,497 males, 19,140; females, 18,339); the 1905 estimate is 40,372 (20,617 males, 19,755 females).

The staple products are the natural woods of the colony, principally mahogany and logwood; the export of mahogany, of which the cost ready for shipment is $40 to $50 per 1,000 ft., amounted in the year 1905 to 9,957,826 ft., that of logwood ($10 to $15 per ton) being 9,572 tons. Sugar is grown, and cacao plantations have been started. Fruit, including bananas, plantains, cocoa-nuts, pineapples, oranges, and mangoes, grow well, while inland there are extensive regions of good pasturage, and there are indications that gold and other minerals exist. Other exports are cedar-wood, india-rubber, chewing-gum, and bananas. The latest returns show that about 50,000 acres are under cultivation. The best description of cocoa trees grow wild in the bush. Crown lands can be purchased at 1 per acre, or leased at an annual rental of 10c. to 30c. per acre. There are 43 public elementary schools in the colony, of which 41 are denominational, and 39 in receipt of Government aid; there are 3 denominational secondary schools in Belize.

British Honduras is governed as a Crown colony. The Executive Council consists of the Colonial Secretary, the Treasurer, the Attorney-General, and two unofficial members appointed by the Sovereign. The Legislative Council includes the following members:—The Colonial Secretary, the Treasurer, the Attorney-General, and not less than five unofficial members appointed by the Sovereign. The Governor is President of both councils.

THE BERMUDAS.

The Bermudas, or Somers Islands, are a cluster of about 100 small islands (15 or 16 only of which are inhabited, the rest being mere rocks) situated in the west of the Atlantic Ocean, in 32° 15′ N. lat. and 64° 51′ W. long, comprising an area of about 19 square miles, and containing (1901) an estimated population of 17,535, of whom 6,383 are white, exclusive of army and navy. These islands derive their name from Bermudez, a Spaniard, who sighted them in 1527; but they were first colonised by Admiral Sir George Somers, who was shipwrecked here in 1609, on his way to Virginia. The nearest point of the mainland is Cape Hatteras, in North Carolina, 580 miles distant. Bermuda possesses a strongly fortified dockyard, where the British squadron refits.

The Government is administered by a Governor, who is also commander-in-chief of the military forces. He is advised by an Executive Council of 6 members, appointed by the Crown. There is also a Legislative Council, composed of 9 members appointed by the Crown; and a representative House of Assembly consisting of 36 members, four of whom are elected by each of the nine parishes. There are 1,318 electors, whose individual qualifications are the possession of freehold property of not less value than £60. Hamilton is the chief town and the seat of government; population (1901), 2,246.

Hamilton, 2,970 miles; transit, 12 days.

The British Dominions in Austral or Southern Asia include the great island-continent of Australia (which, with the island of Tasmania, now constitutes the Commonwealth of Australia) and the islands of New Zealand, with many smaller islands, chiefly in the Southern Hemisphere between the Pacific and Indian Oceans, together with a portion of the island of Papua or New Guinea. The total extent of these Dominions is about 3,173,882 square miles, with a total population in 1901 of nearly 5,000,000.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area; the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, often below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in the eastern portion of the island, is a rich grazing country, admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), September 23 (Spring), and December 22 (Summer). The principal rivers are the Murray, with its tributaries, the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the island, which fall into the sea on the south coast; on the east coast, the Hunter, Hawkesbury, Clarence, Richmond, Macleay, Brisbane, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, the Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; and the Victoria, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria, on the north. The most extensive mountain system on the Australian continent takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The chief ranges of the system are the Australian Alps in Victoria and New South Wales, the Blue Mountains and the Liverpool Range in New South Wales, and the Craig Range in Queensland, the highest point being Mount Kosciusko (7,328 ft.), 327 miles from Sydney, N.S.W. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt, and they depend for their supplies of water upon the rivers and floods, and alternating from immense reedy swamps to areas of submerged levels, with broad mud-banks for shores that render the water absolutely unapproachable. But the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, to a great measure, mitigated by successful borings, of which there are 350 in Queensland alone, yielding upwards of 180,000,000 gallons daily. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, mercury, tin, zinc, &c.

"The Great South Land" is believed to have been first seen by De Gonneville, a French navigator, in 1503, and was inserted in a map constructed by Le Testu, of Dieppe, about the year 1542. About 1605 De Quiros, a Spaniard, sailed, with De Torres as his lieutenant, from Lima, Peru, for the Great South Land, and touching land, named it Tierra Austral. The expedition was split up by a storm, and De Torres sailed through the straits which bear his name, and also discovered land near Cape York. About twelve years later a Dutch venturer, with two ships, Pera and Arnhem, explored the northern coast of Queensland, where Jan Carstensz, in 1623, also penetrated the great northern gulf, and named it Carpentaria, after the Governor of the Dutch Indies. Further desultory exploration of the coast-line was carried on by the Dutch, who visited the southern and western shores from 1620 to 1630, and in 1642 Abel Jansen Tasman sailed to the islands of New Zealand and Tasmania, which he named Van Diemen's Land, after the Governor of Batavia. In 1688 Dampier visited and explored nearly 1,000 miles of the north-west coast of Australia, which he revisited in 1699 in H.M.S. Roebuck, but no further efforts of importance were made for seventy years, when Captain Cook, of H.M.S. Endeavour, with members of an astronomical expedition, landed at Poverty Bay, New Zealand, on October 8, 1769, and afterwards sailed round the islands and explored the south-eastern coast of Australia, which he named New South Wales. Botany Bay and Moreton Bay were also named, the latter after the President of the Royal Society. In his subsequent voyages round the world Captain Cook revisited New Zealand, and from his reports an English fleet anchored in Botany Bay (1788) and effected a settlement at Port Jackson, which was reinforced by free settlers in 1795, when Governor Hunter arrived at Sydney to take over the administration of New South Wales. In 1798 Bass and Flinders explored the coast of Victoria and sailed round Tasmania, while Port Phillip was discovered in 1802. Hobart was founded in 1804, and in 1805 sheep were introduced into New South Wales. The misadventures of Captain Bligh, of the Bounty, occurred in 1806, but in 1810 New South Wales was already on the road to prosperity, which was further enhanced by the discovery of the fertile plains westward of the Blue Mountains. The settlement of New Zealand and Tasmania was also proceeding, and in 1820 the latter had achieved success as a heat-growing district, to be inaugurated as a eparate colony in 1825. Western Australia was ounded in 1829, and in 1835 a permanent ettlement was made at Melbourne, whence the olony of Victoria sprang in 1837, the same ear seeing Adelaide founded by the colonists f South Australia. In 1840 the transportaon of convicts to New South Wales was iscontinued, and in 1841 New Zealand was onstituted a separate colony, the towns of New lymouth and Nelson being founded in that year.

1842 Brisbane was founded, the population of he mainland colonies being over 145,000 at that ate. Native troubles arose in New Zealand in 843-48, and in 1851 the Port Phillip district of ew South Wales, with a population exceeding ,000, was proclaimed a separate colony, to be enceforth known as Victoria. A great impetus immigration was given in that year by the scovery of gold in New South Wales and ictoria; a fuller measure of self-government as also granted, the colony of New Zealand ing treated in like manner. In 1854 the electric legraph brought the Australian colonies into oser touch with home, and in 1856–7 responsible overnment was inaugurated in Tasmania and outh Australia. In 1859 the Moreton Bay settle-ent was erected into the colony of Queensland, nd the subsequent year saw a renewal of the tive troubles in New Zealand. At the census 1861 the population of the various colonies as estimated at over 1,250,000, of which number ictoria contained 541,000, New South Wales
0,000, New Zealand 160,000, and Tasmania
,000, and railways and telegraphs had made nsiderable progress at that date. In 1863–70 rther native troubles occurred in New Zealand, e population of which exceeded 250,000 in the llowing year, the other colonies numbering early 1,700,000 (Victoria 730,000, New South ales 500,000, South Australia 185,000, Queens-nd 120,000, Tasmania 100,000, and Western ustralia 100,000). In 1874 the Fiji Islands were ded to the British dominions, and three years er a High Commission was appointed for rtain acquired or protected islands in the estern Pacific. In 1879–80 international exhiions were held at Sydney and Melbourne, and 1881 the population of the colonies was taken 3,000,000, the most notable increases being ew South Wales to 750,000, Victoria 860,000, uth Australia, 280,000, and Queensland 213,000, hile New Zealand had jumped to nearly 500,000 an influx of settlers from home. In 1883 the nes seemed ripe for concerted action in certain ustralasian matters, and in 1884–5 motions nbodying the spirit of federation were successlly proposed in various legislatures. In 1885 e Government of New South Wales inaugurated e sharing of Imperial burdens by sending ops to help the "Old Country" in the Soudan.
1890 further steps were taken towards the option of the federation, and in that year the estern Australian Constitution was promul-ted. At a conference of Premiers at Sydney March 2, the present name of the federation as first mooted. From that date schemes nbodying the idea were debated in the several lonies, and in 1897 the Diamond Jubilee of ueen Victoria presented an opportunity for a eeting of the Premiers in London, and the e interchange of views between Colonial and nperial statesmen. On March 16, 1898, the mmonwealth Bill was adopted by the Federal nvention at Melbourne, and after ratification by the several colonies the Act was ratified by the Imperial Parliament on July 9, 1900, the inauguration of the Commonwealth of Australia taking place at Melbourne on New Year's Day, 1901, a message from the Queen to the people of Australia being read by the Earl of Hopetoun, Governor-General. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales (then H.R.H. the Duke of Cornwall and York) was designated by Queen Victoria for the purpose of opening the Commonwealth Parliament, and bidden to undertake the duty by King Edward VII., in spite of the lamented death of the Queen in 1901. The Prince and Princess sailed from Portsmouth, and declared Parliament open at Melbourne on May 9. The Earl of Hopetoun (now Marquess of Linlithgow) resigned his post in 1902, and was succeeded in 1903 by Lord Tennyson, to be succeeded in turn, 22 Jan., 1904, by Lord Northcote. The area of the Commonwealth is estimated at 2,972,575 square miles, containing a population of 3,774,282 at the census of 1901, including 6,851 half-caste aborigines. Of this total 1,933,500 were ascertained to be of English descent, 413,700 Scottish, 651,000 Irish, 18,400 Aborigines, 36,000 Chinese, and 130,600 foreigners. By religions there were in 1891 1,256,673 members of the Church of England, 351,882 Presbyterians, 397,334 Methodists, 291,073 other Protestants, 713,823 Roman Catholics, and 13,805 Jews. The capitals of the various States are Melbourne, the present seat of Government (pop. 502,610), Sydney (pop. 516,180), Adelaide (pop. 165,723), Brisbane (pop. 162,094), Perth (pop. 44,373), and Hobart (pop. 34,809).

The Commonwealth of Australia is a confederation of the six "Original States" of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, and Western Australia, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by an Executive Council of seven members.

Legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the Sovereign (represented by the Governor-General), a Senate of 36 (six from each of the Original States) and a House of Representatives elected on a population basis in such a manner that no Original State has less than five representatives.

The powers of the Federal Parliament include all matters relating to Commerce, Shipping and Lighthouses, Railways, Defence, Finance and Currency, Posts and Telegraphs, Census returns, Marriage and Divorce, Immigration and Emigration, Banks and Banking, Weights and Measures, and Labour. Such powers as are not vested in the Federal Parliament are regarded as remaining in the Legislatures of the several States, in which particular the Commonwealth differs from the Dominion of Canada, where the residuum of Legislative capacity is in the Dominion Parliament. The difference may be briefly stated in the following way:—In the Dominion the Central Parliament may legislate on all present matters, and such as may occur hereafter, except where its power is expressly delegated to the Provincial Legislatures. In the Commonwealth the Federal Parliament may only legislate on certain matters, or to the degree, surrendered to it by the federating States.

Commonwealth Capital.—The question of site for the Commonwealth capital has proved itself a stumbling-block. The decision was left over when the Commonwealth was inaugurated, and has been frequently postponed. Meanwhile the seat of Government is at Melbourne.

I. NEW SOUTH WALES.

The State of New South Wales is situated between the 29th and 36th parallels of S. lat. and 141st and 153rd meridians of E. long., and comprises an area of 310,367 square miles—i.e., more than six times the area of England, and nearly three times the size of Great Britain and Ireland—with a population (census March 31, 1901) of 1,359,133, and 1,514,240 on 30th June, 1906, made up (census 1901) of 712,456 males and 646,677 females. The births for the year 1905 were 39,501, deaths 14,978, and marriages 10,970. The number of aborigines in the State is 4,287, of whom 2,451 are males and 1,836 females (census 1901).

The great plains are admirably adapted for sheep-farming, and several breeds of sheep, including the celebrated merino, were introduced in 1813. In 1792 there were but 23 head of cattle, 11 horses, 105 sheep, and 43 pigs. On the 31st December, 1905, there were 506,884 horses, 2,337,973 cattle, 39,506,764 sheep, and 310,702 pigs. In 1905, 297,154,000 lb. (stated as in the grease) of wool, valued at £12,344,444, were produced.

Minerals.—The goldfields were discovered in 1851. Coal, coke, copper, silver, lead, zinc, bismuth, tin, iron, antimony, asbestos, platinum, and kerosene shale are also found; and in small quantities, diamonds, rubies, opals, and other precious stones. The total value of minerals raised up to the end of 1905 was £161,862,185, coal accounting for £48,019,516; £6,897,081 being the value of all minerals won in 1905.

Agriculture is one of the principal industries of the State; 2,838,081 acres are under cultivation (excluding 627,530 under permanent artificial grasses), producing during the year ended 31 March, 1906, 20,737,200 bushels of wheat, 5,539,750 bushels of maize, besides other kinds of grain, with 50,086 tons of potatoes, and 7,327 cwt. of tobacco. Sugar-cane to the extent of 201,998 tons was produced; also 831,700 gallons of wine, and 8,864,928 dozens of oranges, lemons, &c. (all citrus fruit); and almost every kind of fruit and vegetable may be grown. The total extent of land alienated or in process of alienation at the end of 1905 was 49,970,335 acres, while the area of land leased for pastoral occupation and homestead, mining, and other purposes at the same date was 123,015,992 acres. At Sydney the mean temperature in the shade for 47 years averaged 63°; the mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 68·4°, Hunter and Manning district 64·4°, south coast 59·8°, northern tableland 56·4°, central tableland 57·2°, southern tableland 56·4°, north-western slope 66·2°, central western slope 63·5°, south-western slope 61·5°, north-western plain 68·8°, central western plain 65·8°, and Riverina district 61·9°.

The western portion of the country is not well watered. The Darling and the Murrumbidgee, both tributaries of the Murray, which divides the State from Victoria, are only navigable for part of the year. The eastern or coastal district is watered by the Tweed, Richmond, Clarence, Macleay, Hastings, Manning, Karuah, Hunter, Hawkesbury, Shoalhaven, Clyde, Moruya, Tuross, Bega, Towamba, and Snowy.

Government.—"Responsible government" was established by the Constitution Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 54, and is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown, and a Legislative Council consisting of not less than 21 members; the Council in July, 1906, consisted of 60 members. The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members, representing 90 electoral districts (as reduced by the Act of 1904, the first election on that basis taking place on 6 Aug., 1904). Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £300 per annum, and members of both Houses travel free over the Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. With few exceptions all natural-born or naturalised persons, 21 years of age, who have resided 12 months in the State and three months in the district, are entitled to the franchise, which was conferred upon women in 1902, and was first exercised by them in 1904.

Religion.—All religions are free. There is no establishment, and all payments are voluntary, with the exception of such as remain due by the State under former arrangements (£2,589 in 1905). About two-thirds of the people are Protestants, the members of the Church of England in New South Wales, according to the census of 1901, numbering 623,121; Roman Catholics numbering 347,286, Presbyterians 132,617, and Methodists 137,638. The places of worship in the State number about 5,850.

Education.—Education is compulsory, the total enrolment in 1905 in 2,909 State schools being 238,625, and the average daily attendance 153,953. The State expenditure on Education, Science, and Art was £946,273, including £21,036 received from Government by university affiliated colleges and Sydney Grammar School. The University of Sydney, with which 4 colleges are affiliated, including the Women's College, was incorporated in 1851. In addition to the State schools there are 853 private colleges and schools, with 57,854 scholars.

Manufactories and Works.—In 1905 there were 3,700 manufactories and works, employing 72,175 hands, 56,117 being males and 16,058 females.

Old Age Pensions.—Since July, 1901, Old Age Pensions amounting to £26 a year have been granted to persons over 65 years of age, who have been resident in the State 25 years, and are in receipt of an income of not more than £52 per annum.

Hospitals.—There are (31 Dec., 1905) 132 hospitals in the State, 20 of them being in the Metropolitan district, and 112 in the country.

Communications.—There were open on 30 June, 1906, 3,390 miles of Government railway, upon the construction of which £43,626,063 have been spent (the working expenses amounted to 54·51 of the gross revenue, leaving £1,926,407 as net profit in 1905-1906); and 81·5 miles of private railway lines. There are also 126 miles of Government tramways (upon which £3,669,096 were spent, the working expenses 78·11, leaving a net profit in 1905-1906 of £186,400), and 6¾ miles of private tramways. Of telegraphs there are 14,827 miles open, with 71,686 miles of wire and 1,069 stations; messages transmitted outside New South Wales numbering 614,297, inland 2,293,656, total 2,907,953; those received from outside New South Wales numbering 668,092, inland 2,293,656, total 2,961,748 (exclusive of 261,917 transit messages). The Post Offices and receiving offices numbered 2,266, the number of letters and postcards conveyed being 111,958,588; newspapers, 44,599,104; packets and book parcels, 22,082,950; and parcels, 994,144.

Shipping.—In 1905 the number of vessels entered and cleared was 5,419, with a total tonnage of 9,381,619.

Banking, &c.—There were (30 June, 1906) 13 banks of issue, with a paid-up capital of £13,965,931, assets £42,939,571, within N.S.W., and liabilities £41,018,649. The savings bank deposits on 1 Jan., 1906, amounted to £5,545,367, in addition to 566 Post Office savings banks, with deposits amounting to £7,952,885.

Crime.—The number of prisoners of all kinds in gaol on 31 December, 1905, was 1,685, a decrease of 195 compared with the same day of 1904, and of 775 compared with 1895.

Defences.—On 30 June, 1906, the strength of the military and naval forces in the State was as follows:—Military: Permanent 504, militia 4,921, volunteers 2,212, rifle clubs 7,941, cadets 3,600, unattached list of officers, reserve of officers and chaplains 211, total, 19,389. Naval Forces: 312. The total expenditure on defence in N.S.W. for the year ended 30 June, 1906, was £327,449.

SYDNEY, the chief city and capital, stands on the shore of Port Jackson, the finest harbour in the world, and is surrounded by scenery of surpassing beauty. It extends four miles north and south by three miles east and west; and contains (1905) 116⅝ miles of streets, with 21,331 dwellings and a population of 118,100; or, including suburbs, 1,608½ miles of streets, 107,922 houses, and 4,442 acres of park, &c., with a population of 529,600. In addition to the Government buildings, there are the Branch Royal Mint, the University, National Art Gallery, museums, free public library, observatory, two cathedrals, and numerous churches. Other towns are Newcastle (with incorporated suburbs), 59,200; Broken Hill, 28,110; Bathurst, 9,400; Goulburn, 10,480; Granville, 5,500; Parramatta, 13,000; Lismore, 5,300; Maitland, E. and W., 10,680; Grafton and South Grafton, 5,370; Albury, 6,700; Tamworth, 6,200; Lithgow, 5,800; Wagga Wagga, 5,420; and Orange and E. ## II. VICTORIA.

This territory originally formed part of New South Wales (known as the Port Phillip district), from which it was severed, and erected into a separate colony in the year 1851. It comprises the south-east corner of Australia, at that part where its territory projects farthest into the southern latitudes: it lies between the 34th and 39th parallels of south latitude, and the 141st and 150th meridians of east longitude. Its extreme length from east to west is about 420 miles, its greatest breadth is about 250 miles, and its extent of coast-line nearly 600 miles. The entire area comprises 87,884 square miles, or 56,245,760 acres, of which 4,269,877 were under cultivation in 1905–6.

Population.—Its population at the census on 31 March, 1901, was 1,201,341 (603,883 males and 597,458 females), including about 7,349 Chinese and 652 aborigines. At the census of 1901 the native Victorians numbered 876,003; natives of other Australian States, 65,094; English, 113,432; Irish, 61,512; Scottish, 35,751; Welsh, 3,676; Chinese, 6,230; and other nationalities about 39,643. The Victorian aborigines at the time of the first colonisation of the district were about 15,000 in number; in 1851 the official return gave 2,693, and in 1901 652 (367 males and 285 females). The birth-rate of Victoria for 1905 was 24·83 per 1,000; the death-rate was 12·10 per 1,000.

Religion.—Members of the Church of England numbered 424,011, "Protestants" 8,693, Presbyterians 191,503, Methodists 180,272, Baptists 32,648, and Roman Catholics 263,720.

Minerals.—Victoria is one of the leading gold-producing States in Australia. From the discovery of gold in 1851 to the end of the year 1905, the quantity raised—68,367,403 oz.—amounted in value to £273,236,500, the amount produced in 1905 being 810,050 oz. The value of other minerals raised to the end of 1905, consisting principally of tin, copper, coal, and antimony, is estimated at about £6,150,104 (including building stone, &c., £3,226,755).

Communications.—There were 3,426 miles of railway completed at the end of June, 1905, all of which belonged to the Government, the capital cost amounting to £41,259,387. The gross receipts were £3,582,266, and the working expenses £2,222,279, leaving a net income of £1,359,987, or 3·30 per cent.

There were 969 stations for electric telegraphs, extending over 6,338 miles (poles), which produced a revenue of £124,994 in 1905, the total mileage of wire being 16,082, and the telegrams transmitted numbering 2,256,482. There were also 29,312 miles of telephone wire.

Trade and Industry.—Wool, gold (including specie), wheat, flour, biscuit, and butter are the staple productions of the State; and the manufactures (4,264 factories, &c., employing 80,235 hands in 1905) are mainly for home consumption. In 1905 the chief exports were: Wool, £5,420,259; gold (including specie), £1,999,297; butter, £1,616,651; wheat, flour, and biscuit, £2,738,716; oats, £375,393; leather, £329,261; skins and hides, £799,258; and live stock, £990,716. A trade is also springing up in preserved and frozen meats, the value of the exports (excluding bacon and hams) being £584,366 in 1905. The principal imports of the State in 1905 were wool (from across the border), £2,911,556; live stock, £1,839,205; sugar and molasses, £818,761; gold (including specie), £920,737; cottons, £995,619; woollens, £804,083; and timber, £598,546.

Agriculture.—Agriculture has of late years much improved, wheat and oats chiefly being cultivated; the dairy industry has also made marked progress. Of the 4,269,877 acres under cultivation in 1905–6, 2,070,517 were wheat crops, and 312,052 oats, and 591,771 acres were cut for hay. In 1905–6, 1,726,444 gallons of wine were produced. There were in 1905 649,100 milch cows, producing 57,606,821 lb. of butter and 4,297,350 lb. of cheese.

Shipping.—The shipping statistics of the State furnish abundant evidence of the magnitude and value of its trade. In 1905 4,650 vessels, of 7,849,001 tons, entered and cleared.

III. SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

South Australia was established as a British Province by 4 & 5 Will. IV., cap. 95, but not proclaimed until 28 Dec., 1836, so that its history falls within Queen Victoria's reign. It is situated between 11° and 37° S. lat. and 129° and 141° E. long., and covers 12° of longitude and 27° of latitude. The total length is 1,850 miles, the extreme breadth 650 miles, with about 2,000 miles of sea-board, the total area being 903,690 sq. miles.

Population.—The population at the 1901 census was 362,604 (males, 184,422; females, 178,182); on 31 December, 1905, 374,398 (males, 194,241; females, 180,157); birth rate (1905) 23·82, death rate 10·14, and marriage rate 7·00 per 1,000.

Meteorology.—The mean temperature of the original colony is 74°, with a mean rainfall of 16 inches on the plains and 42 inches in the hills, the 63 years' average at Adelaide being 20 inches. The winter temperature averages 53°, with 100° for summer, but the climate is so dry that the inconvenience is comparatively slight.

Government.—The government is administered by a Governor, the Legislative Council with 18 members, and the House of Assembly with 42 members. There are 4 Cabinet Ministers, members of the Legislature and ex officio members of the Executive Council, of which the Governor is president. Election is by ballot, with universal adult suffrage for the House of Assembly for all British subjects, male and female; there is a small property qualification for electors to the Legislative Council, who numbered 52,651 (13,695 women) in 1905, those for the Assembly numbering 183,252 (90,253 women).

Local Government.—There are 32 Municipalities and 141 District Councils, the aggregate assessment of property within their boundaries being £2,739,808, and the revenue (1905) £294,723, and expenditure (1905), chiefly on roads, £290,891.

Law and Justice.—The Supreme Court is presided over by the Chief Justice and two Puisne Judges; there are Courts of Vice-Admiralty and Insolvency, as well as Local Civil Courts, with stipendiary magistrates and the usual Police Courts. The Supreme Court convictions average about 119 annually, which is at the rate of 1 in every 3,146 of the population. The Real Property Act (1858) simplifies the transfer of land, and since the passing of the Act land to the value of £16,987,325 has been dealt with.

Religion.—In 1904 accommodation was provided for 31,352 members of the Church of England, 79,326 Methodists, 16,135 Congregationalists, 14,395 Baptists, 13,000 German Lutherans, in addition to about 50,000 Roman Catholics, in 1,121 places of worship.

Education.—There is an endowed university at Adelaide, founded in 1881, with 360 undergraduates; all classes are open to women. A State school of mines and industries has also been established. Primary education is provided by the State, and controlled by a responsible minister; it is secular, compulsory, and free; there are 722 State schools, with 1,420 teachers and 64,183 scholars; the expenditure in 1905 was £156,534, the total capital outlay on school buildings amounting to £511,288. Private schools number 213 (1905), with 725 teachers and 10,106 scholars. The Public Library, Museum, Art Gallery and local institutes are supported or assisted by the State at an annual cost of about £10,000.

Banking.—There are 7 banking institutions in Adelaide, with 96 branches, having a total liability of £7,623,060 (including £322,276 Perpetual Inscribed Stock) and assets £7,425,775 in 1905; their note issue amounted to £373,604. The Government Savings Bank has 163 agencies, with 126,821 depositors (£4,380,358, bearing interest at 3 per cent.), and 19,545 depositors with £17,683 not bearing interest.

Commerce in 1905.—Total value, £17,930,276.

Shipping.—The total tonnage inwards and outwards in 1905 was 5,258,230 tons; 4,431,900 tons were British, and 826,330 tons foreign.

Railways.—The length of Government lines open in 1905 was 1,746 miles. The total cost to 31 Dec., 1905, was £13,583,014, or £7,781 per mile; the working expenses in 1905 were £742,943 and the receipts £1,305,565, the net revenue being 4·14 per cent. on the cost.

Agriculture.—Of the total area about two-thirds are farmed or grazed, and 3,368,708 acres cultivated—under wheat 1,710,286 acres, hay 327,924, oats and barley 26,250, and potatoes 9,540 acres, with 1,087,057 acres lying fallow. The quantity of wheat produced in 1905-6 was 20,143,798 bushels. English fruit, oranges, lemons, almonds, and olives are successfully grown, and fruit drying is profitable. There were 23,603 acres of vines, the export of wine being 718,660 gallons in 1905, of which 397,087 gals. (value £36,816) were sent to the United Kingdom in 1905. Brandy and other spirits are also produced. There were 6,140,600 sheep in 1905, and 40,784,613 lb. of wool (valued at £1,668,214) were exported; cattle number 300,721, and horses 196,114.

Minerals.—Copper and gold, silver, lead, manganese, bismuth, iron, and coal are found.

IV. QUEENSLAND.

This State, situated in lat. 10° 40′—29° S., and long. 138°—153° 30′ E., comprises the whole north-eastern portion of the Australian continent.

Queensland proper possesses an area of 668,497 square miles (i.e., equal to more than 5½ times the area of the United Kingdom), of which the Government have parted with the fee simple of 14,252,664 acres; under a system of deferred payment, 3,407,210 more are in process of alienation out of the total of 427,838,080 acres, but an additional area of 239,805,320 acres has been leased out for sheep and cattle runs and grazing-farms, 251,549 acres as scrub selections, 92,613 acres under gold-mining and mineral lease, and 3,133 for special purposes, leaving 170,025,591 practically unoccupied. The estimated population, Dec. 31, 1905, numbered 528,048, of whom 290,206 were males and 237,842 females. Wheat, oats, and barley flourish on the Darling downs; while a still larger area is devoted to maize, which yields an average crop of about 22 bushels per acre. Both English and sweet potatoes are cultivated; as also are coffee, cotton, oranges, peaches, pineapples, grapes, bananas, coconuts, mangoes, plums, and various English fruits. In the year 1905, 152,722 tons of sugar were produced. The chief articles of export the produce of the State in 1905 were: Wool, £2,649,751; gold, £2,638,044; silver, £32,269; tin, £299,878; copper, £447,530; pearl and tortoise-shell, £91,099; meat, including extract, £842,684; green fruit, £185,329; sugar, £1,448,885; hides and skins, £430,430; tallow, £202,298; live stock, £1,132,107. At Brisbane the average temperature for 1905 was 68·8°; the maximum in the shade was 102·4°, and the minimum 37·2°. Wool, gold, meat, and sugar are at present the staple productions; rich gold, copper, tin, lead, quicksilver, antimony, and coal deposits are found in several districts; timber also, of fine quality for cabinet manufacture, the Moreton Bay pine and the Dammara robusta, together with the cedar of Queensland, forming valuable products for export. At the end of 1905 the horses numbered 430,565, cattle 2,963,395, sheep 12,535,231, and pigs 164,087.

At the end of 1905 there were 3,114 miles of railway open. In 1905 there were 1,044 State schools in operation, with 2,382 teachers and an average daily attendance of 68,780 children; and 171 private schools, with an average attendance of 12,649.

The banking deposits on the 31st Dec., 1905, were £13,217,084, apart from the £3,992,758 in the hands of the Government Savings Bank.

The number of sea-going vessels entered inwards during 1905 was 780 (tonnage, 1,067,741), and the number outwards 880 (tonnage, 1,062,566).

The contour of the Queensland coast-line and the relative position of its inland parts operate against any centralisation similar to that at Melbourne, Sydney, or Adelaide, and numerous ports of considerable size extend along the coast:—Brisbane (pop. 129,736), Rockhampton (19,691), Maryborough (12,900), Townsville (15,506), Port Douglas, Mackay, Thursday Island, Cooktown, and Bundaberg. Other places of importance are Ipswich (15,246), Toowoomba (14,087), Charters Towers (20,976), and Gympie (14,430).

The Constitution comprises a Governor, Legislative Council of 44 members nominated for life by the Crown, and Assembly of 72 members elected by the people. There is a Supreme Court, with a Chief Justice, and three Puisne Judges; and inferior courts, as in New South Wales.

V.—TASMANIA

is an island in the South Pacific Ocean, off the southern extremity of Australia, from which it is separated by Bass Straits, in which are situated the Furneaux Group and King Island, included within the colony. It lies between 40° 33′—43° 39′ S. lat. and 144° 39′—148° 23′ E. long., and contains an area of 26,215 square miles, or 16,778,000 acres of land, of which, on 1st March, 1905, 226,228 acres were under crop, and 378,346 under artificially-sown grass; wheat, 43,091 acres; while 1,345,302 acres (exclusive of mineral land) were leased from the Crown principally for pastoral purposes, the terms of purchase being £1 an acre for cash, or £1 6s. 8d. in 14 yearly instalments. The population (31 Dec., 1904) was 180,200, of whom 89,345 belonged to the Church of England, 32,355 were Roman Catholics, 26,952 Methodists, and 12,285 Presbyterians. The aboriginals have become quite extinct, the last—a female, "Truganini"—having died in 1876. The island was first discovered by Tasman, in December, 1642, and named by him "Van Diemen's Land," in honour of his patron, the then governor of the Dutch possessions in India. It was subsequently partially explored by Captain Cook, and in 1803 Lieut. Bowen, despatched from Sydney with a few soldiers and convicts to form a penal settlement, fixed upon the spot where Hobart now stands. In 1825 it was severed from New South Wales and formed into a distinct colony. Transportation of criminals was abolished in 1853, and the name officially changed from Van Diemen's Land to Tasmania. The climate is fine and salubrious, and well suited to European constitutions, and the hot winds of Australia do not reach the island. At Hobart in 1902 the mean annual temperature was 53·2°, the mean summer temperature being 58·6°, and that of winter 46·6°; the average rainfall for Hobart, 1904, was 22·08 inches. The surface of the country is generally undulating forest land with mountains from 1,500 to 5,000 feet in height, and wide expanses of level, open plains. The chief products of the State are wool, gold, silver, copper, timber, tin, and fruit, and sheep; the two latter being among the principal industries. The amount of stock on 1 March, 1905, was sheep (and lambs), 1,556,460; cattle, 202,206; horses, 36,565; and pigs, 77,943. The forests of Tasmania abound in the most beautiful cabinet woods and the largest size timbers, adapted for every variety of purpose. The fauna include the Tasmanian devil and native tiger, and the curious duck-billed platypus; while the wombat, the wallaby, and the opossum supply valuable skins. There are silver and copper fields on the west coast; over 45,000 acres have been taken on mineral leases, and mines of both lode and stream tin are being worked in the north. The value of tin exported in 1904 was £281,541; of silver £376,522, and of copper £568,982; iron-ore exists, and the value of gold exported in 1904 was £187,703. Coal of a good quality, and in easily accessible positions, is very generally distributed over the island. There are in all 620 miles of railway open, including the main line running from Hobart to Launceston, through the island; and 321 telegraph stations, with 3,432 miles of wire, including a submarine cable (432 miles) communicating with the Universal Telegraph System; 1,450 miles of telephone wire; 383 post-stations, and 3,231 miles of post roads. On Dec. 31, 1904, the total registered shipping for the year was 55 steamers and 158 sailing vessels, with a total tonnage of 24,717 tons. The inward entries during 1904 were 957 (tonnage, 1,043,425), and the outward entries 944 (tonnage, 1,050,182).

A Department of Agriculture was formed in 1902. Primary education is administered by a Department, and there are 356 State schools.

The Constitution of Tasmania was settled by Local Acts (18 Vic., No. 17; 49 Vic., No. 8; 1 Edwd. VII., No. 8; and 3 Edwd. VII., No. 17). By the Act of 1855 the Legislative Council and House of Assembly are constituted "The Parliament." The former consists of 18 members, elected for six years; and the latter of 35 members, elected for three years. The Governor, who is appointed by the Crown, is aided by a Cabinet of responsible Ministers. The franchise has been extended to women. For local purposes the island is divided into municipal, police, road district, and town boards, which elect their own councillors and trustees.

CAPITAL, City of Hobart. Population, with suburbs, 34,949. Other towns are Launceston (pop. 21,650), Zeehan, Ulverstone, E. Devonport, Latrobe, Waratah, Westbury, Longford, Burnie, and Queenstown.

VI. WESTERN AUSTRALIA

includes all that portion of the continent west of 129° E. long., the most westerly point being in 112° 52′ E. long., and from 13° 30′ to 35° 8′ S. lat. Its extreme length is, from north to south, 1,480 miles, and 1,000 from east to west, and its total area 975,920 square miles. The jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata), sometimes erroneously called mahogany, covers immense tracts of land in the S.W. portion of the State; its timber is extraordinarily durable, and as it resists the white ant and the Teredo navalis it is admirably adapted for railway sleepers, and for piles for bridges and harbour works. The sandalwood (Santalum cygnorum) has long been an article of export; the tuart (Eucalyptus gomphocephala) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor), eucalypti of enormous size, are valuable timber trees. The occupied portion of the State extends along the western coast for about 1,200 miles, while the mining population has penetrated over 500 miles into the interior, and the population on June 30, 1906, was 260,738. The average temperature of Perth (lat. 32° S.) for the past 20 years was 65°, while the mean for the barometer for 20 years was 30·05 inches. The climate is one of the healthiest and most enjoyable in the world. There are two seasons, the wet and the dry, the former lasting from May to October. The total rainfall at Perth during 1905 was 34·6, the average for the past 30 years being 33·08. The chief products are gold, wool, timber, pearls and pearl-shells, silver, lead, copper, tin, coal, iron, sandal wood, cereals, fruit, wine, horses, and cattle. Cultivation in the past was retarded by want of sufficient labour and means of transport, but the conditions are now rapidly improving; large tracts of fertile soil, in the south-western districts, where sandalwood and other trees grow abundantly, are suitable for the culture of the vine, olive, and fig. The climate and soil are admirably adapted for silk-growing and for vintage purposes, and there are at present 3,541 acres of vineyards in the State. Good wheat-growing soils also exist in the southern division, and 195,071 acres were under cultivation for this cereal in 1905. Magnetic iron, lead, copper, and tin ores exist in large quantities.

Gold Statistics.—The groups of the Coolgardie goldfields (covering a vast portion of the interior and extending to the 125th meridian), as well as other fields, are being rapidly developed, the production of gold being 207,111 fine oz. in 1895, 251,613 oz. in 1896, 603,847 oz. in 1897, 939,490 oz. in 1898, 1,470,605 oz. in 1899, 1,414,311 oz. in 1900, 1,703,416 oz. in 1901, 1,871,038 oz. in 1902, 2,064,801 oz. in 1903, 1,983,230 oz. in 1904, 1,955,316 oz. in 1905, and 1,054,726 oz. in the first seven months of 1906. To the Coolgardie group belong the following goldfields: North Coolgardie, Broad Arrow, North-East Coolgardie, East Coolgardie, and Coolgardie. The largest amounts have been obtained from the East Coolgardie field, Murchison being next in productiveness. Gold is also found in the Kimberley, Pilbara, West Pilbara, Ashburton, Gascoyne, East Murchison, Dundas, Donnybrook, Peak Hill, Yalgoo, Mt. Margaret, Yilgarn, and Phillips River districts. The total amount produced in the State from 1886 to 31 July, 1906, is 15,926,413 fine oz.; of this amount 7,080,800 oz. were received at the Royal Mint, Perth.

There are 2,312 miles of railway open; the Great Southern Railway connects Perth, the capital of the State, with Albany (King George Sound), and the Eastern and Eastern Goldfields Railways connect the capital with Fremantle, Northam, and Kalgoorlie, and also with Kanowna, Menzies, Malcolm, Leonora, Morgans, and Laverton, on the goldfields. The Midland and Northern lines join Perth to Geraldton, Cue, and Nannine. The South-Western line connects Perth with Bunbury, Busselton, Collie, and Bridgetown. There is direct telegraphic communication with England by the Eastern Extension Telegraph Co.'s cable from Roebuck Bay on the N.W. coast, in addition to the line through Eucla to Adelaide, and with South Africa by Cocos Island. The principal ports are Fremantle, Albany, and Bunbury. The imports chiefly consist of provisions, sugar, tea, tobacco, spirits, beer, soap, machinery, ironmongery, clothing of various kinds, &c. The exports are of wool, gold, jarrah and karri timber, tin, copper ore, sandalwood, pearls and pearl-shells, kangaroo skins, &c. The estimated value of the exports for 1905 was:—Wool, £594,872; timber, £689,960; sandalwood, £38,817; pearls, £120,000 (estimated); shell, £146,832; gold, £3,300,402; gold specie, £4,245,244; hides and skins, £168,280. The stock returns of the State are as follows:—Horses, 97,397; cattle, 631,825; sheep, 3,120,703; and pigs, 74,567. In 1905 the vessels entered inwards numbered 662 (tonnage, 1,839,227), and those outwards 656 (tonnage, 1,828,256).

Under an Act of the Imperial Parliament, 53 & 54 Vict. c. 26, the State is ruled by a Governor appointed by the Crown, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. This Act was proclaimed and came into operation 21st Oct., 1890.

Religious Statistics.—At the census of 1901, 75,617 belonged to the Church of England, and 40,584 were Roman Catholics.

The educational system is compulsory and free, and numerous elementary schools are under the control of the Minister of Education. There is a training college, a technical school, a school of mines at Kalgoorlie, and a school in Perth for the higher education of boys. The foundation of a University is under consideration. The total amount expended on education during the year ended 30 June, 1906, was £163,010.

The principal towns in the State are:—Perth (pop., including suburbs, 52,300), on the right bank of the Swan River estuary, 12 miles from Fremantle; Fremantle (including suburbs, 27,100), and the following municipalities:—Albany (3,435), Coolgardie (3,830), Kalgoorlie (6,780), Boulder (5,658), Kanowna, York, Menzies, Northam, Bunbury, Claremont, Guildford, Collie, Geraldton, Kookynie, and Midland Junction (from 1,000 to 3,000 each), Busselton, Newcastle, Cossack, Cue, Roebourne, Esperance, Norseman, Southern Cross, Broad Arrow, Mount Morgans, &c.

New Zealand,

a colony in the South Pacific Ocean, consisting of three main islands, known as the North, Middle (or South), and Stewart Islands, situate about 1,200 miles E. of New South Wales, between 33°—50° S. lat. and 162° E. long.—173° W. long., with several groups of smaller islands lying at some distance from the principal group. Portions of New Zealand were explored by Tasman, under the direction of the Dutch East India Company, in 1642, and visited at various times during the 18th century, and in 1777 by Captain Cook. The first settlement of Europeans was made in 1814, but no colonisation took place until 1839. In 1841 New Zealand was, by letters patent, erected into a separate colony distinct from New South Wales. The entire area (inclusive of the Chatham, Auckland, Kermadec, Cook, and other islands) is stated at 104,751 square miles, or 66,889,520 acres (being a little smaller than Great Britain and Ireland), of which two-thirds are fitted for agriculture and grazing. The North Island comprises about 44,468 sq. miles; Middle Island, 58,525; Stewart Island, 665, with only 272 inhabitants. An adjacent group, named the Chatham Islands, contain 375 sq. miles; and the Cook and other Pacific islands recently included within the boundaries of the colony, 280 sq. miles.

The European population at the census of April 29, 1906, was 888,578 (471,008 males and 417,570 females). The native population (Maoris) in February, 1901, was 47,731 (25,538 males and 22,193 females), chiefly in the North Island, and 12,340, excluding 776 absent from the islands (6,224 males and 6,116 females) in the Cook and other Pacific islands, making the total population of the colony, including Maoris, &c., 948,753 persons. In 1840 a treaty was concluded at Waitangi with the native chiefs, whereby the sovereignty of the islands was ceded to Great Britain, while the chiefs were guaranteed the possession of their lands, forests, &c., the right of pre-emption being reserved to the Crown if they wished to alienate any portion. This right was abolished by legislation in 1862, when the Crown relinquished its right of pre-emption, whilst at the same time the purchase of native lands for the Crown did not abate, but continued side by side with the private purchases until 1894, when the right of private purchase was withdrawn.

The Maori Lands Administration Act of 1900 is a measure intended to restrain natives from pauperising themselves by parting with the freehold of the balance of their lands. Its main provisions are: (1) Prohibition of further alienation of the freehold of native lands; (2) leasing of native lands through partly elected and partly nominated Councils similar to the Native Land Court; (3) advances to natives to road and otherwise improve their surplus lands.

New Zealand in many parts is very mountainous; a mountain chain traverses the west side of the South Island, culminating in Mount Cook, 12,349 feet in height. The extremes of daily temperature vary throughout the year only by an average of 20°; London is 7° colder than the North Island and 4° colder than the South Island. The mean annual temperature of the whole colony for the different seasons is:—Spring, 55°; Summer, 63°; Autumn, 57°; and Winter, 48°; and the climate is admirably adapted for raising every fruit, flower, and edible that flourishes in Great Britain. Amongst the productions are the Kauri pine (found only at the northern extremity of the islands), much valued for shipbuilding, and for its resin (Kauri gum); and the native flax, which is used for the manufacture of ropes and twine. The principal exports in 1905 were wool (£5,381,333), frozen meat (£2,694,432), gold (£2,093,936), butter and cheese (£1,613,728), agricultural products, tallow, Kauri gum and timber. Coal-mining is one of the largest industries, the output in 1905 being 1,585,756 tons, the approximate total output to the end of 1905 being 21,686,997 tons. Gold-mining, both alluvial and quartz, is an important industry in many districts, and a rich iron ore, in the form of ironsand, has been found in Taranaki; copper is also found.

The total extent of land under all kinds of crop (excluding lands in artificial grasses), and of land broken up but not under crop, is (1906) 1,535,384 acres, while there are 12,525,461 acres of land in sown grass, of which 7,745,727 acres had not been previously ploughed. In 1905 the number of sheep was 19,130,875; horned cattle, 1,810,936; and horses, 326,537. In March, 1906, there were 2,407 miles of Government railway lines in working order, and more under construction; and 113 miles of private lines, together with an excellent coaching system. During 1905 the vessels entered inwards numbered 627 (tonnage, 1,139,410), and those entered outwards 627 (tonnage, 1,141,552), exclusive of coasting vessels.

The general government consists of a Governor aided by a Ministry, a Legislative Council appointed by the Governor (prior to 1891 the appointments were for life; since that date for seven years only), at present consisting of 35 members, and a House of Representatives, consisting of 80 members elected for three years. Four of the members are Maoris elected by the natives. Women are entitled to register as electors and to vote at the elections for Members of the House of Representatives, but are not qualified for election nor for appointment to the Legislative Council.

The State system of education is free, secular, and compulsory. There were (December, 1905) 1,857 public primary schools, with 3,291 teachers and 137,623 scholars; there are also 291 private schools, with 16,639 scholars, and, in addition, 95 village schools for the Maoris. The higher education of boys and girls in the cities and large towns is carried on in 26 endowed colleges and grammar schools. The University of New Zealand has power to confer degrees. The annual postal circulation of the colony was (1905) 74,767,288 letters and post-cards, 23,626,362 newspapers, and 24,099,918 books and packets, and the work is effected by 1,937 post-offices. There are 8,355 miles of telegraph line carrying 25,116 miles of wire. The administration of the law is carried out by a Supreme Court, consisting of a Chief Justice and five Puisne Judges, and by district judges, stipendiary magistrates, and justices of the peace.

Defences.—New Zealand has torpedo-boats and submarine mining steamers; the Calliope Dock, capable of docking two warships, was subsidised by the Imperial Government in 1898.

CAPITAL, Wellington, in the North Island.

The population of the chief cities and towns at the census of 29 April, 1906, was as follows:—Wellington (and suburbs), 63,807; Auckland (and suburbs), 82,101; Dunedin (and suburbs), 56,020; Christchurch (and suburbs), 67,878; Invercargill (and suburbs), 12,507; Napier, 9,454; Nelson, 8,164; and Oamaru, 5,071.

Cook Islands Administration.—The Cook and other islands, annexed to the British Empire in October, 1900, and included in the boundaries of New Zealand since June, 1901, consist of the islands of Rarotonga, Aitutaki, Mangaia, Atiu, Mauke, Mitiaro, Penrhyn, Manihiki, Rakahanga, and Niue or Savage Island, together with a few smaller islands, and are situated in the South Pacific, between 8° to 23° S. lat. and 156° to 170° W. long. The population consists of about 15,000 natives, and 150 Europeans and other nationalities. The chief products are bananas, oranges, and other tropical fruits, copra, coffee, pearl-shell, and hats (Niue). The exports average about £38,000, and the imports about £39,000. Rarotonga is the chief island, with a native population of 2,200, and a European population of 110. The government is administered locally under the direction of New Zealand. The Federal Council of the Cook Islands, under the direction of the Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, legislates for all the islands except Niue, which has a Resident Commissioner and an Island Council of its own. Makea Ariki still remains as the head native chief of the Cook Islands, and receives an allowance from the Government.

Fiji.

This is a group of 200 to 250 islands in the South Pacific Ocean, about 1,100 miles north of New Zealand, which extend 300 miles from east to west, and 300 north to south, between 15° 45′ and 21° 10′ S. lat. and 176° E.—178° W. long. The gross area of the group is about 7,451 square miles. The islands are of volcanic origin, with lofty mountains, and well wooded. The principal are Viti Levu (Great Fiji) and Vanua Levu (Great Land). The climate is equable and remarkably healthy for Europeans; the average temperature in the shade in the cool season is 72°, rising to 84° in the hot season, extremes lying between 60° and 94°. Vegetation is remarkably luxuriant, the chief productions being the bread-fruit tree, banana, plantain, pea-nuts, yams, and dalo (taro), cocoanut, sugar-cane, tea, cotton, maize, tobacco, and arrowroot. Sugar, pearl-shells, maize, bêche-de-mer, copra, and cocoanut oil were for some time the chief exports, but the principal exports in 1905 were sugar, green fruit, copra, vanilla, bêche-de-mer, pea-nuts, and turtle-shell. The Governor is appointed by the Crown, and is assisted by an Executive Council, consisting of five official members. Laws are passed by a Legislative Council, of which the Governor is president, and which contains ten official and eight unofficial members, partly elected and partly nominated by the Crown. Native administration is carried on through the chiefs under the Governor's supervision. The population (31 March, 1901) was 120,124 (94,397 native Fijians, 17,105 Indian immigrants, 2,459 Europeans, and some Polynesians and others).

PACIFIC ISLANDS.

(1) The British Solomon Islands, protected since 1893, and consisting of Guadalcanar, Malayta, and other islands situated in about 8° S. and 160° E., with a total area of about 8,500 square miles. The Santa Cruz Group and several other islands were incorporated in the Protectorate in 1898 and 1899. The revenue in 1905-6 was £2,378, and the expenditure £2,340; exports, 1904-5, £47,405; imports, £33,656. European residents, 110; native pop., 150,000. The seat of government is Tulagi.

Resident Commissioner, Charles M. Woodford £550

(2) The Gilbert and Ellice Islands Protectorate. The Gilbert Group, situated between 4° N. and 3° S. latitude and 172° and 177° W. longitude, consists of 16 islands (Little Makin, Butaritari, Marakei, Abaian, Tarawa, Maiana, Abemama, Kuria, Aranuka, Nonouiti, Tabeteuea, Onoatoa, Beru, Nukunau, Tamana, and Arorae, with several small islands or islets depending upon them), and the Ellice Group, between 5° S. and 10½° S. latitude and 176° E. and 179·58° W. longitude, consists of nine islands (Nanomea, Nanamaga, Nuitao, Nui, Vaitupu, Nukufetau, Funafuti, Nukulelei, and Nuirakita). Ocean Island (or Paanopa), in lat. 0° 52′ S. and long. 169° 35′ E., was included in the Protectorate in 1900. The total area of the Protectorate is about 166 square miles, with a population of about 35,000 and 80 Europeans. Revenue, 1905, £2,582; expenditure, £3,076; imports (1900), £20,369; exports (chiefly copra), £21,582.

Resident Commissioner, W. Telfer Campbell £650

(3) The Tonga or Friendly Islands.—A protectorate over the Tonga Islands was proclaimed 19 May, 1900. These islands are situated in the Southern Pacific to the E.S.E. of Fiji, and 390 miles therefrom, with an area of 385 square miles, and a population on Jan. 1, 1905, of 21,103 natives of Tonga, 300 other natives, 151 British subjects, 89 foreigners, and 120 half-castes. The limits of the group are between 15° and 23° 30′ S. and 173° and 177° W., and it consists of three divisions, called Tongatabu, Haapai, and Vavau. At the former is the seat of government, the king being Jioaji Tubou II., who was born 18 June, 1874. Soil generally is fertile; the principal exports are copra, fungus, green fruit, kava, and candle-nuts. Revenue, 1905, £30,893; expenditure, £24,445; imports, £70,868; exports, £110,728. Of the total shipping, 93,994 (1905), 77,340 tons were British.

Agent and Consul, Hamilton Hunter, C.M.G. £850

(4) The Phœnix Islands (Wilkes, Gardner, Birnie, Hull, Enderbury, Phœnix, and Sidney), between 2° 30′ and 4° 30′ S. and 171° and 174° W.

Deputy Commissioner, H.M. Agent, Tonga.

(5) The Union, or Tokelau, Group of six islands and some islets (Quiros, Fakaafo (3), Nukunono, and Atafu).

(6) Pitcairn Island, situate in lat. 25° 3′ 30″ S., long. 130° 8′ 30″ W. Pop. (April, 1904) 141, descendants of the mutineers of H.M.S. Bounty. Arrowroot is manufactured and exported.

Deputy Commissioner, R. T. Simons (H.M. Consul for the Society Islands).

President of the Island, J. R. McCoy.

(7) Fanning Island, in lat. 3° 51′ 23′ N., long. 159° 21′ 50″ W. Pop., 21 Europeans in connection with Pacific cable station, and about 200 Gilbert Islanders in copra industry.

Deputy Commissioner, Alfred Smith.

(8) The New Hebrides Group lies between the 12th and 20th degrees of south latitude and the 165th and 170th of east longitude. A joint commission consisting of British and French naval officers has been appointed to protect the lives and property of British and French subjects, and to maintain order. British and French Residents were appointed in 1902. Nat. pop. about 100,000, European 664. Principal exports, copra and bananas, also coffee, timber, and sulphur. A British steamer runs regularly between Sydney and the group, and French steamers from Sydney and New Caledonia. Imports, 1904, £54,777; exports, 1904, £43,000; shipping, 64,900 tons.

The West Indian Colonies.

The West Indies are an immense number of islands and islets, some of them mere rocks, extending from 10° to 27° North, and from 59° 30′ to 85° West. They are divided by geographers into (1) the Bahamas, (2) the Greater Antilles, and (3) the Lesser Antilles, of which the last-named are subdivided into the Leeward and Windward Islands. The islands lying off the coasts of South America and Central America respectively form two separate groups in addition to those already mentioned. The total area of the West Indies is probably about 95,000 square miles, of which the Greater Antilles occupy not less than 83,000 square miles. The prevalent character of the islands is bold and mountainous. The highest points are about 8,000 feet above the sea-level, and several of the islands contain active volcanoes, while nearly all of them show signs of volcanic action. The mean yearly temperature of the islands is about 78°, but that of the higher lands is often much less. The seasons alternate from drought to moisture, and in most parts of the archipelago there are two wet and two dry seasons. On the whole it may be said that the climate is generally healthy, and between the months of November and May in many of the islands it is delightful. The vegetable productions are both varied and abundant, the principal articles of commerce including sugar, bananas, oranges, coffee, cocoa, cotton, pimento, nutmegs, indigo, tobacco, maize, guava, ginger, coco nuts, annotto, aloes, sassafras, the castor-oil tree, cabbage-tree, and medicinal drugs. Of the more common fruits there are the pineapple, pomegranate, cocoa-nut, oranges, lemons, limes, citrons, the mango, shaddock, papaw, banana, and plantain. Yams, sweet potatoes, and manioc also grow freely. The mountains in the greater islands furnish a varied abundance of timber, including mahogany, cedar, lignum-vitæ, iron-wood, Indian-fig, well adapted for cabinet-work, shipbuilding, and other arts. Indian corn yields abundant crops almost everywhere, and rice in the island of Trinidad. The total population is nearly 4,000,000, of whom above half are negroes, while the remainder are chiefly mulattoes. The islands at the time of their discovery were inhabited partly by the Caribs, a fierce and warlike race, and partly by a less savage race known as the Arrowauks; but both these native Indian races are now practically extinct. By far the largest of the West Indies are the magnificent islands of Cuba and Hispaniola.

The first spot on which Columbus landed in the New World in 1492 was San Salvador, one of the Bahamas. On the same voyage Cuba and Hispaniola were discovered, and the other islands very shortly afterwards. For some time the West Indies remained in the undisputed possession of Spain, subject only to occasional visits from French and English ships. At the commencement of the 17th century, however, the English, French, and Dutch began to form settlements, and to import negroes from West Africa to work the plantations; and whenever war broke out in Europe it spread to the West Indies. They are now divided as follows:—British: Jamaica, Turks and Caicos Is.; all the Bahamas; Antigua, Montserrat, Nevis, St. Christopher, Dominica, the Virgin and the Cayman Islands, Grenada, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Barbados, Trinidad, Tobago (which is now a ward of Trinidad); and the islands off the coast of British Honduras. Spanish: Isle de Pinos, Bieque, and Culebra. French: Martinique, Guadaloupe, Deseada, Marie Galanta, Les Saintes, St. Bartholomew, and St. Martin (the last partly Dutch). Dutch: St. Eustatius, Saba, Bonaire, Curaçao, Aruba. Danish: Santa Cruz, St. Thomas, St. John. U.S.A.: Puerto Rico. Venezuelan: Coche Cuagua, Tortuga, and Margarita. Independent: Hispaniola, divided into Hayti and San Domingo and Cuba. The British Islands have an area of about 13,750 square miles, and a population of 1,350,000. In 1898 a most disastrous hurricane swept over the group of islands, almost all of which were affected, while St. Vincent, Barbados, and St. Lucia were practically devastated. On August 7th, 1899, a further hurricane devastated the island of Montserrat, doing damage also to St. Kitts, Nevis, and Antigua. The island of Puerto Rico (U.S.A.), Guadaloupe (French), and Santa Cruz (Danish) also suffered severely. Further disaster befell St. Vincent in 1902 by the eruption of "La Soufrière," one-third of the island being devastated, and Mont Pelée, in Martinique, entirely destroyed the town of St. Pierre. The British Islands have still a future in store for them when cane-sugar growing can again profitably be carried on, and in the fruit, cotton, and wool industries, which are now rapidly increasing.

JAMAICA.*

aboriginally Xaymaca, or Land of Wood and Water—an island situate in the Caribbean Sea, about 90 miles to the south of Cuba, within 17° 43′–18° 32′ North lat. and 76° 11′—78° 21′ W. long. It is the largest and most valuable of the British West Indian Islands, being 144 miles in length and 49 in extreme breadth, containing an area of 4,193 square miles, and a population, in April, 1891, of 639,491, showing an increase during the previous decade of 58,687; in 1891 the whites numbered 14,692; coloured, 121,955; blacks, 488,624, and there were a number of Coolies and chinese. The estimated population on March 31, 1905, was 806,690.

Jamaica was discovered on May 3, 1494, by Columbus, who called it St. Jago. It was taken possession of by the Spaniards in 1509; but in 1655 a British expedition, sent out by Oliver Cromwell, under Penn and Venables, attacked the island, which capitulated after a trifling resistance. In 1670 it was formally ceded to England by the Treaty of Madrid.

From the sea-level on all sides of Jamaica a series of ridges gradually ascend towards the central ranges, dividing the large rivers, and attaining, in the culminating Peak of the Blue Mountains, in the eastern part of the island, an elevation of 7,423 feet. From these mountains at least 70 streams descend to the north and south shores, but none are navigable except the Black River, and that only for small craft. There are several excellent harbours, and the island is intersected by good roads. There are 185 miles of railway open. Telegraph stations and post-offices are established in every town and in very many villages; the number of accounts open in the savings banks was 36,188 (1906). Most of the staple products of tropical climates are raised. Sugar and rum are manufactured and exported; the latter is still counted the best in the world; and the coffee raised in certain districts of the Blue Mountains fetches the highest price that is given in the London market. There is an extensive trade in fruits, chiefly bananas and oranges, with the U.S.A. and U.K. Maize and Indian corn grow luxuriantly. The Guinea grass, from four to six feet in height, grows wild, and is superior to any other for pasturage, while the woods furnish an abundance of rich dyestuffs, drugs, and spices, and the forests abound in the rarest of cabinet woods. The Governor is assisted by a Privy Council not to exceed 8 members; the Legislative Council consists of the Governor, the senior military officer, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-General, the Director of Public Works, and the Collector-General (all ex officio), and of such other persons, not exceeding 10, as the King or the Governor may appoint, called Nominated Members, and 14 elected by the people, being one for each parish of the island. The island is divided into three counties, Surrey in the east, Middlesex in the centre, and Cornwall in the west. The principal city is Kingston, the seat of government and the largest port and town, pop. 46,542; the next in importance are Spanish Town, pop. 5,019, and Montego Bay, 4,803.

The chief articles of export are: Fruit, 55·0; coffee, 7·6; sugar, 6·9; dye-woods, 4·5; pimento, 4·5; rum, 5·6; and minor products, 15·9. The chief customers are the U.S.A., 57·4, and the U.K., 19·3; the imports being from the U.K. 48·9, U.S.A. 39·0.

* The Government of Jamaica publishes annually a Handbook of the Island, full of information respecting the history and personnel of the island.

TURK'S AND CAICOS ISLANDS.

These islands geographically form a sort of annexe of the Bahama group, from which Government they were separated in 1848. In 1873 they were annexed to Jamaica, from the north-west of which they are distant about 420 miles. They have an area of about 170 square miles. The population in 1901 was 5,287, of which the principal island, Grand Turk, contains 1,751. Salt is the principal industry of the islands and Sisal hemp is grown and exported.

A Commissioner administers the government of the Dependency, assisted by a Legislative Board. This Board has control of local finance, and passes local ordinances, subject to the assent of the Governor of Jamaica, who is also the medium of communication between the Commissioner and the Colonial Office. The Legislature of Jamaica has the power to pass laws applying to the Turk's and Caicos Islands, and the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Jamaica extends to the Islands in matters of divorce and matrimonial causes.

THE BAHAMAS,

a chain of islands lying between 21° 42′—27° 34′ N. lat. and 72° 40′—79° 5′ W. long. The group consists of about twenty inhabited islands, and an immense number of islets and rocks, comprising an area of about 5,794 square miles, and a population in 1905 of 58,175, the most part being descendants of liberated Africans. The principal islands are: New Providence (containing the capital, Nassau), San Salvador, Abaco, Grand Bahama, Long Island, Eleuthera, Exuma, Mayaguana Harbour Island, Great Inagua, Andros Islands, Watlings Island, Rum Cay, Long Cay (C.I.), Ragged Island and Biminis. Originally settled by Englishmen, the Bahamas were, in 1781, surprised by the Spanish, but at the peace of Versailles were restored to the English. The climate is salubrious, and in the winter Nassau, which is outside the tropics, is frequented by many Americans. The chief industry is sponge-gathering; the exports of sponge in 1905 being valued at £113,753. The fruit trade, principally with the United States, is also important, the total value of pineapples exported in 1905 being £12,776; bananas, coconuts, fruit and vegetables are also exported. Mahogany, lignum-vitæ, mastic, ironwood, ebony, logwood, and satinwood are found throughout the islands; tobacco, castor-oil plants, and cotton flourish, but enterprise is lacking to encourage these industries. A fibre industry is fairly established, the land under the fibre plant being 20,412 acres, and the value of Bahamas hemp fibre exported in 1905, £37,522. The imports are chiefly food-stuffs, wines, spirits, cotton, silk and worsted fabrics, and hardware.

The Government is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 9 members, a Legislative Council of 9 members, and a Representative Assembly of 29 members.

THE LEEWARD ISLANDS.

The Leeward Islands under British authority consist of the 5 presidencies of (1) Antigua, with Barbuda and Redonda; (2) St. Christopher and Nevis, with Anguilla; (3) Dominica, under Administrators; (4) Montserrat; and (5) the Virgin Islands, all, except the latter, having their own local legislature. These 5 presidencies make up the colony of the Leeward Islands, which is administered by a Governor, to whom the Administrators and Commissioners are subordinate, and which has also a general Legislative Council, possessing concurrent legislative powers with the local Legislatures on certain subjects. The federal colony in 1901 contained 127,536 inhabitants (56,952 males and 70,584 females). The General Legislative Council consists of 8 ex-officio and 8 elective members with the Governor as President.

(1) ANTIGUA (AND BARBUDA).

Antigua is the seat of government and residence of the Governor-in-Chief. It lies in 17° 6′ N. lat. and 61° 45′ W. long., and is about 70 miles in circumference. Its area is nearly 108 square miles, equal to 68,980 acres, of which nearly 17,000 are under cultivation. The population (with Barbuda) in 1901 was 34,953, including 15,861 males and 19,092 females. Settled by the English in 1632, and granted to Lord Willoughby by Charles II., this is one of those islands which has always been more distinctively English. It was at one time a naval and military station of some importance. It is much less hilly and wooded than the other Leeward Islands. It is largely given up to the cultivation of sugar, and two central sugar factories have been erected, sugar canes being purchased from surrounding estates and peasants. A considerable amount of cotton is being planted; it also exports molasses, tamarinds, and arrow-root. In March, 1898, the Crown Colony system of government was instituted.

(2) ST. CHRISTOPHER (ST. KITTS) AND NEVIS (WITH ANGUILLA).

The islands of St. Kitts, Nevis, and Anguilla were united in 1882 to form one Presidency, and taken together they had a population (1901) of 46,446, and a total area of about 150 square miles. The climate is decidedly healthy for the tropics, the temperature being from 78° to 85°.

St. Kitts, the principal island of the Presidency, and the oldest colony in the West Indies, is situated in lat. 17° 18 N. and long. 62° 48′ W., and comprises an area of 68 square miles, its greatest length being 28 miles, and greatest breadth about 5 miles. It is one of the most effectively cultivated sugar islands in the West Indies, a continuous line of green estates sweeping up all round the coast from the sea towards the central cone, which rises to a height of 3,711 feet (Mount Misery). The capital, Basseterre, pop. (1901) 9,962, is a port of registry, and had 58 sailing vessels of 1,041 tons in 1905.

Nevis (separated from St. Kitts by a strait some 3 miles wide) has an area of 50 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 12,774. Sugar-cane and cotton are grown. Its greatest elevation is 3,596 feet. Chief town, Charlestown. Pop. (1901), 1,050.

Anguilla is about 60 miles N.W. of St. Kitts, 16 miles in length, and varies in breadth from 1 to 3 miles, containing an area of 35 square miles. Population (1901) 3,890. Salt is the principal production, besides cattle, ponies, and garden stock, while cotton is extensively cultivated.

the largest island of the colony, and the loftiest of the Lesser Antilles, is situate between 15° 20′—15° 45′ N. lat. and 61° 13′—61° 30′ W. long., 95 miles S. of Antigua, and is about 29 miles long and 15 broad, comprising an area of 291 sq. miles, or 186,240 acres, of which about 70,000 acres are under cultivation. The island is of volcanic origin and very mountainous and picturesque, abounding in streams fairly well stocked with fish, and the soil is very fertile. The temperature varies, according to the altitude, from 55° to 85°. The cultivation of sugar has been practically replaced by cocoa, limes, coffee, and fruit. The population numbered 29,000 in 1901. The climate is healthy, and during the winter months very pleasant. Yellow fever is unknown, and from November to June the island is suitable as a health resort for pulmonary and rheumatic invalids. There is a Legislative Council, consisting of the Administrator, who sits as President, and 6 official and 6 non-official members nominated by the Governor. The principal towns are Roseau, on the south-west coast, population (1901) about 6,000, and Portsmouth, population about 2,500.

is situated in 16° 45′ N. lat. and 62° W. long., 26 miles S.W. of Antigua. It is about 11 miles in length and 7 in breadth, comprising an area of 32½ square miles, and in 1904 a population of 13,127 (6,087 males, 7,040 females). Discovered by Columbus in 1493 it was settled by Englishmen, but conquered and held by the French, and only finally assigned to Great Britain in 1784. It is justly considered the most healthy and beautiful of the Antilles; it contains three active Soufrières and several hot springs, while the scenery is charmingly diversified. About two-thirds of the island are mountainous, the rest well cultivated. The lime-tree is largely grown, the Montserrat Company having the principal plantation; the trees suffered severely in the hurricane of Aug. 1899, but they have now been replanted and their cultivation extended to the southern part of the island. Sugar was formerly the crop of greatest importance, but limes and cotton now claim first place. The chief town is Plymouth, with a population (1901) of 1,461.

(5) THE VIRGIN ISLANDS,

a group of islands belonging chiefly to Great Britain and Denmark, form a connecting link between the Greater and Lesser Antilles. Such of the islands as are British became so in 1666; the principal are—Tortola (the largest), situate in 18° 27′ N. lat. and 64° 40′ W. long., Virgin Gorda, and Anegada. The area of the British possessions is 58 square miles, and the population in 1901 was 4,908. There is good pasturage for cows, sheep, and goats. Sugar and cotton are raised in small quantities, and fishing and poultry-rearing are also carried on. A valuable mine of copper has been worked at Virgin Gorda. The capital of the group is Road Town, on the south-east of Tortola; population (1901), 352.

THE WINDWARD ISLANDS.

The Windward, or Southern, group of the West Indian islands includes Barbados, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, the Grenadines, Grenada, and Tobago. Of these, Barbados is a separate colony with its own governor, and Tobago is attached to Trinidad. The Government of the Windward Islands is made up of the three colonies of Grenada (the seat of government), St. Vincent, and St. Lucia, with their dependencies, the Grenadines being divided between Grenada and St. Vincent. There is one governor for the three islands; but there is no General Legislative Council as in the Leeward Islands, and no common tariff or treasury. There is a Court of Appeal, consisting of the judges of the three colonies and of Barbados, a common Audit, and a common Lunatic Asylum; but, with this exception, each island retains its own institutions, and in the governor's absence is governed by an Administrator subordinate to him. The aggregate population (1903) was 167,067, and the total area 508 square miles.

GRENADA (AND THE GRENADINES).

Grenada is situated between the parallels of 12° 30′-12° 58′ N. lat. and 61° 20′-61° 35′ W. long., and is about 21 miles in length and 12 miles in breadth; it is about 96 miles north of Trinidad, 68 miles S.S.W. of St. Vincent, and 100 miles S.W. of Barbados. It contains about 85,120 acres, of which 30,239 acres are cultivated, and a population (including some of the Grenadines) of 69,530 (1905). The country is mountainous and very picturesque, and the climate is healthy. The Grand Etang, a lake on the summit of a mountain ridge about 1,740 feet above the level of the sea, and Lake Antoine, are the most remarkable natural curiosities; near the former a sanatorium, under Government auspices, has been established. Grenada was discovered by Columbus in 1498, and named Conception. It was originally colonised by the French, and was definitely ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783.

The soil is very fertile, and cocoa, spices, sugar, cotton, coffee, and fruit are grown. The forests are rich in timbers, particularly bullet wood, locust, mahogany, white cedar, and galba, and vanilla and several varieties of gum-yielding trees are indigenous. Turtles are caught and exported, and whales are met with, especially among the Grenadines. The imports chiefly comprise dry goods, bread-stuffs, hardware, &c. The Legislative Council consists of 14 members, seven of whom are officials.

St. George's, on the south-west coast, is the chief town, and possesses a good harbour.

The GRENADINES are a chain of small islands lying between Grenada and St. Vincent (within which Governments they are included), comprising an area of 8,462 acres. The largest island is Carriacou, attached to the Government of Grenada, pop. (1905) 7,295.

ST. LUCIA,

the largest and most picturesque of the Windward group, situated in 13° 50′ N. lat. and 60° 58′ W. long., at a distance of about 50 miles W.N.W. of Barbados, 21 miles N. of St. Vincent, and 21 miles S.E. of Martinique, is 24 miles in length, with an extreme breadth of 12 miles. It comprises an area of 233 square miles, with a population (in 1905) of 53,389. It possibly possesses the most interesting history of all the smaller islands. Fights raged hotly around it, and it constantly changed hands as between the English and the French. It is mountainous, its highest point being 3,145 feet above the sea, and for the most part it is covered with forest and tropical vegetation. The principal exports are sugar (4,513 tons in 1905), molasses, cocoa—which is now being extensively cultivated—fuel, and sticks. The chief places are Castries, the capital (pop., 1901, 8,000), and Soufrière (pop. 2,300).

Port Castries, one of the finest in the W.I., is a coaling depôt. In 1905, 551 steamers (tonnage 904,340) entered Port Castries, and many British and foreign warships coaled.

ST. VINCENT,

an island about 95 miles west of Barbados, situate in 13° 10′ N. lat. and 60° 57′ W. long., is 18 miles in length and 11 in breadth, comprising an area of 140 sq. miles, and an estimated population (1906), including dependencies, of 50,170. In 1846 a large number of Portuguese labourers, amounting to 2,400, immigrated hither, and proved a valuable acquisition to the island. St. Vincent is more thoroughly English than the two other islands of the group, though it has been the scene of warfare. In 1783 it was secured to Great Britain.

The chief products are sugar, molasses, rum, arrowroot, cassava, cocoa, coffee, cotton (for which a factory has been built by the Government), and spices. The St. Vincent arrowroot has a specially good name in London. Its chief imports are linen, cotton and woollen manufactures, American flour, fish, &c. The upset price of Crown lands is 20*s.* per acre, cash, or £2 if spread over 5 years, and steps have been taken to settle the labouring classes on lands specially acquired for the purpose. On May 7, 1902, there was an eruption of the volcano known as "La Soufrière," causing many deaths, and completely destroying all crops and the majority of the buildings in an area of (roughly) one-third of the island. ## BARBADOS, the most windward of the West India Islands, is situated in 13° 4′ N., and longitude 59° 37′ W. It is nearly 21 English miles long by 14 broad at the widest part, and comprises an area of 106,470 acres (about 166 square miles), about 100,000 acres being cultivated. The population in 1904 was estimated at 199,542, being about 1,200 to the square mile. The principal exports are sugar, molasses, rum and cotton, and the imports rice, salted meat, corn, salted fish, butter, flour, and Indian corn meal.

The deposits in the savings bank on March 31, 1906, were £244,814. Liberal provision is made for elementary education, and Harrison's College provides for higher education. Unlike most of the neighbouring islands, Barbados has always remained in the possession of Great Britain, by which it was settled in 1625. In 1885 it was constituted a distinct government, with a Governor, aided by an Executive Council and an Executive Committee, a Legislative Council of nine members appointed by the Sovereign, and a House of Assembly of twenty-four members elected yearly on the basis of a moderate franchise.

The CAPITAL and port is Bridgetown (pop., 1902, about 25,500), on the shores of an open roadstead (Carlisle Bay).

TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO.

TRINIDAD is the most southerly of the West India Islands. It is close to the north coast of the continent of S. America, the nearest point of Venezuela being 7 miles distant. It lies between 10° 3′ 10° 50′ N. lat. and 61° 39′—62° W. long., and is about 55 miles in length by 40 in breadth, with an area of 1,750 square miles (200,000 acres cultivated), and an estimated population (1906) of 315,000. The island was discovered by Columbus in 1498, was colonized in 1588 by the Spaniards, and capitulated to the British under Abercromby in 1797. The chief town and port of entry, Port of Spain (pop. 56,100), is one of the finest towns in the West Indies, with electric lighting, tram, and telephone services. Other towns of importance are San Fernando (pop. 7,610), about 30 miles south of the capital; Princestown (pop. 4,497), and Arima (pop. 4,076). A remarkable phenomenon is the pitch lake near the village of La Brea, 110 acres in extent, containing an apparently inexhaustible supply; in 1905, 103,708 tons (£118,910) were exported. The soil is rich and productive, the most important products being sugar, cocoa, molasses, rum, and coco-nuts, and various kinds of timber and fruits. The chief exports (1905) were:—Sugar, 36,241 tons; rum, 744 gals.; molasses, 273,467 gals.; bitters, 33,061 gals.; and cocoa, 48,416,256 lb. Coal is found in Manzanilla, and is indicated in other parts of the island. There are 89 miles of railway open, and harbour improvements, waterworks and sewage operations are in course of construction. The island is crossed by the telegraph wire of the West India and Panama Company, by Government telegraph and private telephone wires. Thirty-eight steamers from Europe arrive every month, and six from the United States and Canada. The Government is vested in a Governor, an Executive Council, and a Legislative Council, all of whom are nominated by the Crown.

Tobago was annexed in 1889 to the Government of Trinidad, and on Jan. 1, 1899, it was constituted a ward of that island. It is between 11° 9′ N. lat. and 60° 43′ W. long., about 75 miles south-east of Grenada, 18 miles north-east of Trinidad, and 120 miles S.S.W. of Barbados; is 26 miles long, and from 6 to 7½ broad, and has an area of 114 square miles, with an estimated population (1904) of 19,000. It is one of the most healthy of the West Indies; the temperature varies from 81° to 88°.

There are two towns in the island, viz., Scarborough (pop. 1,370) and Plymouth.

CAPITAL, Port of Spain (pop. 60,000). Transit, 13 days.

British South Africa includes the following Colonies and Protectorates:—

| Name. | Area (sq. miles). | Population. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | European. | Coloured. |
| Cape Colony | 276,995 | 580,380 | 1,825,172 |

| Bechuanaland Protectorate | 275,000 | 1,004 | 119,772 |
| Swaziland | 6,536 | 890 | 84,601 |

Cape Colony, Natal and the Transvaal (1907) are self-governing Colonies. The Orange River Colony is a Crown Colony, but will shortly be granted a Constitution, raising it to the status of a self-governing Colony.

The High Commission.—The office of High Commissioner, which was formerly combined with the Governorship of Cape Colony, was by a Commission issued in 1900 vested in Lord Milner, and by a similar Commission, dated 15th March, 1905, in Lord Selborne. The High Commission is empowered to invite Conferences of representatives of the South African Colonial Governments to meet for the discussion of matters of common interest. The High Commissioner is Governor of Basutoland, and supervises the affairs of the Bechuanaland Protectorate, and he exercises the control provided by Order-in-Council over the Administration of the British South Africa Company in Southern Rhodesia (i.e., south of the Zambesi). The Southern Rhodesia Order in Council, 1898, provides for a control by the High Commissioner over legislation, important appointments, and Native affairs in Rhodesia, and for the appointment of an Imperial Resident Commissioner, who is the subordinate of the High Commissioner, and is also Commandant of the armed forces, the control of which was taken away from the Company after Dr. Jameson's raid into the Transvaal, and placed under the High Commissioner. The Administration of Barotziland (North-Western Rhodesia) is placed under the control of the High Commissioner by Order-in-Council. Lord Selborne is also Governor of the Transvaal and of the Orange River Colony, and according to a statement made in Parliament on July 31, 1906, relative to the grant of a Constitution to the Transvaal, Swaziland, which has hitherto been administered by the Governor of the Transvaal, is to be placed under the direct control of the High Commissioner.

The Inter-Colonial Council of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony.—The Inter-Colonial Council was established by Order-in-Council dated 20th May, 1903. It was created principally in order to avoid again breaking up the Central South African Railways, which are composed of the Netherlands Railway, the Pretoria-Pietersburg, and the Orange Free State Railways into two systems, one controlled by the Legislative Council of the Transvaal and the other by the Legislative Council of the Orange River Colony. The system had been worked as one during the war, and to split it in two was obviously a retrograde step. There were other reasons which made the existence of some council common to the two Colonies necessary, such as the problem which would otherwise have arisen in apportioning exactly the proceeds of the Guaranteed Loan of £35,000,000 between the two Colonies. In addition, the Council forms a starting point for any schemes of amalgamation, whether they concern only the Transvaal and Orange River Colony or the other Colonies of British South Africa as well. Broadly the Council's functions are to advise the High Commissioner and Governor of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony as to the administration of the Central South African Railways, of the South African Constabulary, and of certain other smaller services common to both Colonies, such as the Geodetic Survey, the Permit Office, &c. The Council has also the power to authorise the construction of any new railway in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony out of public funds and by private enterprise. The Council's revenue is composed principally of the gross receipts of the Central South African Railways. Any other revenues which the Legislative Councils of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony may, with the consent of the Secretary of State, from time to time devote to meeting expenditure common to both these Colonies, are also payable to the Council. The Guaranteed Loan of £35,000,000 has been handed over to the Council to be spent on the purposes for which it was raised. The principal expenditure of the Council is incurred in working the Central South African Railways, in paying interest and Sinking Fund on the Guaranteed Loan, and in the upkeep of the South African Constabulary. Any shortfall which may occur on the Council's Budget must be made up from the Revenues of the two Colonies in proportion to their respective Customs Revenue, or in such other proportion as the Secretary of State may decide. The Council consists of the High Commissioner and Governor (President), the Lieutenant-Governors of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, the Inspector-General of the S.A.C., with eighteen other members representing the Governments of the two Colonies, and three more, two of whom are nominated by the Secretary of State and one by the High Commissioner and Governor. The Council administers the Railways through a Standing Committee of nine members, known as the Railway Committee. Of this Committee two are appointed from among the Members of the Council by the High Commissioner and Governor, viz., the Chairman of the Railway Committee and the Treasurer to the Council. The remaining seven are elected at the Ordinary Annual Meeting of the Council, and of them at least three must be representatives of the Orange River Colony. Three members of the Committee, of whom one must be a member of the Orange River Colony, form a quorum. The Committee meets ordinarily once a week.

Central South African Railways.—The Central South African Railways are under the direct control and authority of the High Commissioner. They are administered by the Inter-Colonial Council of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony through a Standing Committee of nine, known as the Railway Committee. The system consisted at 30th June, 1906, of:—1,824½ open miles, 38¼ miles actually under construction, and 101½ miles the construction of which had been decided upon. 88¼ miles of the open mileage, from Van Reenen's Pass to Bethlehem in the Orange River Colony, are worked by the Natal Government, which also owns and works 87 miles of line connecting Bethlehem with the Central South African Railways' main line at Kroonstad. On the other hand, since April, 1906, the Central South African Railways have worked 136¾ miles of line, the property of the Klerksdorp-Fourteen Streams Railway Company, connecting Klerksdorp with the Cape Government Railways' system. The following figures for the year ending 31st Dec., 1905, show the results of working for the year:—Gross earnings, £5,364,619; working expenses, £2,817,928; surplus earnings, £2,546,691; ratio of working expenses to earnings, 52·5 per cent.; total expenditure on capital account to 31st Dec., 1905, £22,100,506. The white employees at the end of 1905 numbered 6,723; natives, 7,653.

South African Constabulary.—The South African Constabulary, which is under the control of the High Commissioner, was established as a Police and Military Force by Proclamation on 22nd October, 1900, for the better protection of life and property in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony. The nominal strength of the Force is 3,700 men. Besides Police work the Force performs various miscellaneous services, such as carrying mails, guarding the borders of the Colonies in order to keep out cattle disease, Customs preventive work, locust destruction, registration of deaths, fire brigade work, &c. The expenditure on the Force for the year ended 30th June, 1904, was £1,300,000. The estimated expenditure for 1906–7 is £889,000. The Headquarters of the Force are at Auckland Park, Johannesburg.

The Cape of Good Hope was discovered in 1486 by Bartholomew Diaz, the commander of one of the many expeditions sent out by successive Kings of Portugal to discover an ocean route to India. Diaz merely doubled the Cape and returned home. Eleven years later, in 1497, Vasco da Gama not only doubled the Cape and landed in what is now Natal, but successfully accomplished the voyage to India. The Portuguese, however, did not make any permanent settlement at the Cape, although it was used by their vessels, and subsequently also by those of England and Holland, as a place of call in going to and from the East Indies. In 1652 the Dutch East India Company took possession of the shores of Table Bay, established a fort, and occupied the lands adjacent, in order to be always ready with supplies for their passing ships. Until 1796 the Cape remained in the hands of the Dutch, when it was captured by an English force; but in 1803 it was restored to the Batavian Government. In 1806 it was for the second time occupied by a British force, and at the general peace of 1814 it was formally ceded to the British Crown.

The main geographical feature of South Africa is the great mountain range which begins near the Orange River, and stretches for more than 1,000 miles, right through the Cape Colony and Natal, towards the north-east. Its direction coincides with that of the sea-coast, from which it is never more than from 100 to 150 miles distant. Viewed from the seaward side it is a veritable mountain range, rising in places to the height of 10,000 ft.; but when surmounted it is seen to be properly but the broken edge of the great table-land, between 3,000 and 4,000 ft. high, which occupies the whole of the interior of South Africa. From the mountains to the sea the ground descends, not regularly, but by a series of terraces or steps; and as the British possessions also extend for some miles from south to north, the differences of elevation and latitude produce in them many varieties of climate. As a general rule, South Africa is dry and well suited to Europeans. The immigration of British subjects was 9,090 in 1891; 23,143 in 1901; 50,206 in 1903; 26,818 in 1904; and 26,307 in 1905.

* The population of Cape Colony consisted in 1891 of 923 Europeans, 405 other nationalities, 44 children, and a garrison of 489 officers and men. In 1897 the figures were 46,720 Europeans and 46,943 others. In 1885 there were 720,984 Europeans and 1,150,237 others. On 17th April 1904, the population of the whole Colony was found to be 2,409,604, of whom 579,741 were Europeans or whites.

CAPE COLONY.

The CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, strictly speaking, is a small promontory near the S.W. extremity of the continent of Africa; but the extensive colony of that name, in which are now included the Diamond Fields, the Transkei territories, Bechuanaland, and Pondoland, is washed by the Atlantic and Indian Oceans on the west and south and south-east, while upon the north and north-east it is bounded by the German Protectorate and each of the other colonies and states of South Africa. It reaches in S. lat. from 26° to 34° 50′, and in E. long. from 16° 25′ to 30°. Its extreme length from E. to W. is nearly 600 miles, and its breadth 450 miles, with a coast-line of nearly 1,200 miles, and an area of 276,995 square miles, or 177,376,660 acres, according to the latest estimate (1905), of which 45,572,308 acres were not disposed of in 1905. The territory of Walfish Bay, on the west coast, is also a portion of the Colony.

Cape Colony is divided, geographically, into two parts by the main range of mountains, which, as already mentioned, follows the line of the South African coast at a distance of 100 to 150 miles from the sea; and the southern portion is divided again by two other ranges which run across from W. to E., and are not quite so high as the first. Between the mountains and the sea, in the south-western portion of the Colony, are the chief grain and wine producing districts; in the south there are extensive forests; and along the south-eastern coast, where there are summer rains, tobacco and maize are successfully cultivated. Between the two upper ranges of mountains is an elevated tract known as the Great Karroo, which extends from W. to E. for 300 miles, and has a breadth of 70 miles. During a great portion of the year the Karroo is, as its name implies, a dry and barren district, but after rain it is covered with luxuriant vegetation, and supports countless flocks of sheep and many cattle and horses. It is here also that the important industry of ostrich-farming is carried on. The country to the north of the mountains is still more elevated, forming part of the great South African table-land. It supports, like the rest of the Colony, large numbers of sheep, and contains the chief mineral districts. The rivers of South Africa are numerous, but practically useless for either irrigation or navigation. Most of them flow in deep and precipitous ravines, and, except when swollen by the rains, are merely shallow torrents, even the largest having only sufficient water for the smallest craft, or bars at their mouths which render entrance both difficult and dangerous. The climate is healthy, and its peculiar dryness and the uniformity of the temperature cause it to be much favoured by Europeans suffering from pulmonary complaints. The vegetation of South Africa has a peculiar and distinctive character; flowers of great variety abound everywhere. The principal native flora are heaths, proteæ, and stapelias (or carrion flowers), and dense thorny thickets of what is called bush, in which are several species of aloe. The native animals are either disappearing altogether or retreating northward owing to the rapid spread of civilization. But elephants and buffaloes are still found on the south coast, and springbok abound.

The Population of the whole Colony numbered 2,409,804 when the census was taken on 17 April, 1904, inclusive of the native territories, Griqualand West and Pondoland, the European population then being 579,741 (318,544 males and 261,197 females). The births registered in the ten years 1896–1905 were 50,535, 51,327, 53,589, 54,548, 53,117, 53,468, 53,900, 56,278, 56,802, and 53,028; the deaths in the same period amounting to 32,957, 33,838, 40,996, 37,247, 47,604, 41,043, 41,207, 40,826, 40,695, and 36,699. The Dutch preponderate in the western and the English in the eastern districts.

Education.—The number of schools in operation (June 30, 1906) was 3,291, attended by 171,021 children. There are also five colleges, with 590 students, and a University (Chancellor, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G.), where 6,648 students have matriculated and 812 have taken direct degrees. The expenditure under the Education Vote in the year ended 30 June, 1906, was £481,410.

Commerce and Industry.—The principal industries are the production of wool and wine, and the rearing of horses, cattle, and ostriches, but great attention is paid to the culture of wheat, barley, and oats. The external trade amounted in 1905 to £20,000,913 for imports (textiles, £5,003,425; foodstuffs, £5,487,583; and building materials, £1,906,710) and £33,812,210 for exports (animal and vegetable substances, £4,202,798; minerals and metals, £28,072,652, including diamonds, £6,758,623, and gold, £20,731,159).

Minerals, &c.—There are important mines of copper in Namaqualand, the ores being of the richest kind, and yielding a percentage of from 32 to 36. Gold is found in the Knysna division, and manganese in the Paarl. Coal of considerable value is also raised, the output in 1905 being 164,112 tons. But by far the most valuable export is that of diamonds, which are chiefly found at Kimberley.

Railways.—The railways are mostly the property of the Government, which on Dec. 31, 1905, owned and worked 2,987 miles. There were also 617 miles of privately owned railways in Cape Colony, Bechuanaland Protectorate, and Rhodesia, worked by Government, and 289 miles privately owned and worked; in addition to which 74 miles are under construction for private companies. The Cape to Cairo Railway scheme places Capetown in communication with Bulawayo, the commercial centre of Rhodesia; Salisbury, the capital of Rhodesia; Beira, and the Victoria Falls. To the 31st Dec., 1905, the capital expended by Government was £29,973,024. The returns for 1905 show a profit of £3 6*s.* 10*d.* per cent. per annum on the capital expended. There are 8,019 miles of telegraph open, carrying 31,004 miles of wire.

Defence.—The Colonial Forces in time of peace consist of Cape Mounted Riflemen (698 officers and men), and horse and foot volunteers (9,113 officers and men). There is also a body of Mounted Police, with about 1,718 officers and men. In cases of emergency every able-bodied man between 18 and 50 years of age may be called upon to defend the Colony, and there is a large Imperial garrison stationed at Wynberg. For external purposes a Cape and West African Squadron is stationed in these waters, having a naval depôt in the Colony at Simon's Bay, where large naval works are being carried out.

Extensive harbour works have been constructed at Table Bay (Cape Town), Port Elizabeth, and East London under the direction of local boards, composed of elective and nominee members.

At Table Bay the expenditure upon construction works up to December 31, 1905, amounted to £4,036,708. The docks consist of an outer basin, area 64 acres, and an inner basin, area 8½ acres. Depth of water from 20 to 30 ft., L.W.O.S.T. Length of berthage 2½ miles. Good anchorage in bay, protected by breakwater 3,640 ft. long. Graving dock, 529 ft. long, 68 ft. broad, 24½ ft. depth on sill. Patent slip for vessels up to 500 tons. Sheer legs to lift 50 tons. Electric cranes, transporters, etc. Well-organised fire brigade maintained by Board.

The works at Port Elizabeth consist of two jetties 1,260 ft. long, which cost £260,000, and a third jetty 1,460 ft. in length, which cost £185,000. In addition, there is an explosives jetty, 1,380 ft. from the shore, with an aerial ropeway communication capable of landing 150 tons per day. There is also a slipway for vessels up to 400 tons dead weight. The Harbour Board has an electrical plant, with an output of 236 kilowatts, for lighting and power purposes. The plant includes one 10-ton and two 5-ton overhead gantries, and a 20-ton crane.

The Board's hydraulic plant consists of three pumping engines, each of 200 horse power, working twenty-nine wharf cranes, twelve capstans, four wool hoists, and a pump for street watering.

The total storage area of the Board's warehouses is about 35,000 square yards.

At East London, situated on the Buffalo River, extensive harbour works have been carried out, costing, to December 31, 1905, £2,119,662, and the improvements are still proceeding. The dock area is 100 acres. The length of quay space is 5,601 ft., and this is constantly being added to. Discharging appliances include electric, hydraulic, and steam cranes, lifting power up to 50 tons.

East London, which is connected by rail with all the railway systems of Cape Colony and other South African States, is the shortest Cape Colonial route to the Transvaal Gold Fields.

There are electric tramways in Capetown, Port Elizabeth, and East London.

BASUTOLAND.

Basutoland is an inland colony, being completely hemmed in by the Cape Colony, the Orange River Colony and Natal. It lies between 28° 45′ and 30° 40′ South latitude and 27° and 29° 30′ East longitude, and has a computed area of 10,293 square miles. The census of 1904 showed 347,731 natives and 895 whites.

The territory is well watered, and enjoys a delicious climate. It is one of the finest grain producing districts in South Africa, and the abundant grass enables the Basutos to rear immense herds of cattle. The Maluti Mountains, forming a part of the great Drakensberg chain, occupy most of the country, which is elevated, broken, and rugged.

The territory is governed by a Resident Commissioner under the direction of the High Commissioner for South Africa, the latter possessing the legislative authority which is exercised by proclamation. The chiefs adjudicate on cases between natives, with a right of appeal to the magistrates' courts, where all cases between Europeans and natives are brought. The revenue arises from the Customs dues, the Post-office, native hut-tax, and the sale of licences. Telegraph offices have been opened at Leribe, Maseru, Teyateyaneng, Morija, Mafeteng, Mohales' Hoek Quthing and Peka in connection with the Cape Colonial system. There are 246 schools, with 12,490 scholars, a large proportion being in the schools of the French Protestant Mission. There are two small Government schools, and grants-in-aid to the extent of £11,119 were made in 1905-1906. The chief articles of export are grain, wool, cattle, and horses, the imports being chiefly blankets, hardware and groceries.

THE BECHUANALAND PROTECTORATE.

The Protectorate is bounded on the south by Cape Colony, on the east by the Transvaal, on the north by Rhodesia and the Zambesi, and on the west by German South-West Africa. It is about 400 miles long and 450 miles broad; area about 275,000 square miles, and population about 120,000, of whom 1,000 are whites.

The climate is healthy during part of the year, but malarial fever is prevalent during February, March, and April, and there is a great scarcity of water, while much of the country is thick bush. The High Commissioner for South Africa has the power of making laws by proclamation for the Protectorate, where he is represented by a Resident Commissioner. The population is almost entirely a native one, the principal tribes being those of Khama (Bamangwato), of Linchwe (Bakathla), of Sebele (Bakweni), of Bathoen (Bangwaketsi), of Mokgosi (Bamalete), and of Batawana (Sekgoma).

The railway from Kimberley to Vryburg and Mafeking traverses the Protectorate on its way to Rhodesia. There is a telegraph line from Cape Colony through from Mafeking, vid Gaberones, and Francistown to Bulawayo and Salisbury. The chief European centres are Gaberones, Francistown, and Serowe, whither the Chief (Khama) and all his people recently moved from Palapye. The headquarters of the Protectorate Administration are at Mafeking, Cape Colony.

THE TRANSVAAL.

The Transvaal has a total area of 111,196 square miles (deducting the area of Vryheid and Utrecht, chiefly districts annexed to Natal), and consists of certain districts bounded on the east by Portuguese possessions, but touching Natal at the south-east corner; on the south by Natal and the Orange River Colony; on the west by Cape Colony and the Bechuanaland Protectorate; and on the north by Rhodesia; about 20,000 sq. miles lying within the tropics.

The larger portion lies to the west of the Drakensberg (Mt. Mauch, 8,725 feet) and slopes down to the Limpopo River and Bechuanaland; a smaller section lies to the east of that range towards the Indian Ocean, and along the greater part of its eastern frontier is closed in by Portuguese territory from having direct access to the sea.

Steppes and bush predominate and favour pastoral industries, whilst agriculture labours under many drawbacks. Gold, first discovered in 1871, constitutes the wealth of the country; diamonds, coal and silver are also found, whilst iron ores and other metals are known to exist. The Central South African Railways, which include the lines of the late Netherlands South African Railway, the late Orange Free State Government Railways, and the line known as the Pretoria Pietersburg Railway, connect the colony with Delagoa Bay, Durban, and the Cape; the total length open for traffic at the end of 1905 was 1788 miles, and 643 miles were under construction. Of the commerce about 70 per cent. was with Cape Colony up to 1899. In 1905, 44·54 per cent. was with Natal, 31 per cent. was with Cape Colony, and 24·46 per cent. was with Delagoa Bay.

The population according to the census of 1904 was 1,268,716, of whom 299,327 were whites, 945,498 aboriginal, and 23,891 other natives.

In 1882 the revenue only amounted to £177,407; in 1893 this had increased to £1,702,685, and in 1897 to £4,480,218, owing to the increased prosperity of the gold-bearing districts; the expenditure was £4,394,066 in 1897, and the debt £2,675,690 in 1898. At June 30, 1906, the public debt was £35,000,000; municipal borrowings at the same date amounted to £5,900,000 (approximately). The trade of the country amounted in 1897 to about £24,500,000, of which £13,563,827 represented the value of imports. The output of gold in the year 1897 was valued at £11,653,727; in 1898, 4,555,022 oz. (£16,044,135); 1901, 231,076 oz. (£981,549); 1902, 1,718,920 oz. (£7,301,501); 1903, 2,972,897 oz. (£12,628,057); 1904, 3,773,517 oz. (£16,028,883); 1905, 4,909,540 oz. (£20,854,440). The total value of the diamonds produced in the Transvaal since the war is as follows:—1901–2, £1,199; 1902–3, £46,358; 1903–4, £685,720; 1904–5, £1,198,530; 1905–6, £968,229. The coal output was:—1898, 1,907,808 tons—of 2,000 lb.—(£668,346); 1899, 1,735,282 tons (£619,406); 1900, 506,074 tons (£197,127); 1901, 797,144 tons (£329,113); 1902, 1,590,333 tons (£637,640); 1903, 2,253,677 tons (£877,976); 1904, 2,409,033 tons (£883,891); 1905, 2,606,799 tons (£846,272).

The Constitution of the colony provides for a Lt.-Governor, who is at present aided by an Executive and a Legislative Council. By Letters Patent dated 31 March, 1905, a representative form of Government was granted, but this was revoked towards the end of 1905 at the change of Imperial Government. Under the new Constitution there will be a Legislative Assembly consisting of 69 members elected by manhood suffrage, and a Legislative Council or Upper House of 15 members nominated by the Crown. The work of the registration of voters is at present proceeding, and it is expected that the election of members of the new Government will take place early in 1907. Municipalities have already been created in all the most important towns.

The Capital is PRETORIA, pop. 1904, 36,700 (21,161 whites), the principal town being JOHANNESBURG (the centre of the Witwatersrand goldfields), population in 1904, 158,580 (83,902 whites).

THE ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

The Orange River Colony is bounded on the east by Basutoland and Natal, on the north by the Transvaal Colony, and on the west and south by the Cape Colony. It was founded, in much the same way as the Transvaal, by Boer emigrants from Cape Colony, and its independence was granted in 1854, to be lost when thrown into the cause of its Boer neighbour in the war of 1899–1902. The total area is 50,392 square miles, with a population at the census of 1904 of 387,315, of whom 142,679 were whites (males, 81,571, females 61,108).

It is essentially a pastoral country, but the eastern part is also admirably adapted for the cultivation of grain. Diamonds, garnets, and other precious stones are found, and rich coal-mines exist, while there are indications of gold. The chief exports are wool, ostrich feathers, hides, diamonds, grain, &c.

BLOEMFONTEIN, the Capital and seat of Government, had a population of 13,512 whites, 3,487 troops, and 16,033 natives in 1905. A new sewerage system and an additional water supply are in successful operation. Six new bridges of masonry, 85 ft. span, have been built over the Bloem Spruit, which has been straightened to avoid a repetition of the serious flood of Jan., 1904.

Other towns are Kroonstad (2,454 whites, 1,211 troops, 3,343 natives), Ladybrand (2,333 whites,

† And quarters.

547 troops, 1,515 natives), and Harrismith (2,238 whites, 1,921 troops, and 3,068 natives.

The present Government consists of a Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive and Legislative Council.

NATAL.

The loyal colony of Natal, which played so important a part in the South African War of 1899–1902, derives its name from the fact of its discovery by the celebrated Portuguese navigator, Vasco da Gama, on Christmas Day, 1497. The Portuguese did not attempt to make any settlement, and two attempts made by the Dutch, in 1688 and 1721, were both unsuccessful. The country was occupied solely by natives until 1824, when the first European settlement was formed by a small party of Englishmen, who came by sea and established themselves on the coast where Durban now stands. Natal was then a part of the great Zulu kingdom under T'Chaka. Between 1835 and 1837 another settlement was formed by a large body of Dutch Boers, who came with their waggons overland from the Cape Colony, and settled in the northern districts, where to this day the Boers preponderate, although the bulk of the whole white population of the colony is British. The Boers attempted to set up an independent government at Pietermaritzburg; but the Governor of the Cape took military possession of the district, and in 1843 Natal was proclaimed as British and annexed to the Cape Colony. In 1856 it was erected into a separate colony, with representative institutions, and in 1893 acquired responsible government. It lies on the south-east coast of Africa, Durban or Port Natal being about 800 miles from Capetown. Speaking roughly, it is in 30° E. long. and 30° S. lat. It comprises an area of 35,371 square miles, with a seaboard of 376 miles. No less than 35 distinct rivers run through it into the Indian Ocean, but not one of them is navigable. On the N.W., Natal is bounded by the Transvaal Colony; and, as in the Cape Colony, the country rises from the sea to the mountains by a series of terraces.

Population.—The population at the census of 17 April, 1904 (inclusive of military, 3,774), was: Europeans or whites, 97,109; mixed and others, 6,686; Indians and Asiatics, 100,918; natives (in service 79,978, in native areas 824,063), 904,041—a total of 1,108,754.

Production, etc.—The coast region, extending about 15 miles inland, is highly fertile, and has a semi-tropical climate. Maize is the most generally cultivated crop, and sugar, coffee, arrowroot, ginger, tobacco, bananas, vegetables, and pepper thrive in the coast region, and the pineapple ripens in the open air. Tea is also grown, and its cultivation has become a thriving industry. The midland district is more adapted for cereals and other European crops. The upper district is chiefly grazing land, and sheep-farming is the principal occupation of the inhabitants; horses and cattle are also reared in large numbers. The coalfields of the colony are of large extent, and are connected by rail with the seaport of Durban; the output for the year 1904 was 858,298 tons, and for 1905 1,129,407 tons; there is a considerable export trade in coal, 561,250 tons being bunkered and 210,191 tons exported in 1905, in addition to 208,223 tons consumed by the railway department. Attempts are made to utilise the rich beds of iron ore which have been found in many parts of the colony. Large forests of valuable timber abound in the kloofs of all the mountain ranges, and many tracts along the coast are also well wooded. The chief exports are coal, wool, mohair, wattle bark, tea, sugar, tobacco, maize, fruit and preserves, hides and skins.

There are 2 Government high schools, at Pietermaritzburg and Durban; 32 primary schools, 2 art schools, 5 Indian schools, and 2 Government schools for coloured children; there are also 441 private Government-aided European, native, Indian and coloured schools.

In Durban (pop. 69,903, including 32,926 Europeans, 2,041 mixed and others, 19,079 natives, and 15,857 Asiatics at the census of 1904), or Port Natal, the colony has the only harbour of any importance on the south-east coast. The bar, which formerly prevented large vessels from entering, has now been rendered safe and navigable for any vessel at any time; the average low-water depth on the bar for 1905 being 28 ft. 8 in.

Railways.—There are 818 miles of railway open, all constructed and worked by the Government, with the exception of the North Coast Extension beyond Verulam (50 miles), and an extension of 98 miles from Tugela to Somkele (Hlabisa coalfields), both of which are worked by the Government in accordance with working agreements. The main line extends from the Port of Durban to Pietermaritzburg (the capital of the Colony, 70 miles inland), and thence to Charlestown, on the border of the Transvaal (306 miles distant from the port), where it connects with the line to Johannesburg and Pretoria. Branch lines run from Thornville Junction (60 miles from the port) to Richmond (17 miles), and from Pietermaritzburg a branch connects Greytown with the city (64¾ miles); to Harrismith in the Orange River Colony, from the main line at the 190¾ mile-post (opened for traffic on 12 July, 1892), with a mileage of 59¾ miles, 23½ of which run through the Orange River Colony: this section of 23½ miles, originally constructed and still worked by the Natal Government, is now owned by the Central South African Railways, purchase having been made by the Transvaal as from 1 December, 1903: from Glencoe Junction (231½ miles distant from the port) to Vryheid, 59½ miles from Glencoe Junction; northwards from Durban to Somkele (Zululand), 167¾ miles from Durban; and from South Coast Junction to North Shepstone (77 miles), which places in touch with the town of Durban a portion of the Colony with large natural resources and containing valuable lime and marble deposits. A line runs from the South Coast branch at Alexandra Junction to Umzinto, 6½ miles distant, and serves an important sugar-growing area, while a further branch connecting the main line with the Bluff side (Wests) goes out from Clairmont on the South Coast line and is 6½ miles in length. An extension from Harrismith to Bethlehem, O.R.C. (64¾ miles), was opened on May 1, 1905, and a further section of 88½ miles to Kroonstad, in the O.R.C., is under construction; when completed it will be handed over to the Natal Government to be worked under the same arrangements applicable to the Van Reenen-Harrismith section. Work upon the new connection with the Cape Colony, which will effect its junction at Riverside, on the Griqualand East boundary, a distance of 100 miles from Maritzburg (the Natal trunk line junction), is under construction, and a section of 95 miles to Creighton is now open for traffic. A 2-ft. light railway is being constructed between Esperanza, on the Umzinto Branch, to Donnybrook, on the Natal-Cape line, and will be about 100 miles in length. A similar light line is also being constructed between Estcourt, on the main line, and Weenen, a distance of 30 miles. Another branch line, under construction, is from Ennersdale, on the main line, to Los Kop, 13¼ miles. The total cost of construction of the railways up to the end of 1905 was £12,957,544. The receipts for 1905 were £2,052,488, and the expenditure £1,307,010. The net receipts were equal to £5 15*s.* 0·78*d.* per cent. upon the capital expended upon open lines.

Zululand, annexed in 1897, comprises about two-thirds of the country formerly under Zulu kings, and is bounded on the south and south-west by the Tugela River; on the south-east by the Indian Ocean; on the north by the Portuguese possessions; and on the west by the new territory (formerly Utrecht and Vryheid districts of the Transvaal) and Swaziland. The Amaputaland Protectorate, created by proclamation of 22 Nov., 1897, was annexed to Zululand on 27 Dec., 1897, and now forms part of the Province. The new territory (consisting of the Magisterial Divisions of Vryheid, Utrecht, Paulpietersburg, Ngotshe, and Babanango) was annexed to Natal on 27 January, 1903.

Defence.—On 31 Dec., 1905, the total defence force of Natal consisted of the Natal Police (mounted), 870 all ranks, exclusive of native and Indian constables, and a militia force of about 3,335 (1,839 mounted and 499 artillery). The Militia Act, which came into force during 1904, remodelled the Volunteer Force, and changed the title to Militia. There were also, at the same date, 89 rifle associations, with a total strength of 3,004, excluding Natal Police and Militiamen; besides 331 senior cadets, and 3,001 school cadets.

The Government of the Colony consists of a Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The former consists of 13 members, nominated by the Governor in Council, one half of whom retire every 5 years. The latter consists of 43 members, including 2 each for the new districts of Vryheid and Utrecht, elected by popular vote. There are 22,350 electors on the register, and there is a property qualification.

PIETERMARITZBURG, the capital and seat of government, is situated about 54 miles inland from Port Natal. Population, exclusive of military (1904 census), 31,199.

RHODESIA.

Administrator of Southern Rhodesia, Sir W. H. Milton, K.C.M.G. (Salisbury).

Administrators—North-Eastern, R. Codrington (Fort Jameson); North-Western, R. T. Coryndon (Kalomo).

Resident Commissioner and Commandant-General, Lieut.-Col. R. Chester Master, K.R.R. (Salisbury).

Head Office British South Africa Company, 2 London Wall Buildings, E.C.

Manager, H. Wilson Fox; Assistant Secretaries, A. P. Millar, D. E. Brodie; Registrar, R. C. Bolton.

Capetown Agency, J. A. Stevens.

NORTHERN RHODESIA.

This territory, first opened to British influence by Dr. Livingstone, is divided into North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia, which are still occupied by the native tribes living under their own chiefs. Extensive mineral deposits, copper in particular, have been discovered. Indigenous india-rubber is found in large areas. Timber, cattle, and all agricultural produce abound.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

Railways.—The main arteries of communication are the Mashonaland and the Rhodesia Railways. The latter is a continuation of the line from Cape Town to Vryburg, vid Kimberley, and was opened to Bulawayo in November, 1897, the distance from Cape Town being 1,360 miles. A line to connect Salisbury with Bulawayo (300 miles) was completed in Oct., 1902. From Salisbury the Mashonaland Railway runs eastwards to Umtali and thence to the port of Beira (Portuguese), a distance of 375 miles. The section from Bulawayo viâ the Wankie coalfields to the Victoria Falls (281 miles) was completed in June, 1904. The line, after crossing the Zambesi at the Falls, is being carried through North-Western and North-Eastern Rhodesia to the south end of Lake Tanganyika. A light railway (2 ft. gauge) has been completed between Salisbury and the Ayrshire Mine (75 miles), and a line is being surveyed between Salisbury and Mazoe (about 26 miles). A line connects Gwelo with Selukwe (about 23 miles), and a line from Bulawayo viâ Gwanda to West Nicholson (119 miles), to open up the gold and coal areas lying to the south-east, was finished in 1904, and a branch to the Matoppos, where the founder of Rhodesia is buried, was opened on Nov. 1, 1903.

The African Transcontinental Telegraph Line ("Cape to Cairo") has reached Ujiji in German East Africa, about 3,250 miles from the Cape.

The Natives, enumerated in April, 1905, at 594,590, have now settled down, apparently content with their unwonted prosperity and immunity from tyranny and pillage.

Industrial Progress.—Southern Rhodesia is rich in mineral deposits, and it abounds in traces of the ancient gold-workers. Though the climate is sub-tropical, the average altitude makes it well suited to European fruit-trees, cereals, and vegetables, in addition to the indigenous products of the country—e.g., tobacco, rubber, cotton, and all kinds of grain. The country is being re-stocked, and inoculation upon a large scale is stamping out various descriptions of veterinary disease.

Gold.—The first regular crushing returns began with 2,345 oz. from three mines in September, 1898. The output for the twelve months ended 31 March, 1905, amounted to 309,399 oz., an increase of 74,706 oz. over any previous year; silver, copper, iron, coal, tin, plumbago, kieselguhr, and tungsten have also been localised.

Constitution.—Southern Rhodesia is administered by the Company under the Charter of 1889, as amended by the Orders in Council of 1894, 1898, and 1903. The Administrator is advised by an Executive Council of not less than four members, and there is a Legislative Council, consisting of the Administrator, the Resident Commissioner (ex officio), and 14 members, seven of whom are elected by the registered voters of Mashonaland and Matabeleland, and seven nominated by the Company with approval of Secretary of State.

The laws in force in the Cape Colony up to June 10th, 1891, have continued in force in Southern Rhodesia, so far as they are applicable; whilst from 1891 to 1899, when the Legislative Council was first convened, laws were amended or enacted by the ordinances of the Directors, the regulations of the Administrator in Council, and the proclamations of the High Commissioner. Municipal self-government has been established for Bulawayo and Salisbury. Justice is administered by judges and resident magistrates, the sanction of the Crown being required for all judicial appointments. Trial by jury was established in 1899. There is an appeal to the High Court at Capetown, and thence to the Privy Council. Revenue for year ended 31 March, 1905, £453,173; expenditure, £590,139.

The total white population of Southern Rhodesia at the census of 1904 was 12,596.

The political capital is SALISBURY, 4,800 ft. above sea-level, the chief town of Mashonaland (white population in 1904, 1726). BULAWAYO, 4,469 ft. above the sea-level, the chief town of Matabeleland, is the commercial centre, with a white population of 3,840 in 1904. Townships have been established at Umtali, Selukwe, Melsetter, Gwanda, Gwelo, Victoria, Hartley, and Enkeldoorn.

British West Africa.

THE partition of West Africa among the various European Powers is now complete, and the British Dominions therein consist of the Colonies and Protectorates of the Gambia, Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, and Southern Nigeria, which are all situated upon the coast of North-Western Africa, between the mouth of the river Senegal and the Cameroons, and of the Protectorate of Northern Nigeria. These Dominions were not originally colonies in the strict sense of the word, but merely trading settlements in which the products of the neighbouring countries were collected and exchanged for European goods with as little outlay as possible; but of late years a great part of the revenue has been expended on the development of the territories, the advancement of the education of the natives, and on the encouragement of the cultivation of natural produce. The climate is such that Europeans cannot live there permanently, and even the inhabitants suffer greatly from malarial fever. The West Coast of Africa has, however, been eagerly frequented by European traders since it was first explored by the Portuguese in the latter part of the 15th century, just before the discovery of America by Columbus. In the 17th century all the chief maritime nations of Europe, except the Spaniards, had forts or factories established on the coast, from which they used to supply slaves to their plantations in the West Indies and on the mainland of America. The importance of the coast was much diminished when these same nations agreed, at the commencement of the nineteenth century, to join in putting down the slave trade, and the Dutch and the Danes relinquished their possessions; but a healthier interest in the West Coast has since arisen in the development of a legitimate trade in tropical products, of which palm oil is the most important, to take the place of the trade in slaves. The Germans possess the territory of the Cameroons and Togoland, in the immediate neighbourhood of the British possessions; and, more to the south, the Congo Free State has been founded by the King of the Belgians. British authority has been extended, by means of the Colonies and Protectorates, and by the action of the Royal Niger Company, which exercised all the functions of government until the territories under its control were incorporated with Southern Nigeria in 1900.

GAMBIA.

The river Gambia was discovered by the Portuguese in 1447; and in 1588, the year of the Spanish Armada, Queen Elizabeth, being then at war with Spain and Portugal, gave a charter to a British Company to trade with the Gambia, and as early as 1618 an effort to do so was made, but it was not successful. In 1686 a fort was built upon a rocky island, and, in honour of the new King, was named Fort James; but the English merchants had formidable rivals in the Portuguese and French, and it was not until 1783 that the river was recognised, by the Treaty of Versailles, as British. It had no regular political institutions until 1807, when it was put under the Government of Sierra Leone. The Colony of the Gambia was created in 1843, and was constituted a separate government in 1888. The colony now consists of the Island of St. Mary, British Combo Albreda, the Ceded Mile, McCarthy's Island, and various other islands and territories on the banks of the river. The population (1 April, 1901) was 13,456 (excluding Protectorate, 140,000). The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season, viz., from June to October; but during the rest of the year it is fairly healthy. The chief export is ground nuts, which form nearly nine-tenths of the total exports. They are sent chiefly to Marseilles, where the oil is extracted and used for the same purpose as olive oil. Beeswax, rubber, and hides are also exported; and rice, cotton, maize, and a kind of millet called kous are produced in the countries bordering the Gambia, but not in sufficient quantities for export. The chief imports are cotton goods, kola nuts, rice, and tobacco. A Company of the W.A.F.F. (3 officers and 120 non-commissioned officers and men) is stationed in the Colony, and there is an armed police force in the settlement (numbering about 100 men), which performs both civil and military duties. The government, which is that of a Crown Colony, is now vested in a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, consisting of 3 official members (besides the Governor), and by a Legislative Council of 5 official members and 4 unofficial members, nominated by the Crown.

THE GOLD COAST COLONY.

This colony comprises the coast of the Gulf of Guinea from about 3° 7′ W. to 1° 14′ E. of Greenwich, with a protectorate extending inland to an average distance of 440 miles, or to the 11° of N. latitude, bounded on the west and north by the French colonies of the Ivory Coast and French Soudan, and on the east by the German colony of Togoland. The population of the colony is estimated at 895,350 (exclusive of Ashanti and the Northern Territories), of whom about 1,000 are Europeans. The natives are almost all Pagans, but the number of Mohammedans and Christians is steadily increasing. The Castle and settlement of Elmina was founded by the Portuguese and taken from them by the Dutch. In 1618, some English merchants built a fort at Kormantyne, and subsequently many forts and factories were established, not only by the English and Dutch, but also by the French, the Danes, and the Germans, for the purpose of supplying slaves to their West Indian and American possessions. The first English Company to trade with the Gold Coast was chartered in 1662. This was succeeded in 1672 by the Royal African Company, which enlarged and strengthened Cape Coast Castle until it was the best on the coast, and also built forts at Dixcove, Sekondi, Kommenda, Anamabo, Winneba, and Accra. This was again succeeded in 1750 by the African Company of Merchants, which was constituted by Act of Parliament, with liberty to trade and form establishments on the West Coast of Africa between 20° N. and 20° S. lat. The settlements were in 1821 transferred to the Crown, and placed under the government of Sierra Leone, from which they were finally separated in 1874 under the title of Gold Coast Colony. The Dutch and English forts were intermingled until 1867, when an exchange was effected which gave all those on the west of the Sweet River to Holland and those on the east to Great Britain. In 1872 the Dutch transferred all their forts to Great Britain, which had previously, in 1850, bought the Danish forts. It was out of this transfer that the Ashanti war of 1873–4 arose, as the King of Ashanti, who had always been on good terms with the Dutch, feared that he would be cut off from the sea. In this war, as in those of 1896 and 1900–1, the British arms were completely victorious, and the kingdom of Ashanti has now been added to the dominions of the British Crown.

The produce of the Gold Coast is chiefly sent to Great Britain. Gold is found in considerable quantities, and rubber, ivory, gum-copal, cocoa, cotton, lumber, Guinea grains, and oil are also exported to England. The principal exports in 1905 were: Gold £596,583, rubber £323,774, palm oil £88,359, palm kernels £78,625, and cocoa £186,809. The chief imports are textiles, alcohol, and hardware. The climate is damp, hot, malarious, and unhealthy. The Government assists the Roman Catholic, Wesleyan, and German missionaries in educational matters, and great efforts are being made to improve the sanitary condition of the coast towns. The Government has established schools of its own; the principal towns are lighted and policed, 1,129 miles of telegraphs have been established in the colony, of which 290 miles are in Ashanti and 135 miles in the Northern Territories. The Government railway from Sekondi through Tarkwa, the centre of the gold-mining industry, to Kumasi (168 miles), has been completed and opened for traffic.

The seat of government is Accra (population 17,892). The other principal towns are Cape Coast (28,948), Ada (13,240), Elmina (7,100), Sekondi (4,095), Kwitta (3,018), and Axim (2,189). The Legislative Council consists of 6 official and 4 unofficial members.

SIERRA LEONE.

The peninsula of Sierra Leone (Lion Mountain) was ceded to Great Britain in 1787 by the native chiefs, to be used as an asylum for the many destitute negroes then in England; and great numbers of liberated Africans from North America and the West Indies, besides those taken in slavers on the coast, have from time to time been settled there. In this respect Sierra Leone is really a colony, while it is also of commercial importance. The extreme length is about 185 miles, with an estimated area of 4,000 sq. miles. The population in 1901 amounted to 76,655, of whom 493 were resident Europeans. Of the rest, more than half were liberated Africans and their descendants, while the remainder belonged to the neighbouring tribes. The liberated Africans were brought from all parts of Africa, and as the result no less than 60 different languages are said to be spoken in Freetown. Almost every Christian denomination is represented in Freetown, and there are also many Pagans and Mohammedans. Education, though not compulsory, is in an advanced state. The climate is humid and enervating to Europeans, and malarial fevers are prevalent, especially at the beginning and end of the rains, which last from May to October. The peninsula itself produces hardly anything. The inhabitants are almost all employed in exchanging the products of the interior for European goods. The exports consist chiefly of palm-kernels and kola nuts; but benni-seed, cocoa-nuts, ginger, ground nuts, india-rubber, gum-copal, hides, beeswax, and rice are also exported. The principal imports are cotton goods, coal, apparel, hardware, provisions and tobacco. The taxation consists of specific duties on wine, spirits, ale and porter, tobacco, gunpowder, guns, kerosene oil, lumber, hardware, salt and sugar; and of a 10 per cent. ad valorem duty on other goods.

A Protectorate was proclaimed on August 31, 1896, over territory between 7° and 10° N., and 11° and 13° W., being bounded on the N. and N.E. by French Guinea, and on the S. and S.E. by Liberia. It has an area of about 30,000 square miles and a population estimated at 500,000. For administrative purposes it is divided into 5 districts under District Commissioners; the principal peoples being the Limbas and Kurankos in the north, the Timinis and Susus in the centre, and the Mendis in the south. The principal products are rubber, gum, and palm trees, benni-seed, rice, ground and kola nuts, while sheep and cattle thrive.

SOUTHERN NIGERIA.

The Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria now includes the territories situated on the Bight of Benin, between Dahomey on the West to the Cameroons on the East, the amalgamation of the administrations of Lagos and of the Protectorate previously styled "Southern Nigeria" having been carried out on May 1, 1906. The whole territory is now divided into three Provinces, of which the Western coincides with the former Colony and Protectorate of Lagos, and the Central and Eastern with the former Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The headquarters of the Government are at Lagos, and the area of the whole territory is 77,260 square miles.

The chief industry is agriculture, and crops consist of maize, plantains, earth-nuts, yams and cassava, while cocoa, coffee, and cotton are also grown. The natural products exported are palm oil and kernels, ivory, gum copal and rubber, and the export of cotton and maize is steadily increasing. A railway has been constructed from Iddo Island to Ibadan on the mainland, a distance of 123½ miles, and is now being extended to Oshogbo. A further extension to the Niger is contemplated. Centres of trade are Lagos, Calabar, Opobo, Bonny, New Calabar, Brass, Benin, Warri, Sapele, Akassa, and Forcados, the two last named being situated at the Forcados and Nun mouths of the Niger, which, with the rest of the territories south of Idah on the Niger, passed on January 1, 1900, from the administrative control of the Royal Niger Company to that of Southern Nigeria.

The principal imports are cotton goods, cooper's stores, hardware, cutlery, and spirits.

The following figures are for the combined territories of Lagos and Southern Nigeria :—

This Protectorate was established on January 1, 1900, and includes the northern portion of the territories formerly administered by the Royal Niger Company. It is bounded on the south by Southern Nigeria, to the west and north by the French possessions in the hinterland of Dahomey and the Soudan, and on the east by Lake Chad and the German territory of the Cameroons.

Since the occupation of Kano and Sokoto in February and March, 1903, steps have been taken for the establishment of administrative control over the whole of the Protectorate, of which the area is about 256,400 square miles. The population has been estimated at about 9,000,000. The centre of administration is Zungeru, near the Kaduna River, a tributary of the Niger, and the Protectorate is divided for administrative purposes into 17 Provinces. The frontiers to the North and East were delimited during 1903 by Anglo-French and Anglo-German Boundary Commissions, and a further Boundary Commission is at present engaged in delimiting the frontier in accordance with the Anglo-French Convention of May 29, 1906. The frontier with the German possessions is now settled, and demarcation is in progress. The imports are much the same as in Southern Nigeria, and the principal exports are shea butter and shea nuts. The importation of spirits is prohibited. There is telegraphic communication from Lagos to Jebba, Zungeru, and Lokoja, and the line has been continued along the Benue, as well as in other directions. Steam communication with England vid Forcados.

The grant-in-aid from Imperial funds to N. Nigeria amounted to £320,000 in 1905–6, and to £315,000 in 1906–7.

Products of the British Empire (1904).

The following table shows the amount of certain raw materials produced within the British Empire. In addition to the articles given below, 383,562,993 lb. of Tea (India 222,203,661 lb., Ceylon 158,952,965 lb., and Natal 2,406,367 lb.), 35,814,774 lb. of Coffee (India 28,777,710 lb., Ceylon 938,112 lb., West Indies 6,000,000 lb.), and 8,596,000 lb. of rubber (mainly in West Africa) were produced in 1904. Where the production is estimated the figures are printed in italics.

THERE are no British Colonies on the East Coast of Africa to the north of Natal (already treated of under the head of "South Africa"). But a large portion of the Continent, both on the coast and inland, is under British protection and is administered directly by the Imperial Government, through the Colonial Office, which took over the administration of the E. Africa, Uganda, and Somaliland Protectorates on April 1, 1905. British Central Africa was similarly transferred on April 1, 1904. The only Protectorate in Africa now under the control of the Foreign Office is Zanzibar and Pemba. Just as on the West Coast, the rivalry of European Powers has resulted in the division of the territory on the East into "spheres of influence," the definition of whose boundaries has given rise to much diplomatic negotiation, and is not yet finally completed. From the boundary of Amatongaland northward to Cape Delgado is Portuguese: from Cape Delgado to the river Umba is German East Africa; the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba form a British Protectorate; and the East Africa Protectorate (together with the little Witu Protectorate) extends from the Umba to the river Juba, which forms the southern boundary of the Italian Sphere extending northward as far as the British Protectorate on the Somali Coast. It will be observed that on this portion of the African Continent the French have made no acquisitions, but their annexation of the great island of Madagascar places them in a position of importance on the East Coast, although their influence does not extend to the mainland. The history of the European occupation of East Africa may be briefly stated thus:—The Portuguese acquired their rights by discovery and conquest. The Germans obtained a footing on the mainland opposite Zanzibar between 1880 and 1885, at which latter date the Sultan of Zanzibar recognised their Protectorate over Usagara, and in the same year the Germans declared a Protectorate over Witu. In 1888 the Imperial British East Africa Company received a Royal Charter, having been granted a few years previously by Seyyid Barghash, Sultan of Zanzibar, administrative rights over his mainland possessions. In 1890 the respective spheres of Great Britain and Germany were settled by agreement. Zanzibar became a British Protectorate, and Germany withdrew from her Protectorate over Witu in favour of Great Britain. The boundaries of the Italian Sphere were agreed upon in 1891. The Imperial British East Africa Company transferred the administration of their territories to the Imperial Government in 1895, having done much to promote the advance of civilisation in the large tract of country now known as the "East Africa Protectorate."

The term "British Central Africa" is rather misleading to the unofficial mind. It must be understood as not applying to Uganda, although that country is, properly speaking, the most "Central" of the British Colonies or Protectorates in the Continent, but as the name given to a territory of more than 500,000 square miles in extent, north of the Zambesi, the greater part of which is under the administration of the British South African Company; the rest, which is under direct Imperial control, being called the "British Central Africa Protectorate." (See pages 559–560.)

THE SOMALILAND PROTECTORATE.

In 1884 a Protectorate was declared over part of Somaliland, a country now subject (except where reserved by Great Britain and Italy) to Abyssinia, and forming the north-eastern horn of the African continent. The British Protectorate contains about 68,000 sq. miles. The population, mainly consisting of Somalis, a Mohammedan tribe, is estimated at 300,000. The boundaries are defined by treaty with Abyssinia and Italy; the northern coast as far as 49° E. and the 8th parallel of N. latitude are the limits on the north and south.

The PRINCIPAL TOWNS are Berbera, Bulhar, and Zeyla.

The Protectorate was transferred in 1898 from the administration of the India Office to that of the Foreign Office, and on April 1, 1905, to that of the Colonial Office.

The Imperial British East Africa Company was incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 3, 1888; and under the control of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, exercised sovereign jurisdiction over the territories leased to it by the Sultan of Zanzibar, or acquired by treaties entered into with native Chiefs. A British Protectorate was announced over these territories on June 18, 1895, and the Company handed over the administration on July 1, 1895.

These territories are now comprised under the name of "The East Africa Protectorate," and include the whole of the coast from the Umba to the Juba River, granted on a 50 years' lease by the Sultan of Zanzibar, as also the vast territories in the interior bounded in part by international conventional lines. The southern boundary was defined by the Anglo-German conventions of 1886, 1890, and 1893; that on the east (along the Juba) and north-east, by an agreement with Italy (1891). On the west the Protectorate adjoins that of Uganda. The administration of the Protectorate is carried on under the Colonial Office.

A great portion of this vast region consists of pasture lands or barren wastes, but there are not lacking extensive districts of great natural fertility on the coast, as well as in the interior. The Protectorate is divided for administrative purposes into seven provinces, which are subdivided into districts and sub-districts: (1) Seyidie, (2) Ukamba, (3) Tanaland, (4) Jubaland, (5) Kenya, (6) Naivasha, (7) Kisumu, of which the centres of administration are respectively Mombasa, Nairobi, Lamu, Kismayu, Fort Hall, Naivasha, and Kisumu. Of the seven provinces Ukamba and Naivasha are best suitable to colonization by Europeans. There is also a considerable region within the boundaries of the Protectorate which is still undeveloped, and has not yet been included in any administrative district. The population of the Protectorate has been estimated lately at 4,000,000.

The East Africa Protectorate also includes the Witu Protectorate, a small tract of country at the mouth of the river Tana. The British Protectorate was proclaimed Nov. 19, 1890. In March, 1891, the Imperial British East Africa Company undertook the administration of the country, from which they withdrew on July 31, 1893. Witu is now regarded for administrative purposes as part of Tanaland.

Mombasa, which is connected with Europe by telegraph, is the capital of the Protectorate, and possesses perhaps the finest harbour on the east coast of Africa (population, about 30,000, of whom 100 are Europeans). There is also telegraphic communication along the coast between Mombasa and Lamu, and between Mombasa and Entebbe, the capital of the Uganda Protectorate. There are also extensions to Kiambu and Nandi. The Uganda Railway has its terminus at Mombasa, which is connected with the mainland by a railway bridge 1,732 feet in length. Nairobi, the headquarters of the Ukamba Province, and central station of the Uganda Railway, has a population of about 5,000, of whom 350 are Europeans. There are also some 200 European farmers in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

The principal exports are ivory, grain, rubber, and copra; the principal imports are piecegoods, rice, grain and flour, building materials, European provisions, &c.

The importation of arms and ammunition is prohibited, except under the most stringent regulations, and the introduction and local manufacture of spirits is also heavily checked.

A British Protectorate over the territory of Uganda was proclaimed in the "London Gazette" of June 19, 1894, and included only the country subject to King Mwanga, known as Uganda proper, bounded by the territories known as Usoga, Unyora, Ankoli and Koki. This Protectorate has since been extended over Unyoro and Usoga (see notice in "London Gazette," July 3, 1896). Uganda proper lies on the N.W. shore of Lake Victoria, between 500 and 600 miles in a direct line from the nearest point on the East Coast of Africa. It is situated on and to the N. of the Equator. Usoga lies further to the East, on the N. shore of the Lake. Unyoro is to the N.W. of Uganda and extends to Lake Albert. Koki is to the S.W. of Uganda. The Protectorate is now divided into six provinces. The total population of the Protectorate may be roughly estimated at between 2 and 3 millions.

The capital town of Uganda is Kampala, but the centre of the Protectorate Administration is the neighbouring settlement of Entebbe. The population of the Uganda Protectorate is estimated at over 2,000,000. The principal exports are ivory, skins, and chillies. Some cotton and coffee is also exported. Principal imports are cotton cloths, prints, beads, &c. Uganda is connected by telegraph with Mombasa (E. Africa Protectorate), and there are Government steamers on Lake Victoria, two of them of 600 tons displacement.

In July, 1897, Mwanga left Uganda and headed an insurrectionary movement in Buddu, which was suppressed. He then fled to the neighbouring German territory, and his infant son was declared King of Uganda, with a native council of regency. King Mwanga died in May, 1903. In Sept., 1897, a mutiny broke out among the Soudanese troops in the Protectorate, which was only suppressed after several months' fighting, in circumstances of great difficulty and danger, in which several British officers lost their lives (Parly. Paper, Africa, No. 10, 1898). The military forces have since been completely reorganised.

The Uganda Railway.—A survey of the route to be followed by a railway to connect Uganda with the coast at Mombasa was made in 1892. In 1895 H.M. Government decided to proceed with the construction of the railway, and in September of that year a Committee was formed, with the late Sir Percy Anderson, Assistant Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, as Chairman, to supervise the undertaking and organise details, under the authority of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. On the completion of the railway, its management was transferred from the Committee to the East Africa Protectorate Administration.

The gauge of the railway is one metre. The chief engineer, Sir G. Whitehouse, and staff arrived at Mombasa in December, 1895, and a large number of labourers were imported from India for the work of construction, in addition to such local labour as could be engaged. The rails were laid to the terminus on Victoria Nyanza (584 miles) on December 20, 1901, on which date the first locomotive completed the journey from the sea to the lake. A three-wire telegraph line has been erected along the railway, and there is also telegraphic communication from the terminus on the lake to Wadelai, on the Nile (a distance of about 500 miles), and is now being extended to Nimule, and thence to Gondokoro on the frontier of the Sudan. Messages are accepted for Wadelai, and sent thence to stations further inland by post. A volunteer corps has been organised.

Parcels may be addressed direct to any place in the Uganda Protectorate, the rates being the same as for Mombasa, and no additional charge is made for delivery in Uganda.

THE ZANZIBAR PROTECTORATE.

Sultan, H.H. Ali bin Hamud, succeeded his father, Hamud, July, 1902.
Agent & Consul-General, Basil S. Cave, C.B. £1,000
Judges of H.B.M. Court, Lindsey Smith,
J. W. Murison, P. Grain (acting) £600 to 1,000
Vice-Consuls, J. H. Sinclair, H.C. Venables, H. A. Richards ..... £350 to 500
First Minister and Officer in Command of Troops, Brigadier-General A. E. Raikes.
Secretary for Finance & Trade, A. R. Becher.

The Zanzibar dominions became independent in 1856 under the rule of Seyyid Majid, a son of Seyyid Said, Sultan of Muscat and Zanzibar. They formerly extended along the mainland as far south as Tunghi Bay and north as Warsheikh; but since the cession of the coast-line from Ruvuma to Wanga, including the island of Mafia, to Germany in 1890, and of the Benadir coast to Italy in 1904, they are now confined to the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba, a ten-mile coast-line from Wanga to Kipini, the islands of Lamu, Manda, and Patta, together with the port of Kismayu, with a radius of 10 miles. As far as the mouth of the Juba, the Zanzibar dominions on the mainland are under the administration of H.M. Government through the Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief in the East Africa Protectorate (see p. 557). Zanzibar has been a British Protectorate since November, 1890.

By a decree of Sultan Hamud (1897) the legal status of slavery ceased to be recognised in the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba.

The City of Zanzibar, on the island of the same name, is the largest in East Africa, and possesses a magnificent harbour, which presents great facilities for shipping and trade generally. The population of Zanzibar is about 250,000.

The principal imports are piece-goods, ivory, hides, rice, and coal; the exports are piece-goods, ivory, cloves, copra, rubber, gum-copal, and many minor articles. The largest proportion of imports (£347,719 in 1905) comes from British India, £182,809 from the United Kingdom, £164,397 from German East Africa, £75,798 from the United States, and £48,934 from Germany. The largest exports are made to German East Africa, which in 1905 accounted for £218,236, the principal other participators being British India (£182,496), France (£126,104), and the United Kingdom (£97,424). These figures refer to the port of Zanzibar, and not to the trade of the Zanzibar dominions. The large quantities of goods which pass through Zanzibar in mail and other steamers, and those which are transhipped to and from the coasting vessels in the harbour without being landed, are not included in the statistics from which the above figures are taken, which do not, therefore, give an adequate idea of the importance of the port of Zanzibar as the centre of trade in E. Africa. With the exception of a monthly cargo vessel from London, there is no direct steam communication with the United Kingdom, passengers, mails, and goods having to tranship at Aden. There are through steamers to and from Europe of the Austrian Lloyd, the German East Africa Line, and the Messageries Maritimes.

The number of ocean-going steamers which entered the port in 1905 was—German 95, British 59, French 24, Austrian 24, and other nationalities 3, the total tonnage being 427,113. This does not include the coasting and dhow traffic, which is a very large one, extending to Bombay, Arabia, the Comoro Islands, and Madagascar.

BRITISH CENTRAL AFRICA PROTECTORATE.

H.M. Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief, Sir Alfred Sharpe, K.C.M.G., C.B. .... £2,000
Deputy Commr., Maj. F. B. Pearce, C.M.G. 900
Assist. Dep. Commissioner, H. R. Wallis .... 700
Commandant of 2nd Bn. King's African Rifles, Lt.-Col. P. B. Osborn, D.S.O. ..... 900
Judge of High Court, C. J. Griffin .... £600 to 800
Sec. to Administration, A. Jay Williams, £450 to 600
Treasurer, W. Wheeler, C.M.G. ..... 450 to 700
Principal Med. Officer, Dr. H. Hearsey 450 to 600
Supt. of Native Affairs, J. C. Casson 450 to 600
Agents in London, The Crown Agents for the Colonies, Downing Street, W.

This country, which was formerly termed Nyasaland, was proclaimed a British Protectorate on May 14, 1891. The Protectorate comprises the eastern portion of British Central Africa, and the control of the administration was transferred from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office on the 1st of April, 1904. The remainder of the territory is administered by the British South Africa Company.

The native population of the Protectorate is estimated at 950,000, and 600 Europeans.

The principal exports are coffee, cotton, chillies, and tobacco. The cultivation and export of cotton is considerable, and there are prospects of a steady development of this industry. Ivory, tea, ground nuts, and rubber are also exported. The principal imports are soft goods, provisions, and hardware. On Lake Nyassa there are seven steamers. There are also nineteen steamers on the Zambesi and Shiré rivers. At Chinde, situated in Portuguese territory at the mouth of the Zambesi, is a piece of land leased from the Portuguese Government, where goods intended for the Protectorate may be transhipped free of duty.

Chief towns:—Blantyre (population about 180 Europeans and 6,000 natives) and Zomba, the headquarters of the administration. Communication is maintained between Chiromo (at the junction of the rivers Ruo and Shiré), and Chinde by the African Lakes Company's steamers and the British Central Africa Co.

Between Chinde and Europe, the means of communication are Messrs. Rennie's line viâ Natal, the British India Steam Navigation Co., and the German East Africa S.S. Co.

The construction of a railway to connect Chiromo with Blantyre is in progress, and it is hoped that it will be completed in 1907. A branch line from Chiromo to Port Herald (30 miles) is now open for traffic. The Protectorate is connected by telegraph overland with the Cape, viâ Fort Salisbury; and, with the Portuguese wires, to Chinde and Quilimane. The African Trans-Continental Telegraph Company's line has now been extended northwards as far as Lake Tanganyika.

MAURITIUS.

Mauritius is an island lying in the Indian Ocean, 500 miles east of Madagascar, between 57° 18′—57° 49′ E. long. and S. lat. 19° 58′—20° 32′, and comprising an area of 705 square miles. The population at the census of 1901 was 375,385, of whom 261,191 were Indians (the majority originally Coolies imported for working the sugar estates), and the remainder mainly of French or mixed descent. The whole island is practically given up to producing sugar for export, and the necessaries of life have all to be imported from abroad. Rice and grain are obtained from India, flour and frozen meat from Australia, oxen from Madagascar, and minor imports from South Africa and elsewhere. The chief trade of the island is with India. Being just within the tropics it has a hot climate; but, except in Port Louis and some of the low-lying districts, it is not unhealthy. The island is subject to cyclonic disturbances, and a hurricane in 1892 was particularly severe.

Mauritius was discovered about the year 1507 by the Portuguese, but they never formed any settlement on it. The Dutch visited it in 1598, and named it Mauritius, in honour of the Stadtholder, Prince Maurice of Nassau. In 1644 they established a small colony on the shore, but in 1710 or 1711 they abandoned the island, and in 1715 the French took possession of it and changed the name to Ile de France. Under the French it became a great centre of trade, but in 1789 the seat of French Government in the East was removed to it from Pondicherry, and it was taken by a British force in 1810. The French language and French law have been preserved under British rule when the ancient name, Mauritius, was restored. There is an excellent harbour on the N.W. coast, on which the capital, Port Louis, stands, and the annual trade of the island passes almost entirely through Port Louis. In 1905 there were 131½ miles of railway (111½ of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge and 10 of 2 ft. 6 in.), 62 post-offices, 53 telegraph and 7 telephone offices in the island, with 333¼ miles of telegraph and 29 miles telephone wires (Government).

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 5 official and 2 elected members, and a Legislative Council of 27 members, 8 being ex-officio, 9 nominated by the Governor, and 10 elected by a moderate franchise. Port Louis has 2 members, and each of the country districts 1.

The inhabitants of European descent are mostly Roman Catholic. Education has two branches:—(1) Superior or Secondary Instruction, to which is attached the Government Royal College with its Schools; (2) Primary Instruction, consisting of the Government schools and the grant-in-aid schools. The total expenditure on education in 1904–1905 amounted to Rs. 595,299. Of the pupils in the Government and aided schools, 67·72 per cent. are Roman Catholics, 2·80 per cent. Church of England, and 1 per cent. other Christian denominations; 8·37 per cent. being Mohammedans and 20·11 per cent. Hindoos, to whom no assistance is given. The troops in the Colony on 31 December, 1905, numbered 2,691.

DEPENDENCIES OF MAURITIUS.

(1.) RODRIGUES, 350 miles almost due east of Mauritius. Population (Census 1901) 3,162. Area, between 80 and 90 square miles. Cattle, beans, salt fish and goats are the principal exports. The island is under the administration of a magistrate who takes his orders from the Governor of Mauritius.

Magistrate, E. Rouillard ..... Rs. 7,000

(2.) OTHER DEPENDENCIES. Most of the scattered groups of coral islands belonging to Great Britain in the Indian Ocean are administered by the Mauritius Government, being visited periodically by a magistrate, whose duty it is to enquire into the condition of the labourers, and settle any disputes which may be referred to him. The chief product is cocoa-nut oil. The most important is Diego Garcia (pop. 1901, 489), one of the Chagos Archipelago, which lies on the direct route from the Red Sea to Australia, and, as it possesses a good harbour, has been much used of late years as a coaling station. The total population of the "Other Dependencies" (1901) is 1,697.

Transit, Mauritius, 27 days.

THE SEYCHELLES ISLANDS.

By letters patent of Sept., 1903, these islands, which number altogether 89, were erected into a separate colony. The principal islands of the group are Mahé, Praslin, Silhouette, Curieuse, and La Digue, and the total area of the islands, with dependencies, is estimated at 148½ square miles, of which, according to a recent survey, Mahé occupies nearly 56 square miles. The seat of government is at Victoria, the capital, on the N.E. side of Mahé, which has an excellent harbour, and is constantly visited by men-of-war of all nations. The Admiralty have made Victoria a coaling station, and a depôt for patent fuel; quarantine regulations are on a reasonable footing, and the harbour dues light. The Seychelles Islands were originally discovered by the Portuguese, were occupied by the French about 1742, captured by a British ship in 1794, and were finally assigned to Great Britain in 1814. Although only 4° S. of the Equator, the islands are very healthy, the death-rate in 1905 being 14·98 per 1,000. The population of all the islands on May 31, 1901, was 19,237 (Mahé 15,166, Praslin 1,621, and La Digue 1,074), an increase since the census of 1891 of 2,526. The estimated population, Dec. 31, 1905, was 20,767. There are 24 Roman Catholic and Church of England primary schools, and a grant-in-aid of Rs.10,000 was voted for 1901. In addition there is a Government school (the "Victoria School"), maintained at an annual cost of nearly Rs.14,000, where education of a higher class is provided. This school prepares pupils for the Cambridge local examinations, for which Seychelles was created a centre in 1902.

The principal exports are vanilla, cocoa-nuts, cocoa-nut oil, tortoise-shell, cacao, soap, and guano. The export of vanilla in 1905 was 48,305 kilos, valued at Rs. 282,875. A botanic station was established in Victoria in 1901, and promises to be a great success. Aldabra, one of the dependencies of the Seychelles, and about 680 miles from Mahé, is famous for the gigantic land tortoises, whilst the unique double cocoa-nut, Coco de Mer, is found in Mahé, and, in larger quantities, in Praslin, where there is a famous valley. Mahé is in telegraphic communication with all important parts of the world vid Mauritius and Zanzibar. The Messageries Maritimes Company runs a monthly service of steamers between Marseilles, Aden, Seychelles, Madagascar, Bourbon, and Mauritius, and British India steamers also call occasionally. The Government, which is that of a Crown Colony, is vested in the Governor, assisted by an Executive Council composed of 3 ex-officio members, and by a Legislative Council consisting of 3 official and 3 unofficial members. The Governor is President of both Councils.

British Dominions in the Southern Atlantic.

ASCENSION,

an isolated Island in the South Atlantic (3,417 miles from Plymouth, 760 from St. Helena, and 800 from Cape Palmas on the African Coast), is of volcanic origin, the peak rising to the height of 2,820 feet, situated 7° 55′ 55″ S. lat., and 14° 25′ 5″ W. long. It is said to have been discovered by a Portuguese named João de Nova Gallego, on Ascension Day, 1501, and two years later was visited by Alphonse d'Albuquerque, who gave the island its present name. Its extreme length is 7½ miles, and extreme breadth 6 miles, with a circumference of 22 miles and an area of about 38 square miles, and being situated in the heart of the S.E. trade winds, its climate is dry and salubrious up to 1,800 feet, but above that height to its limit it is damp and foggy. It remained uninhabited till 1825, when the English took possession of it. It now possesses a steam factory, while there is also an excellent hospital and sanatorium. Partridges are being preserved for sporting purposes, and steps are being taken to exterminate the rabbits, which were formerly preserved and now prove a pest. The island is visited by the sea-turtle from January to May, which lay their eggs in the sand, 129 being "turned" during the season of 1906, their weight being from 500 to 800 lb., and their average price £2 15s.; the sooty tern, or "wideawake," use the island as a nesting-place about every eighth month, their eggs being collected in vast quantities and much appreciated by the inhabitants. In 1905 there were about 15 acres of ground under cultivation, producing vegetables and a small quantity of fruit, and there is also a small amount of pasturage for sheep and cattle. The island is under the Board of Admiralty, by whom an officer is appointed as commandant. The inhabitants consist of officers and their families, seamen, marines, and Kroomen; a limited number of men also have their families with them, the full complement of the island being about 90, with about 25 women and children. Georgetown, the garrison settlement, is situated in a small bay on the N.W. coast. The island has recently been fortified, and is connected by the Eastern Telegraph Co. with St. Vincent, St. Helena, and Sierra Leone. The complement has lately been reduced in consequence of the redistribution of the Fleet.

TRISTAN D'ACUNHA

is the chief of a group of islands of volcanic origin lying in lat. 37° 6′ S. and long. 12° 2′ W., discovered in 1506 by a Portuguese admiral, after whom they are named. The population numbers about 100, and the inhabitants are said to be very long-lived.

INACCESSIBLE ISLAND is a lofty mass of rock with sides 2 miles in length; the island is the resort of penguins and sea-fowl.

THE NIGHTINGALE ISLANDS are three in number, of which the largest is 1 mile long and ¾ m. wide, and rises in two peaks, 960 and 1,105 ft. above the sea-level respectively. The smaller islands, Stoltenhoff and Middle Isle, are little more than huge rocks. Numbers of seals and sea-elephants visit these islands.

FALKLAND ISLANDS.

These, the only considerable cluster in the South Atlantic, lie about 300 miles east of the Straits of Magellan, between 51° 15′—53° S. lat. and 57° 40′—62° W. long. They consist of East Falkland (area 3,000 sq. miles), West Falkland (2,300 sq. miles), and upwards of 100 small islands (islets, rocks, and sandbanks), comprising in the aggregate 6,500 sq. miles, and a population in 1897 of about 2,050. Mount Adam, the loftiest peak in the colony, rises 2,315 feet above the level of the sea. The Falklands were discovered by Davis in 1592, and visited by Hawkins in 1594. After having successively belonged to France and Spain, they were given up to Great Britain about 1771, but not actually occupied. In 1820 the Republic of Buenos Aires established a settlement in these islands, which was destroyed by the Americans in 1831. In 1833 they were again taken possession of by the English for the protection of the whale-fishery, and colonised, and from that time to the present have so continued, being, as a whole, the most southerly organised colony of the British Empire. The climate, though somewhat bleak, is usually considered healthy, and the temperature is on the whole equable, the thermometer ranging in winter from 20° to 50°, and in summer from 40° to 65°. The islands are chiefly bog-land, and have proved suitable for sheep; kitchen-gardens occupy the only cultivated part. The population is mainly British, and is principally engaged in sheep-farming and seafaring industries. The chief exports in 1903 were wool (£103,597), sheep-skins, and tallow. The total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared in 1903 was 229,641. There are three places of worship (one Church of England, one Roman Catholic, and one Baptist). The only important settlement is Port Stanley, at the head of Port William, on the coast of East Falkland.

There is a volunteer force of about 112 men.

SOUTH GEORGIA, an island 800 miles east-south-east of the Falkland Group, with an area of 1,000 square miles, and several other small uninhabited islands, are comprised within this colony.

ST. HELENA,

probably the best known of all the solitary islands in the world, is situated in the South Atlantic Ocean, 955 miles S. of the Equator, 760 S.E. of Ascension, 1,140 from the nearest point of the American Continent, and 1,800 from the coast of S. America, in 15° 55′ S. lat. and 5° 42′ W. long. It is 10½ miles long, 6½ broad, and encloses an area of 47 square miles, with a population in 1905 of 3,512. St. Helena is of volcanic origin, and consists of numerous rugged mountains, the highest rising to 2,700 feet, interspersed with picturesque ravines. The climate vies with that of Madeira in point of salubrity and evenness of temperature. Although within the tropics, the south-east "trades" keep the temperature mild and equable. The thermometer goes up to 84° in the town at the sea-level; but in the country, 1,800 feet above the sea, the maximum is about 74°, and the mean temperature ranges from 57° in September to 66° in March, there being very little difference between night and day; the lowest temperature in winter is 51°, and the total rainfall (1903) 42½ inches. St. Helena was discovered by the Portuguese navigator, Juan de Nova Castella, on 21 May, 1501 (St. Helena's Day), and remained unknown to other European nations until 1588, when it was visited by Captain Cavendish on his return from his voyage round the world. It remained uninhabited until the Dutch colonized it circ. 1645. The English East India Company seized it in 1651; but it was retaken by the Dutch in 1672. In 1673 it was again taken from the Dutch by Capt. Munden, of the English Navy, and was held by the East India Company, who had obtained a charter for its possession from Charles II., until 1834 (with the exception of the period 1815 to 1821, during which the British Government held it as a residence for Napoleon Bonaparte, who died there 5 May, 1821), when it was ceded by them to the Crown. In 1900 the island was used as a place of internment for prisoners of war from South Africa, the first detachment (consisting of General Cronje and 2,000 officers and men) arriving in April of that year. It was formerly an important station on the route to India, but its prosperity received a fatal blow by the cutting of the Suez Canal, and it is now frequented only by a few sailing ships homeward bound from the East Indies. The tonnage dues on calling ships were abolished in 1882, and the port is now free to all ships except when bringing or taking cargo to and from the port; the number which called in 1905 was 99. It is of strategical importance as a coaling station, and has recently been fortified by the Imperial Government. St. James's Bay, on the north-west of the island, possesses a good anchorage.

The government is administered by a Governor, with the aid of an Executive Council of 3 members, the Governor alone making all ordinances.

British Dominions in the Mediterranean.

CYPRUS

is an island in the Mediterranean Sea, between N. lat. 34° 30′ and 35° 41′, and E. long. 32° 15′ and 34° 35′. It is about 60 miles distant from the nearest point of Asia Minor; and 41 miles from Latakia on the Syrian coast. The distance to Port Said, at the entrance of the Suez Canal, is 238 miles. The larger part of the island is an irregular parallelogram, 100 miles long and 50 to 30 broad; from which a narrow peninsula, 5 or 6 miles wide, runs out for 40 miles towards the north-east. The area is about 3,584 square miles. The population in 1901 numbered 237,022, of whom 21·64 per cent. were Mohammedans, and the remainder mostly members of the Orthodox Greek Church. The principal productions are grain of various kinds, sesame, linseed, wine and spirits, silk, olives, locust-beans (carobs), cotton, wool, hides, aniseed, sponges, sumac leaves, and terra umbra. The fertility of the soil has for centuries been proverbial. In 1905 the wine export was 1,021,300 gals., and that of spirits 5,522 gals., the bulk of wine going to Egypt and the spirits to Turkey. The climate varies in different localities. In the plains the summer heat is very great, and the British troops suffered when first stationed in the island. Excellent summer quarters were, however, found in the hills; and, owing to the enforcement of various sanitary measures, the death-rate of the whole island is nearly as low as that of any European country.

Cyprus still forms part of the Ottoman Empire; but by virtue of a treaty made between England and the Porte, dated 4 June, 1878, the government is administered by England for so long a time as Batoum and Kars may be kept by Russia. The inhabitants have been granted a political franchise, every man paying direct taxes having a vote. The government is administered, under the Colonial Office, by a High Commissioner, assisted by a Legislative Council composed of eighteen members, six being official and twelve elected. The island is divided into three electoral districts, each returning one Mohammedan and three Christian members.

For administrative and legal purposes it is divided into six districts. In each district the executive government is represented by a commissioner; and each has a Court of Law presided over by an English barrister, who is assisted by two native judges, one being a Christian and the other a Mohammedan. There is also a Supreme Court for the whole island, consisting of two English judges.

The amount payable to the Sublime Porte yearly is £87,800 for revenue, £5,000 in compensation for State lands, and 4,166,220 okes of salt in kind (an oke=2·8 lb.). This sum is not actually paid to the Sultan, but is retained as part payment of the loss sustained by England and France in paying the deficiency on the Guaranteed Turkish Loan of 1855.

The capital is Nicosia (Lefkosia), near the centre of the island, with a population of 14,752 in 1901; the other principal towns are Larnaca (population 7,964), Limassol (8,208), Famagusta (3,825), Kyrenia (2,336), and Papho (3,134).

Important works at Famagusta have rendered the inner harbour accessible to steamers, and a narrow gauge railway connecting the harbour with the capital was opened in 1905, and is being extended westwards to Morphou, a total of 60 miles.

MALTA,

an island in the Mediterranean Sea, 58 miles from Sicily and about 180 from the African coast, about 17 miles in length and 9 in breadth, and having an area of 91½ square miles. The colony includes also the adjoining island of Gozo, with an area of 24¾ square miles; Comino—the site of the Sultan's disaster in 1889 and now a sanitary station—and several islets. The civil population of the whole group, 1 April, 1906, was estimated at 205,059. In religion the Maltese are Roman Catholics. The lower orders are mainly Punic in race. The Maltese dialect, which is generally spoken, is of Semitic origin, and is held by some to be derived from the Carthaginian and Arabic tongues. The upper classes are mostly descendants of those who sought the protection of the Order of St. John during the Middle Ages, from all parts of Southern Europe. They speak English and Italian. There is a Maltese order of nobility consisting of 29 families. The islands are highly cultivated. The chief products are corn, oranges, melons, grapes, forage, cummin seed, onions, and potatoes; figs and honey are plentiful. It was estimated that in 1905-6 the area under cultivation in Malta and Gozo was about 41,534 acres. On census day, 1901, 5,497 females were employed in making lace. The principal occupation of the people is in connection with shipping. In 1901 there were 30,768 persons living in Valletta, but the total population of the colony was 1,671 to the square mile. The principal harbour is one of the finest in the world; it is very deep, and large vessels can anchor alongside the shore. It is an important port of call for vessels passing to and from the East and the Suez Canal, being about half-way between Gibraltar and Port Said. There is an extensive arsenal and important dockyard, Malta being the headquarters of the Mediterranean Fleet; and an additional graving dock was opened on Feb. 12, 1892. There is also a hydraulic dock, originally constructed by private enterprise, which has been taken over by the Admiralty. Two new dry docks and one arm of the breakwater at the mouth of the principal harbour have now been completed. The island is strongly fortified, and has a garrison which, on 31 March, 1906, consisted of 10,272 officers and men (including 538 Royal Malta Artillery and The King's Own Malta Regiment of militia 1,701 strong). The military expenditure for 1905-6 amounted to £621,238, of which £5,000 was contributed by the colony. The climate, although not tropical, is very hot in summer. The mean temperature for the summer months (June, July, August and September) is 77°. In winter the range is from 48° to 58°. In 1906 the highest temperature in the shade was 94°, and the lowest 42°. Citta Vecchia, the former capital of the island, contains the ancient palace of the court of justice, the Cathedral, and the Seminary; its population has now dwindled to about 300, but its suburb, Rabato, had 7,194 inhabitants in 1901. Citta Vecchia has been entirely eclipsed in importance by the modern capital of Valletta which was founded in 1566. Malta possesses a University and Lyceum; 98 elementary schools, 2 secondary schools, and 33 night schools, maintained at a total cost to the Government of £35,541; in addition to which there are garrison schools, a Dockyard school, and 119 private schools which receive no grants-in-aid from the Government.

In ancient times, Malta was occupied in succession by Phœnicians, Greeks, Carthaginians, Romans, and Byzantine Greeks, as each nation secured the command of the Mediterranean Sea. It attained to a high degree of commercial prosperity, being especially noted in Roman times for its textile fabrics. It is said to have been converted to Christianity on the occasion of the shipwreck of St. Paul in 58 A.D. In the Dark Ages it was taken by the Moors, its commerce was destroyed, and it was used mainly as a base for piratical expeditions. In 1090 it was again brought under Christian rule, being conquered by the Norman Count Roger of Sicily. For 440 years it followed the fortunes of that kingdom, but was in 1530 handed over to the Knights of St. John, who made of it a stronghold of Christianity. In 1565 it sustained the famous siege, when the last great effort of the Turk was successfully withstood by Grand Master La Vallette. The Knights expended large sums in fortifying the island and carrying out many magnificent works, until they were expelled by Napoleon in 1798. The Maltese rose against the French garrison soon afterwards, and with the assistance of some British and Neapolitan troops compelled the French to capitulate in 1800. The islands were then ceded to Great Britain, the cession being confirmed by the Treaty of Paris of 1814. The government is administered by a Governor, who is usually a distinguished General assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 11 official members, and by a Legislative Council called the Council of Government—10 official and 8 elected members. The Governor is President in both.

In 1905-6 the Port of Valletta was entered by 3,524 vessels (tonnage, 3,718,168).

GIBRALTAR,

a rocky promontory, 3 miles in length and ¼ of a mile in breadth, and 1,439 feet high at its greatest elevation, near the southern extremity of Spain, with which it is connected by a low isthmus. It is about 14 miles distant from the opposite coast of Africa. Gibraltar was captured in 1704, during the war of the Spanish Succession, by a combined Dutch and English force, under Sir George Rooke, and ceded by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. Since that time it has remained continuously in possession of the British. Of the many attempts to retake it, the most celebrated was the great siege in 1779-83, when General Elliott, afterwards Lord Heathfield, held it for 3 years and 7 months against a combined French and Spanish force. The town stands at the foot of the promontory on the N.W. side. Gibraltar is a free port, and enjoys the advantages of an extensive shipping trade. During the year 1905 3,519 vessels entered, with a total tonnage of 4,118,495. The chief sources of revenue are the port dues, the rent of the Crown estate in the town, and duties on wine, spirits, tobacco, and beer. An enclosed harbour with three graving docks, capable of accommodating the largest battleships in the British Navy, is being built at an estimated cost of about £4,000,000; the works include a commercial and coaling mole. The civilian population (1901) was 20,355, and the actual strength of the troops 6,475.

The Governor is in command of the garrison, and exercises all the functions both of government and legislation; there being no executive or legislative council.

ABYSSINIA OR ETHIOPIA.

Emperor (Negus Negusti or King of Kings), Menelek of Shoa, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., b. 1843, procl. 12 March, 1889.

Abyssinia proper consists of four provinces—Tigré, Amhara, Godjam, and Shoa. The total area of Abyssinia and its dependencies may be reckoned at 350,000 square miles, with a population of three or four millions of Abyssinians. The boundaries of the empire are indefinite except on the east, where they touch the Italian colony of Massowah (Eretria), which is a narrow coast strip; the French colony of Obok or Djibuti, and the British Somaliland Protectorate. Northwards the boundary is about 15° 30′ N. lat., falling just south of Kassala. By the Treaty between the U.K. and Ethiopia of 15 May, 1902, the frontier between Ethiopia and the Sudan was fixed as a line drawn from Khor Um Hagar on the river Setit to Gallabat, thence to the Blue Nile, Baro, Pibor, and Akobo Rivers to Melile, and onwards to the intersection of the 6° N. lat. with 35° E. long. The southern frontier is still undefined.

Abyssinia proper is volcanic and mountainous. It contains little mineral wealth, though iron and coal are not uncommon. Gold is washed in various streams, and salt, saltpetre, sulphur, copper, and silver are also procurable. The lower country and deep valley gorges are very hot; the higher plateaus are well watered and have a genial climate. In the hotter regions, sugar-cane, cotton, coffee, indigo, banana, &c., flourish; in the middle zone the vine, palm, maize, wheat, barley, orange, peach, and other fruit trees, tobacco, potatoes, &c., are cultivated; and above 9,000 feet are excellent pastures with some corn cultivation. There are two seasons in the year, a dry winter and a rainy summer from June to September. The chief river is the Blue Nile, issuing from the Tsana lake; the Atbara and many other tributaries of the Nile also have their rise in the Abyssinian highlands. Horses, mules, donkeys, camels, oxen, goats, and sheep form a large portion of the wealth of the people. The wild game consists of elephant, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, zebra, giraffe, antelope, ibex, buffalo, hyena, lynx, &c. To the north-east the people are more akin to the Caucasian and the Semitic, to the south-east more akin to the negro, on the west are the plain-dwellers who talk Amharac; on the east the mountaineers speaking Tigré, which is akin to ancient Arabic. Of the Galla tribes to the south, some are Pagan, some Mahomedan, and some Christian; the Somali are Mahomedan, but the Abyssinians are Christian and their kings claim descent from Menelek the son of Solomon by the Queen of Sheba. They themselves were converted to Christianity probably about 600 A.D. by monks from Egypt but have long been isolated from the rest of the Christian world. There is no popular literature, and no education; there is a legal code said to be derived from Constantine, but practically government is autocratic, qualified by the power of revolt. There is no standing army, but the Emperor's potential army probably numbers 200,000, armed with repeating rifles. The principal pursuits are war, agriculture, cattle breeding and hunting; industry is looked down upon; the chief exports are coffee, honey, civet, wax, gums, spices, hides, ivory, and gold. The currency is the Maria Theresa (Austrian) dollar, but Indian rupees also find some circulation in Harrar, and a Menelik dollar (value 2*s.*) is in circulation. In 1905 a charter was obtained for a State bank. The import duty on all goods at Harrar is 8 per cent. ad valorem; in the interior the duty is variable. The imports were valued at about £350,000 for 1901, the exports being about £230,000. England came into conflict with Abyssinia in 1867-8, when the then capital, Magdala, was occupied by a British Army under General Napier (Lord Napier of Magdala). The Italian settlement is now confined to a mere strip, 1 miles wide, along the coast, with possession of and access to, Lugh, on the Juba River. A railway is being built under French auspices from Jibuti to the capital, of which the first stage is completed and open for goods and passenger traffic to Dire-Dawa, about 185 miles from Jibuti and 25 miles from Harrar, to which place a carriage-road is being built. A line of telegraph connects Jibuti and Harrar. Harrar and Addis Ababa are connected with the telegraph and telephone, and a new telegraph line was opened in 1904 between Adis Ababa and Massowah, the port of Eritrea. The principal towns of Abyssinia, besides Adis Ababa, are Adowa, the capital of Tigré, Gondar, Debra-Markos, Basso, Aksum, Antalo, Ankober, Goré, Dembecha, Ijubé, and Harrar, which is a dependency of Shoa. There are ancient architectural remains at Aksum, Gondar, and Ankober; modern architecture is very poor.

The Republic is composed of 14 provinces and 9 territories, with a large seaboard on the east coast of South America. It is estimated to contain 1,212,000 square miles, with a population of over 6,000,000. In 1905 there were 192,865 births and 87,989 deaths, the latter being at the rate of 34 and the former 15·4 per 1000. In the same period there were 36,261 marriages. By the treaty of 23rd July, 1881, with Chile, Terra del Fuego has been divided between these two Republics. The country was discovered in 1517, and settled by the Spaniards in 1535. The principal productions are wool, hides, linseed, maize, wheat, tobacco, and sugar. In 1905-6 14,043,235 acres were under wheat, of the produce of which about 2,750,000 tons were available for export, with about 3,500,000 tons of maize and 550,000 tons of linseed. The other products are tallow, butter, quebracho extract (for tanning), Paraguay tea, and excellent European and indigenous fruits. The mineral products are copper, silver, manganese, wolfram, borate of lime, and salt. The export of frozen sheep, lambs, and beef to Europe has become of great importance: there are at present 7 factories in working operation. The chief articles of export are pastoral or agricultural and forest products.

The principal imports from the United Kingdom are coal, machinery, hardware, and cotton, woollen, and linen goods.

In 1904 there were about 12,000 miles of railways in working order, connecting the principal cities of the Republic with the capital. Telegraphs, 29,397 miles, mostly Government lines. Immigration is encouraged, the arrivals in 1905 amounting to 221,622, of whom more than half were Italians; against this total 105,000 are set down as having emigrated. The language in ordinary use is Spanish. The climate is temperate and healthy. There are fine docks at Buenos Aires and the Ensenada (La Plata), port works are in progress at Rosario and Santa Fé, and others are projected, while two graving docks have been constructed at Buenos Aires and a naval port, graving dock, and extensive wharves at Bahia Blanca; 1,180 British ships (3,318,463 tons) entered Buenos Aires port in 1904.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632)—Navy: 50 vessels, including 9 armoured vessels, 4 cruisers, 2 torpedo gunboats, 3 torpedo boat destroyers, 20 torpedo boats, and 34 miscellaneous and auxiliary vessels. The naval school has 70 cadets, the school of gunners 80, and the torpedo school 26.

A project is now before Congress to expend £7,000,000 sterling on ironclads, torpedo vessels, and coast defences. Education (see p. 633).

The largest Empire, next to Russia, on the continent of Europe, situated between 42°–51° N. lat. and 9° 30'—26° 20' E. long. It embraces an area of 675,887 sq. kilometers, and a population (1902) of nearly 48,141,961.

Austria-Hungary, or according to the official denomination, the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy (Oesterreichisch-Ungarische Monarchie), consists of two states, the Empire of Austria and the Kingdom of Hungary. Each of the States has its own Constitution and Parliament, and for most branches of State affairs, its own Ministry and Administration, but they are closely bound together by the identity of the Ruler and by a permanent Constitutional Union, which, upon the common principle of possession and defence, was first proclaimed by the Pragmatic Sanction of 1723, and has since been regulated by the so-called "Compromise" (Ausgleich-Kiegyezés) of 1867. According to the Constitutional Union foreign affairs and the greater part of war affairs (Army and Navy), together with the finances concerning them, are dealt with by common ministries. The control of the official actions of these ministers and the voting of the common budget is exercised by Delegations consisting of 60 members chosen from the Upper House of Austria (Herrenhaus) and Hungary (Förendiház) and from each Lower House (Abgeordnetenhaus and Kepviselöház). In every other respect legislation concerning the common affairs belongs to the two Parliaments, and each State provides separately for its contribution to the common expenses. The proportion to be contributed by each State is fixed by mutual agreement, renewable every 10 years, and the last so made and renewed expired in 1897. No new proportion having been agreed the quota (65·6 per cent. for Austria and 34·4 per cent. for Hungary) is at present fixed by the Emperor-King's decision.

Common expenses were estimated at £27,184,120.

In connection with the "Ausgleich" the two States also entered into a commercial and customs union in 1867, by which the two States form one commercial and customs territory, and possess the same system of coinage, weights and measures, and a joint bank of issue. In the same way as the quota agreement, this union is renewable every ten years, and failing a renewal each State provides separately for these matters. The Union was so renewed in 1877 and 1887, but formally dissolved when the further decennial period, 1887–97, elapsed. It is, however, provisorily maintained in fact under reciprocal conditions, until the end of 1907.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632).—The navy consists of 139 vessels, of which 16 are line-of-battle ships, 11 cruisers, and 81 torpedo boats, with 13 vessels on the Danube. Pola is the naval arsenal.

The principal articles exported from Austria-Hungary in 1904 and 1905 were (in thousands of crowns):—

| | 1904. | 1905. |
|---|---|---|
| Cereals, &c. | £45,907 | £76,158 |

| Manufactures | 914,410 | 999,350 |
| Semi-manufactures | 313,644 | 332,852 |

Commerce is carried on principally with Germany, Italy, Russia, France, and Switzerland, and through the ports of Trieste and Fiume, also direct with the transmarine world, including England. In 1904, 38,761 kilometers of railway were open for traffic, in addition to 2,777 kilometers for industrial purposes, and 1,093 kilometers in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Austria contains an area of 300,008 sq. kilometres, and a population of 26,712,154 (1903). The Central Government of the Empire is conducted by the Reichsrath, consisting of an Upper (Herrenhaus) and Lower House (Abgeordnetenhaus). There are 17 provinces, viz.:—Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria or Steiermark, Carinthia or Kärnten, Carniola or Krain, Coast Districts (Istria, Görtz and Gradisca, Trieste), Tyrol, Vorarlberg, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, Galicia, Bukowina and Dalmatia, each possessing a separate Diet (Landtage) and also sending representatives to the Reichsrath. Of the inhabitants, there were in 1900, 9,171,614 Germans, 5,955,397 Bohemians and Moravians, 4,252,483 Poles, 3,381,570 Ruthenians, and 1,192,780 Slovenes. In addition to Vienna there are five cities with over 100,000 inhabitants and nine in addition with over 50,000. There are 23,797,000 Roman, Greek and Armenian Catholics, 607,000 Orthodox Greek, 494,062 Protestants and 1,225,000 Jews in the country.

The principal industry is agriculture, in which 13,700,000 were employed in 1900; trade and manufactures accounting for about 9,600,000, while mining occupied 538,819. The chief products are grain, cereals, wine (5,337,264 hectolitres in 1905), and minerals (coal, iron, lead, zinc, silver, quicksilver and copper); the manufactures being woollens, cottons and glass.

III.—HUNGARY.

President of the Ministry, Count Fejerváry.
Minister a latere, Count Khuen Hedervary.
Interior, Count Stephen Tisza.
Finance, Dr. Ladislaus Lukács.
Instruction and Religion, Albert de Berzeviczy.
Commerce, Charles Hieronymi.

National Defence, Gen. Alexander de Nyiri.
Minister for Croatia, Erwin de Cseh.

Hungary, with its dependent states, has an area of 324,851 sq. kilometres, about 125,430 sq. miles, and is rather larger than the United Kingdom, with a population of 19,254,559 at the census of 1900: to this Croatia and Slavonia contribute 2,416,304. The country is divided into 71 counties with 474 districts for those of Hungary. Hungarian is the official language, except in Croatia and Slavonia, where Croatian is spoken. Croatia and Slavonia form an annexe of the Crown of Hungary, with autonomy in home affairs, justice and public instruction. At the head of the Croatian Government is the Banus (Viceroy), Count Th. Pejachevich, who is responsible to both the Diet of Croatia and to the Hungarian Prime Minister. The Croatian Diet sends 43 members to the Hungarian Parliament, and the Hungarian Ministry contains a Croatian member. Parliament consists of a Lower House of 453 members, elected for five years; of these Croatia sends 40, but they have no vote on matters connected with justice, education, and home affairs. There is also an Upper House, consisting of the male members of the dynasty, the Barones regni, prelates, such members of the magnate families who contribute more than 3,000 florins to the land-tax, the Banus, with three members of Croatia sent by the Diet, and fifty members nominated by the Crown.

Of the inhabitants in 1900, 8,742,000 were Hungarians, 2,799,000 Roumanians, 2,135,000 Germans, 2,020,000 Slovaks, 1,682,000 Croatians and 1,049,000 Servians, the Hungarian-speaking population numbering 10,176,000. By religions (1900) there were 9,920,000 Roman Catholics, 1,854,000 Greek Catholics, 2,816,000 Orthodox Greeks, 1,289,000 Lutherans, 2,441,000 Calvinists, and 851,000 Jews. In addition to Budapest, which has 732,322 inhabitants, there are ten cities with over 50,000 inhabitants.

All the great plains produce grain of excellent quality. The returns for 1903 (including Croatia and Slavonia) give 61,804,937 hectolitres of wheat, 17,917,130 of rye, 22,746,273 of barley, 30,025,413 of oats, and 55,067,879 of Indian corn. The cattle number 6,738,000, sheep 8,123,000, horses 2,308,000, and swine 7,330,000. The exports are chiefly cereals, live stock, and raw materials. Wheat figures for £3,492,000, barley £2,327,000, rye £1,663,000, and wheaten flour £7,617,000. The imports are chiefly manufactured goods, textile fabrics alone being valued at £15,211,000. The chief mineral products are gold, silver, copper, lead, quicksilver, antimony, iron, coal, and sulphur. The mines, however, are not well worked, and might be made a much greater source of income. Salt, which is a Government monopoly, was produced to the value of £1,175,000 in 1903.

IV.—OCCUPIED PROVINCES.

By mandate received from the Berlin Congress (1878), Austria and Hungary occupy and administer the Turkish Provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. These are situated between 42° 40′ to 40° 15′ N. lat. and 33° 22′ to 38° 45′ E. long, and contain a total area of 51,028 sq. kilometres, and a population of 1,591,036 (1895). The seat of administration is Sarajevo. The local Revenue (1903: £1,921,825) suffices for the cost of administration (£1,893,721), but not for the maintenance of the army of occupation.

A Kingdom of Central Europe, anciently inhabited by the Belgæ (a Celtic-speaking German tribe), and part of the Gallia Belgica of the Romans. In 1815 the country was joined to the Kingdom of the Netherlands, an arrangement which was upset by the Revolution of 1830. On Oct. 4, 1830, a National Congress proclaimed its independence, and on June 4, 1831, Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg was chosen hereditary King.

Belgium has a frontier of 831 miles, and is bounded on the north and east by the Netherlands (268 miles), on the south and west by France (381 miles), on the east by Germany (60 miles), and the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg (80 miles), with a seaboard of 42 miles. The Meuse and its tributary the Sambre divide it into two distinct regions, that in the west being generally level and fertile, whilst the table-land of the Ardennes, in the east, has for the most part a poor soil. The total area is 11,373 square miles, about equal to the four counties of Hertford, Lancashire, York, and Lincoln; its great harbour and commercial entrepôt is Antwerp, a strongly fortified city on the Schelde. The other harbours are Ostend, Nieuport, and Blankenberg.

The "polders" near the coast, which are protected by dikes against floods, cover an area of 193 square miles. The highest hill, Baraque Michel, rises to a height of 2,230 feet, but the mean elevation of the whole country does not exceed 536 feet. The principal rivers are the Schelde (Escaut) and the Maas (Meuse). Brussels has a mean temperature of 50° F. (summer 63°, winter 37°).

The population was 7,074,910 on 31 Dec., 1904, or 622 to the square mile; it is consequently one of the most densely peopled countries of the world. The decennial increase is about 10 per cent., and since 1861 there has been an annual excess of immigrants over emigrants, the totals in 1904 being emigrants 27,302; immigrants, 35,615. There were (1904) 3,560,419 females to 3,514,491 males; and annually 27 births and 17 deaths to every 1,000 inhabitants. There are nine provinces: Antwerp, Brabant, Flanders (E. and W.), Hainaut, Liège, Limburg, Luxemburg, and Namur. BRUSSELS (with suburbs, 598,600 inhabitants) is the capital. Other towns with over 100,000 inhabitants are Antwerp, the chief port (392,000 exclusive of suburbs), Ghent (162,500), and Liège (168,550).

French and Flemish are the joint official languages, but while French is the language of the upper classes, Flemish is spoken by the majority, preponderating in Flanders and Brabant, including Antwerp. In 1900, 42 per cent. spoke Flemish, 38 per cent. French, and 12 per cent. both tongues, the latter being a rapidly increasing class (423,752 in 1880 and 801,587 in 1900). Nearly all the inhabitants are at least nominally Roman Catholics, and in 1900 there existed 2,500 convents, inhabited by 6,237 monks and 31,668 nuns.

Education (see p. 633).

Belgium is essentially a manufacturing country and it is largely dependent upon foreign supplies for its food. The soil was divided (1895) among 829,625 proprietors. The mineral kingdom yields coal (1904, 22,761,430 tons), iron (1904, 206,630 tons), zinc, lead, and copper. The leading industries are collieries, quarries and metallurgi (Mons, Charleroi, Liège, Namur, Hainault, and Brabant), glass, textiles (Verviers), lace (Brussels Mechlin, Bruges, &c.), flour and starch mills sugar, distilleries, breweries, &c.). The following table shows the distribution of Belgian commerce in millions of francs, 1904 and 1905:—

Most of the maritime trade of Belgium is carried on in foreign bottoms, the mercantile marine only consisting (1905) of 71 vessels (99,733 tons), in addition to which there were about 400 fishing boats. In 1905, 7,419 foreign vessels entered at Belgian ports (tonnage 10,283,178). In 1904 there were 4,337 miles of railway (including branch lines and private lines rented by the State); the telegraphs had a length of 4,113 miles (1904), and the post-office carried 1,111,915,450 letters, post-cards, &c., in 1902. The navigable rivers and canals have a length of 1,337 miles.

The Belgian constitution of 1831 jointly vests the legislative power in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The 110 senators (with the exception of 26 elected by the provincial councils) and 166 representatives are elected by the people, the former for eight, the latter for four years. Universal male suffrage, with plural voting up to three votes by property and educational qualifications, was introduced by the Electoral Law of 1894, proportional representation being secured by an Act of 1900. And the united constituencies numbered 1,472,953 voters, with 2,269,414 votes, in 1900. There are in addition representative Provincial and Communal Councils, elected on a somewhat more liberal franchise.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632).

Antwerp is the principal fortress, and Liège and Namur are also fortified, forming "Têtes-de-pont" on the line of the Meuse against a violation of neutrality by either France or Germany. Belgium has neither a navy nor colonies; but the King of the Belgians is at the same time "Sovereign" of the Congo Independent State.

This and Paraguay are the only States of South America without a seaboard. Antofagasta, its former port, having been ceded to Chile. It was formerly comprised in the Spanish Vice-royalty of Colombia under the name of "Alto Peru," and derives its present name from its great liberator, Simon Bolivar. It extends between lat. 8° and 23° S. and long. 57° 30′ and 73° W., and its area is said to be 570,000 square miles. The population at the 1900 census was 1,816,271. The peace army amounts to about 3,000 men, the war effective being about 90,000. The mineral productions are very valuable: the silver mines of Potosi are believed to be almost inexhaustible; while gold, partly dug and partly washed, is obtained on the Eastern Cordillera of the Andes: tin, copper, lead, salt and sulphur are also found. Its agricultural produce consists chiefly of rice, barley, oats, maize, cotton, coca, indigo, india-rubber, cacao, potatoes, the choicest fruits, cinchona bark, medicinal herbs, &c., which with gold, silver and copper are its principal exports; its chief imports being iron, hardware, and silks. There were (Oct. 1902) about 1,051 miles of railway and 4,565 miles of telegraph wire. The only seaport is on the coast strip seized by Chile after the war of 1879; in 1905 a treaty was concluded under which Chile retained the port in return for an indemnity of £300,000 and railway and tariff concessions.

The Republic of the United States of Brazil was founded on the 15th of November, 1889, by a bloodless revolution which drove Dom Pedro from the throne. On February 24, 1891, a new Constitution was voted by the Constituent Assembly by which the President's term of office was fixed at four years; Church and State were separated, civil marriages only made valid, and education secularised.

Brazil, the most extensive State of South America, discovered in 1500 by Pedro Alvarez Cabral, Portuguese navigator, is bounded on the north by the Atlantic Ocean, Guiana, and Venezuela; on the west by Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, and Argentina; on the south by Uruguay; and on the east by the Atlantic Ocean. This immense country extends between lat. 4° 22′ N. and 33° 45′ S. and long. 34° 40′ and 73° 15′ W., being 2,600 miles from north to south, and 2,500 from west to east; with a coast-line on the Atlantic of 3,700 miles. It comprises an area of 3,218,166 square miles, and contained a population (31 Dec., 1890) of 14,333,913, the greater part of mixed blood. There are about 1,000,000 "wild" Indians and other uncivilised tribes; 76,292 immigrants arrived in 1898. The active army consists of about 20,000 men, and the navy (1906) of 6 cruisers, 4 torpedo gunboats, and 8 torpedo-boats. 3 first-class battleships are under construction. Brazil contains 20 states, 16 of which lie along the coast, and 4 in the interior. There are 42 ports along the coast, of which the principal is Rio, with a shore line of 123 miles. Brazil is unequalled for the number and extent of its rivers: the Amazon, the largest, though not the longest, in the world, with its immediate tributaries, and the Tocantins, San Francisco, and others. The minerals are very considerable and valuable, comprising gold, silver, iron, diamonds, topazes, and other precious stones. Its forests are immense, abounding in the greatest variety of useful and beautiful woods, adapted for dyeing, cabinet work, or ship-building; among these are mahogany, logwood, rosewood, brazilwood, &c. In the extreme south towards the interior the land rises by gentle gradations to the height of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, and in those regions European fruits and grain are reared in abundance, while the intermediate valleys are found extremely favourable for the raising of sugar, coffee, cotton, cocoa, india-rubber, tobacco, and tropical products. Its agricultural produce is abundant; maize, beans, cassava-root, and nuts are very generally cultivated; also, in some parts, wheat and other European cereals. Cotton also is being largely cultivated for export. Sugar-cane is grown in large and increasing quantities in the northern provinces, Pernambuco being the centre of the sugar-producing zone. India-rubber comes from the more northern provinces, especially Pará; and coffee, though also grown in the north, comes chiefly from the central portions of the country, Rio de Janeiro, Minas, and São Paulo. Tobacco is grown largely, especially in Bahia. The exports consist solely of the raw produce of the soil, and owing to the vast extent of the country, and the consequent very different peculiarities of the soil and climate, their nature varies considerably. The imports consist of every description of manufactured articles, but there are 149 cotton-mills, giving employment to 30,000 hands, and representing an invested capital of 200,000 of contos of reis. The enormous protective duties were again increased in 1887, 1893, 1896 and 1906. In 1902 there were 9,370 miles of railway open, and about 3,000 miles in course of construction. Length of telegraph wires in 1897 about 11,376 miles; number of post offices, 2,862.

The Principality of Bulgaria is under the suzerainty of Turkey. It was created by the Treaty of Berlin, 13th of July, 1878, and is governed by a Prince elected by the National Assembly or Sobranjé, with a popular legislature and constitutional government.

Eastern Roumelia, likewise a creation of the Berlin Treaty of 1878, has an area of 13,862 square miles, and 998,431 inhabitants; it was intended to form an autonomous province, but since the successful revolution at Philippopolis of September 18th, 1885, it has been incorporated with the principality, under the name of Southern Bulgaria, and the accomplished fact was recognised by the arrangement of April 5, 1886, at Constantinople, whereby the Prince of Bulgaria was appointed at the same time Governor-General of Eastern Roumelia. This Province, under the name of South Bulgaria, now forms an integral portion of the Principality, with the same ruler, laws, and mode of administration.

By modification of the Constitution, 1893, there is now one deputy to each 20,000 inhabitants, 115 for the northern, and 51 for the southern province. Prince Ferdinand was elected on July 7, 1887, and is now recognised by the six Great Powers as ruler.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632).—The navy consists of a torpedo gunboat and a few small steamers.

Education (see p. 633).

United Bulgaria is bounded on the north by Roumania, from which it is separated by the Danube; on the west by Servia and Macedonia; on the east by the Black Sea; and on the south by the Turkish province of Adrianople. The exports consist principally of cereals (especially wheat), live stock, essence of roses, woollens, skins, cheese, eggs, timber, cocoons, and tobacco; the principal imports being textiles, metal goods and machinery, colonial wares, leather, building materials, petroleum and other oils, paper, salt fish, rice, and coal. The principal towns, with their populations in 1905, are Sofia (82,000), Philippopolis (45,572), Varna (37,155), Rustchuk (33,552), Sliven (25,049), and Shumla (22,290). The great ports are Varna (1,013 vessels of 753,163 tons in 1905) and Bourgas (1,467 vessels of 610,600 tons). There are (1902) 1,020 miles of railway open; 3,270 miles of telegraph and 1,228 miles of telephone wires. North Bulgaria has an area of 24,237 square miles, and South Bulgaria an area of 12,706 square miles. Population according to language or nationality and religion (census of 1 January, 1900):—

A State of South America, of Spanish origin, lying between the Andes and the shores of the South Pacific, extending coastwise from the Rio Sama to Cape Horn south, between lat. 18° 28′ and 56° 35′ S., and long. 66° 30′ and 75° 40′ W. Extreme length of coast-line about 2,485 miles. Its extreme length is about 2,800 miles, with an average breadth, north of 41°, of 100 miles. The great chain of the Andes runs along its eastern limit, with a general elevation of 5,000 to 10,000 feet above the level of the sea; but numerous summits attain the height of 18,000 feet—the highest, Aconcagua, an extinct volcano, being 22,422 feet. The chain, however, lowers considerably towards its southern extremity. There are no rivers of great size, and none of them are of much service as navigable highways. In the north the country is arid. Chile is divided into 21 provinces and 3 territories, the aggregate area of which is estimated at 290,741 square miles, with a population (1900) of about 3,110,000, exclusive of Araucanians, Bolivian and American Indians, numbering about 50,000. The principal towns, with their estimated populations (1900), are:—Santiago (320,000), Valparaiso (143,000), Concepcion (55,400), Talca (43,000), Iquique (34,300), Chillan (34,000), and Antofagasta (20,000). The population increases but slowly, and immigration, although encouraged, is inconsiderable. Agriculture and mining are the principal occupations. Wheat, maize, barley, oats, beans, peas, lentils, wines, tobacco, flax, hemp, Chile pepper, and potatoes are grown extensively; the vine and all European fruit-trees flourish. The chief feature of 1904 was the large number of native and foreign companies raised for sheep and cattle industries in the south, the climate and conditions for which are said to be unsurpassed. The mineral wealth is considerable and some rich gold mines have been discovered. The rainless north yields more especially nitrate of soda, iodine, borate of soda, gold and silver, a large number of mines yielding both being in actual work in Tarapacá, Guanaco, and Cachinal in Atacama, and Caracoles in Antofagasta; the centre, copper and silver; and the south, iron and coal. There are smelting-works for copper and silver, tanneries corn and saw mills, starch, soap, biscuit, rope, cloth, cheese, furniture, candle, and paper factories, breweries and distilleries, and the domestic industry furnishes cloth, embroideries, baskets, and pottery. The many ports favour commerce, and six lines of steamers connect the country with Panama and the Magellan Strait direct with Europe, a passage to Liverpool occupying from 40 days. There are (1902) about 3,000 miles of railway open, nearly 15,000 miles of telegraph, over 750 post-offices, and 5,800 miles of telephone, the last worked by an English company. In 1904 a contract was signed for the completion of the Chilian section of the trans-Andean line. The commercial marine numbers 291 vessels (40 steamers), of 90,738 tons. In 1902, vessels of a total tonnage of 3,721,161 entered, and vessels of a total tonnage of 3,310,551 cleared at Chilian ports. The staple articles of export are nitrate of soda, iodine, &c., copper bars and ores, silver ores, corn, flour, hides, and guano. The imports include silks, woollens and other textiles, food, and machinery. About 40 per cent. of the foreign trade is carried on with England. The paper currency was worth about 16*d.* in 1902, but a gold coinage has been authorised.

Defence (or Army, see p. 632).—The navy consists of about 12 large and 10 small ships of war; an important naval programme was adopted in 1906.

Education (see p. 633).

China proper (or the Eighteen Provinces) contains an area of over 1,500,000 square miles. Its length from north to south is 1,860 miles, and its breadth 1,520 miles, and its population, according to the latest Chinese estimates, exceeds 400,000,000. On the north of the 18 provinces lie the vast regions of Mongolia and Manchuria, and on the west are Tibet and Turkestan, all of which are integral parts of the Chinese Empire; the area of these dependencies is over 2,500,000 square miles, with a scattered population of 19,000,000. The civil government of the 18 provinces is entrusted to viceroys and governors, and under them each province is subdivided into circuits superintended by taotais or intendants, and again into prefectures and districts. All the territorial officials are appointed by the Imperial Government, and the provincial viceroys and governors, though free to act independently in many matters of local detail and finance, are responsible to the central Government at Peking in all important questions, and especially so in foreign affairs. The administration of Mongolia and Turkestan is entrusted to Military Lieutenant Governors, who, with the Chinese officials in Tibet, are under the direction of the Mongolian Superintendency, or Colonial Office, in Peking.

FOREIGN RELATIONS with the Chinese Empire have existed for many centuries. In the 13th century the Venetian merchant-adventurer Marco Polo resided in Cambaluc (the present Peking), and was employed by the Mongol Emperor Kublai Khan as adviser. In the 17th century Jesuit missionaries had attained considerable influence in the State, and had made many converts to Christianity; but their power aroused jealousy, and they were expelled from the country.

The Dutch and Portuguese traders had for centuries maintained commercial dealings with the port of Canton, but towards the end of the 18th century they were largely displaced by the British East India Company, which established "factories" at Canton.

When the Company's monopoly was withdrawn, in 1833, the position of British merchants in Canton became a national question, and the restrictions placed in their way by the Chinese authorities, and the attitude of the Imperial Court at Peking in refusing to treat with Great Britain on terms of equality, all contributed towards the first war against China in 1840. A treaty was signed at Nanking, as the result of these operations, ceding Hong Kong to Great Britain and opening five ports to foreign trade and residence; but the principle of extra-territoriality was maintained, and foreigners remained amenable only to the laws of their own countries. For this reason, and for the general protection of their interests, consuls were appointed to reside in these "treaty ports" to watch over their national trade and interests.

The continued exclusiveness and conservatism of the Chinese Government led by a long chain of events to the war of 1860, when British and French troops captured Peking and burnt the Summer Palace. This war was closed by the ratification of the Treaty of Tientsin, which improved the commercial situation and opened more ports to foreign trade and residence, besides providing for the establishment of Legations in Peking. From this date the development of foreign trade began to be most important, and for many years Great Britain's share of it was greatly predominant.

Meanwhile, China has suffered largely for her own conservatism and ignorance. In 1885 the loss of her suzerainty over Upper Burma to Great Britain was followed by the cession of Tongking to France. In 1894 she fought a disastrous war with Japan, resulting in the loss of Formosa and the establishment of Corea as an independent state. In 1897 Germany seized Kiaochou Bay as a reprisal for the murder of missionaries. Then Russia occupied Port Arthur as a naval station, and Great Britain leased Weihaiwei for the same purpose, besides improving her position at Hong Kong by occupying the mainland opposite, round the city of Kowloon. During the whole period, also, Russia had been extending her frontiers on the north.

An abortive attempt was made, in 1898, by the Emperor to introduce administrative reforms, but his reactionary ministers persuaded the Dowager Empress (his aunt) to reassume the reins of government. Under her rule a plot was hatched to rid the country of foreigners; and in the summer of 1900 the Legations in Peking and the foreign settlements in Tientsin were fiercely attacked and bombarded for many weeks. The situation was relieved at its most critical moment by the arrival of an allied army despatched by nearly all the Treaty Powers, and Tientsin and Peking were captured. The Imperial Court fled, and remained in voluntary exile until early in 1902. Meanwhile, a Peace Protocol was signed between the Envoys of the Treaty Powers and the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, Prince Ch'ing and the late Li Hung Chang. This provides for an indemnity of £65,000,000, to be paid within the next 39 years. Subsequent negotiations resulted in 3 new commercial treaties—(1) between the U.K. and China (5 Sept., 1902); (2) U.S. and China (8 Oct., 1903); and (3) Japan and China (9 Oct., 1903). Under the two last Mukden, Tatungkow, Chang-sha, and Antung in Manchuria, were made Treaty ports.

Initiatory measures have been taken by China, under the first of these Treaties, to introduce two important reforms—namely, the protection of trade-marks and the establishment of a uniform national coinage. As regards the former, provisional regulations have already been framed, and the latter was the subject of investigation by a joint American and Mexican Commission, which submitted a scheme to the Chinese Government for the adoption of a gold standard.

On the conclusion of the war between Russia and Japan in 1905, a Treaty and Additional Agreement relating to Manchuria were entered into between Japan and China. By the former the Chinese Government consented to all the transfers and assignments made by Russia to Japan in Manchuria; and the latter provides, inter alia, for the speedy opening by China of the following cities and towns in Manchuria as places of international residence and trade:—Feng-huang-ch'eng, Liao-yang, Hsinmintun, Tung-chiang-tzu (on the Liao River), and Fa-kumen in Fengtien Province; Ch'ang-ch'un, Kirin, Harbin, Ninguta, Hunch'un, and Sansing in the Kirin Province; and Tsitsihar, Hailar, Aihun, and Manchuli in the Heilungchiang Province.

Latest estimates of the foreign residents at the open ports of China are as follows:—British, 8,493; Japanese, 16,910; Americans, 3,380; Russians, 682; Germans, 1,850; French, 2,143; Italian, 412; other countries, 4,131. Total, 38,001. Out of a total of 1,693 foreign firms in China, 434 are British, 729 Japanese, 197 German, 105 American, and 77 French.

Defence (for Army, see p. 633).—The navy has not recovered from the effects of the Chino-Japanese war, when more than ten important war vessels were sunk or captured. China now possesses 2 second-class cruisers (4,300 tons), and 11 third-class cruisers (875–2,500 tons); 3 torpedo gunboats (349–1,000 tons), 4 gunboats (215–411 tons), 32 first-class torpedo boats, and 12 second-class torpedo boats. Most of these were launched between 1885 and 1902. Of the torpedo boats about half only are fit for action. Four destroyers, built in 1898–9, were captured by the Allied Forces in 1900, and were appropriated by Great Britain, France, Germany and Russia respectively. Full complement of the navy is about 2,500.

SHIPPING.—The mercantile marine (1901) consisted of 46 steam vessels over 100 tons register, with a total net tonnage of 40,178 tons; in 1905 the total tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at the treaty ports was 72,755,547; of these 48 per cent. were British, 22·5 per cent. Chinese, 11 per cent. German, 8·5 per cent. Japanese, and 4 per cent. Norwegian.

COMMERCE.—The total foreign trade of China in 1905 amounted to £101,529,594 (imports £67,251,411, exports £34,278,183), the highest total yet recorded; and an increase of £17,887,816 over the previous highest total (1904). It was shared by the nations of the world as under in 1905:—

| British. | % | Foreign. | % |

The principal exports to this country from China in 1905 were tea (£485,606), silk (£516,323), skins and furs of all kinds (£492,214), straw for plaiting purposes (£186,720), hair (£222,261), and bristles (£126,606); while the chief domestic imports from the United Kingdom were cottons (£9,153,913), woollens and worsteds (£454,389), iron, wrought and unwrought (£581,999), copper, wrought and unwrought (£497,797), machinery (£437,255), candles (£151,917), chemicals (£123,155), cotton yarn (£122,735), tobacco (£128,097), and soap (£117,352).

EDUCATION (see p. 634).

RAILWAYS.—About 3,500 miles were open in 1906, inclusive of the Manchurian lines. The following were the principal lines completed and working:—Chinese Eastern Railway.—(a) Manchuria station vid Harbin to Port Arthur and Dalny (1,200 miles). A short branch (15 miles) runs from Tashihch'iao to Yingkow (Newchwang). (b) Harbin to East Manchurian frontier (300 miles). Imperial Railways of North China.—Earnings of intra-mural section mortgaged to British bondholders. (a) Peking to Yingkow, vid Tientsin, Tangku, and Shanhaikuan (470 miles). Short branch from Peking to Tungchow (12 miles). (b) Koupangtze to Hsinmintun (70 miles). (c) Chinchou-fu to the Nanp'iao coal mines (30 miles). (d) Kao-po-tien (on the Peihan line) to the Western Tombs (30 miles). (e) Hsinmintun to Moukden (32 miles). Peihan Railway, from Peking to Hankow (750 miles). French and Belgian capital. Tsingtao—Chinanfu Railway (250 miles). German direction. Taok'ou-Ch'inghua Railway (Honan), 90 miles, crossing the Peihan line. Constructed by the Peking syndicate (British), and taken over by China under Loan Agreement of 3 July, 1905. Shanghai-Woosung Railway (12 miles), forming part of the Shanghai-Nanking Railway in course of construction. Canton-Samshui Railway (30 miles). Chinese. P'inghsiang to Lihng borders of Kiangsi-Hunan (56 miles).

The following lines are under construction:—Canton-Hankow Railway (650 miles). Concession originally granted to an American syndicate has now been redeemed by the Chinese. The line from Canton to Samshui, already constructed, forms part of this railway. Shanghai-Nanking Railway (160 miles). Concession granted to British and Chinese Corporation, Limited, by Loan Agreement of 9 July, 1903. Completed as far as Wuhsi, 30 miles beyond Soochow. Whole will probably be finished in July, 1907. Laokai—Yunnan-Fu (280 miles). French concession. Will be open to Mengtze in 1907. Chengting-Fu—Taiyuan-Fu Railway (125 miles). Russian capital. Kaifeng-Fu—Honan-Fu Railway (130 miles). Belgian capital. Peking-Kalgan Railway (150 miles). Chinese capital and construction. Open as far as Nankow (35 miles). Swatow-Chaochoufu (32 miles). Chinese. Nearly completed. P'ingyang-Tsechow (in Shansi).

The following lines are contemplated:—British Capital.—Suchow to Ningpo, vid Hangchow (170 miles); Canton to Kowloon (100 miles). British and German Capital.—Tientsin to Chinkiang, vid Chinan and Hsuchon (560 miles). German Capital.—Techou to Chengting (100 miles); Yenchou to Kaifeng-fu (150 miles). French Capital.—Longsan to Nanning, vid Lungchow (150 miles). Japanese Capital.—Amoy to Foochow (150 miles); Foochow to Wuchang (450 miles). There are also projects for lines from Ch'engtu vid Chungking; Wuhu to Kuangtechou (Anhui); Canton to Amoy; Kalgan to Kulun (Manchuria); and Lanchoufu to Ili (Kansu).

TELEGRAPHS are being rapidly constructed by the Imperial Government, and Pekin is in communication overland with Europe. The total length of line in operation at end of 1905 was 21,379 miles.

CUSTOMS AND POSTS.—The Imperial Maritime Customs is the controlling service; this body consists of nearly 1,000 Europeans, a large proportion of them British subjects, all under the control of Sir Robert Hart, G.C.M.G. By an Imperial Decree of May, 1906, the Maritime Customs Dept. was transferred from the Foreign Board to the Board of Revenue, and two Chinese Administrators-General were appointed. It is not yet exactly known how far this change will affect the powers hitherto exercised by the Inspector-General. In addition to the collection of dues at the Treaty Ports this service manages the lighting and navigation thereof, and keeps a small fleet of cruisers to enforce its regulations; it also manages the Imperial Post Office whose operations have been much developed in the last two years. Already letters can be sent all over the 18 provinces at a uniform rate of 2 cents (or less than one halfpenny) per half-ounce.

FINANCES.—Sir R. Hart, in 1901, estimated the annual revenue as follows: Land tax, 26,500,000 taels; provincial duties and receipts, 2,600,000 taels; grain commutation, 3,100,000 taels; salt gabelle, 13,500,000; likin, 16,000,000; customs (maritime), 23,800,000, (native) 2,700,000; total, 88,200,000 taels. The expenditure was estimated at 101,120,000 taels.

Formerly New Granada—a Republic with Constitution, 5 August, 1886—consisting of the Capital District of Bogotá and 15 Departments—Antioquia, Bolivar, Boyaca, Cauca, Cundinamarca, Magdalena, Santander, Tolima, Nariño, Huila, Caldao, Galan, Quesada, Tundama and Atlantico—in the most N. W. part of South America, and includes the isthmus connecting the two continents, having a coast-line on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans. It is situated between 2° 40′ S. to 12° 25′ N. lat. and 68° to 83° W. long., comprising an area of 473,000 square miles, and possessing an estimated population (1895) of about 4,000,000, of whom more than one-half are whites and half-castes. It has been frequently subjected to revolutionary changes and civil wars, and in December, 1903, the Department of Panama proclaimed its independence and now exists as a separate republic. The country is intersected by three great ranges of the Andes, known as the Western, Central, and Eastern Cordilleras; the latter is by far the largest, consisting of a series of vast table-lands, cool and healthy. This temperate region is the most densely-peopled portion of the Republic. Its forests are extensive; among the trees are mahogany, cedar, fustic, and other dye-woods and medicinal plants. Its mineral productions are gold, silver, platinum, copper, iron, lead, coal, and emeralds. Its principal agricultural products are coffee, cotton, plantains, and bananas, and in some parts tobacco, wheat and other cereals. Its manufactures, for home consumption, consist of woollen and cotton stuffs. The plains yield large quantities of hides, and jerked beef is obtained from the cattle feeding there. The chief exports are coffee, precious metals, and india-rubber. All religions are tolerated. The standing army consists of about 10,000 men, and the navy of 5 cruisers and 3 small gunboats. Railroads are in their infancy, about 400 miles being open in 1899, with about 6,500 (1894) miles of telegraph. The rate of exchange fluctuates.

CONGO, INDEPENDENT STATE OF THE.

Sovereign, Leopold II., King of the Belgians.
Governor-General, Baron Wahis.
Vice-Governors-General, M. Wangermée; M. Fuchs; M. Lantannois.
Secretary of State, Baron van Eetvelde.

Consul-General in London, Monsieur J. Houdret, 130 London Wall, E.C.
Consul, J. T. Grein, 21 Mincing Lane, E.C.

The Independent State of the Congo has sprung out of the discoveries of Sir H. M. Stanley, and the explorations carried on subsequently by an International Association founded at Brussels under the presidency of the King of the Belgians in 1876. The territory of this State includes the right bank of the Congo from Manyanga to the sea, and 16 miles of sea-coast north of the estuary; the left bank from Noki (80 miles from the sea); and thenceforth both banks.

In the east it extends to Lake Tanganyika. The total area included within its limits amounts to 802,000 square miles, with a native population estimated at 14,000,000 to 15,000,000. The total European population (Jan., 1903) was 2,365, of whom 121 were British, 41 Americans, 149 Italians, 108 Portuguese, 136 Swedes, 67 Germans, and 1,417 Belgians (mostly Government officials). The mighty Congo, with its numerous navigable tributaries, constitutes the leading feature of this so-called State. It is navigable for large vessels from its mouth at Banana to Matadi (95 miles), where the European steamers discharge and recharge their cargo; but between that place and Leopoldville, on Stanley Pool, there occur rapids and falls which have been avoided by a railroad 240 miles in length. The railway was opened for traffic in July, 1898, to Stanley Pool, the first-class fare from Matadi being £8 and freight 10*d.* per kilo; there is also a second line, 60-centimetre gauge, under construction from Boma to the Mayumbe country, with about 40 miles completed at end of 1901. The Great Lakes Railway is completed as far as Ponthierville, about 75½ miles (1906). The railway receipts, 1902–3, amounted to 9,053,755 fr. (8,253,343 fr. goods traffic), and the expenditure, 3,417,824 frs.; during that period 2,508,364 fr. were paid to share and debenture holders. The accounts for 1903–4 show receipts, 11,279,014 fr. A line of telegraph is open to Coquilhatville. There is telegraphic communication with Europe viâ Leopoldville and Brazzaville (a cable goes across the river between these two places)—by land lines from Brazzaville to Libreville, and thence by submarine cable to Europe. In the rainy seasons this route is not to be relied upon owing to the damage done by lightning, and to the telegraph posts being washed down by the rains. Above Leopoldville the river is navigable as far as the Stanley Falls, a distance of over 900 miles. The population of this vast territory consists of numerous negro tribes, of whom none have as yet attained a superior degree of civilization, whilst many still practise cannibalism. A terrible disease, called "Sleeping Sickness," for which no remedy has yet been discovered, has of late years made increasing ravages upon the native population, and threatens to depopulate large districts (especially in the Lower Congo) of a country in other respects capable of supporting with ease a large population. There are undoubtedly many fertile tracts, more especially along the rivers; but the barren mountain-land, which shuts out the coast from the more productive interior, necessitating as it does considerable expense for the transportation of articles of commerce ill able to bear it, must always present a difficulty in developing the resources of the country. The exports consist mainly of rubber (three-fifths of whole), palm-kernels, palm-oil, ivory, and a few minor articles. The coffee plant and cotton grow wild, and coffee, cocoa, and tobacco have been planted with success. Iron, copper, and other minerals have been found. There is a special import duty on spirits; 10 per cent. ad valorem is charged on salt, arms and all other goods.

COSTA RICA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, Cleto Gonzalez Viquez, assumed office 8 May, 1906, for 4 years.
Minister of Foreign Affairs, Luis Anderson.
Commerce & Finance, O. F. Rohrmoser.
Interior, P. J. Valverde.
War and Marine, Vidal Quiros.
Consul-Gen. in London, W. de la Guardia 58 Lombard Street, E.C.

The Republic of Costa Rica, the most southern State of Central America, extending across the isthmus, between 8° 27′ and 11° 10′ N. lat. and from 82° 30′ to 85° 45′ W. long., contains an area of about 23,000 English square miles, and a population (1905) of 334,297. The chief exports are coffee (296,509 bags, value £775,135, 1905), bananas (7,283,000 bunches in 1905, value £748,510), cacao, cedarwood, fustic, and hides. The imports are dry goods, hardware, provisions, railway material, machinery, paints, and general merchandise (in 1905, 46·88 per cent. from United States, 19·73 from United Kingdom, 12·9 from Germany, 5·24 from France, and 15·25 from other countries).

The chief ports are Limon, on the Atlantic coast, through which the whole of the important banana trade with the United States and England is done, as well as by far the larger part of the other exports and imports, and Puntarenas on the Pacific coast.

The Costa Rica Railway runs from Limon to the capital, San José (103 miles), and is continued 13 miles to Alajuela (Costa Rica branch lines 57 miles). The Northern Railway runs from Limon as terminus, and comprises 90 miles of main line and branches, running through the banana districts on the Atlantic coast; the services of the above two lines were amalgamated from 1 July, 1905. The Government own and operate the Pacific Railway, from San José to Santo Domingo (46 miles), and the coast section of the same, Esparta to Puntarenas (13 miles); the gap between these two sections (13 miles by cart road) will shortly be joined by the railway. The journey from Limon to the capital takes six hours, and from the capital to Puntarenas one day under ordinary circumstances. A considerable amount of English capital is embarked in the Republic.

CRETE (or CANDIA).

Suzerain, H.M. the Sultan of Turkey.

High Commissioner, M. Zaimis, assumed office 30 Sept., 1906.

Crete (or Candia) is an island in the Mediterranean, about 148 miles long and 7 to 30 miles in breadth, with an area of 2,950 square miles; the population is 301,577, of whom 267,572 are Christians, the remainder being Mussulmans speaking the Greek tongue. The island formed part of the early and later Roman Empires, and in 1669 was captured by the Turks.

The island now has impartial administration under the high suzerainty of Turkey, but independent of its suzerain under the High Commissioner appointed by the Powers. The climate is healthy, and a fine anchorage is presented by Suda Bay. The chief products are wheat and fruit; and wool, soap, olive oil, carobs, sallona, and cheese are the principal exports. The chief towns are Candia (pop. 22,331), Canea, the capital (pop. 20,972), and Retimo (pop. 9,308).

The island of Cuba lies between 74° and 85° W. long., and 19° and 23° N. lat., with a total area of about 36,000 sq. miles and a population of 1,572,797 (1899). Cuba suffered many years of internal discord, from its discovery by Columbus until its liberation in 1898, having been a Spanish possession until the Spanish-American War, of which it was the main bone of contention. A Cuban congress met at the end of 1900 and agreed upon a Constitution (1901), which was ratified on certain conditions by the U.S.A. in 1902.

The chief products of the island are tobacco and sugar, and the imports are food and drink (£4,500,000), textiles (£1,800,000), live stock (£1,200,000). 1,430 miles of railway were open on 30 June, 1903, and over 3,000 miles of telegraph line. The imports are mainly from U.S.A. (45 per cent.) and U.K. (13·5 per cent.); the exports being taken by U.S.A. (86 per cent.) and U.K. (5 per cent.).

CAPITAL, Havana (pop. about 250,000); other towns are Santiago (40,000), Matanzas (37,000), Cienfuegos (30,000), Cardenas (22,000), and Puerto Principe (20,000).

A Kingdom of Northern Europe, and the smallest of the Northern States, with a Constitution dated 28 July, 1865; consisting of the islands of Zeeland, Fünen, Lolland, &c., the peninsula of Jutland, and the outlying island of Bornholm in the Baltic. Denmark is situated between 54° 34′—57° 44′ N. lat. and 8° 5′—12° 40′ E. long.; its present contracted dimensions being the result of the Dano-German war of 1864, which stripped it of the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein and Lauenburg. It comprises an area of 14,844 square miles (9,375,403 acres), with a population in 1901 of 2,449,540 (165 per square mile), nearly one-half of whom live exclusively by agriculture, and one-fourth by manufactures and trade. The common products are wheat, rye, oats, barley, potatoes, cattle, horses, pigs, sheep, and butter. Its manufactures are, for the most part, for home consumption. Its principal imports are coals, manufactured goods (woollens, silks, cottons), iron, hardware, wine, fruit, tea, maize, and colonial produce. In 1901, 2,866,899 acres were under corn crops and 3,106,228 permanent pasture. In 1903 the livestock numbered 486,935 horses, 1,840,466 cows, 876,830 sheep, 1,456,699 swine, and 38,984 goats. The corn crop in 1902 amounted to 97,844,429 bushels. Its chief exports are agricultural produce, including wheat and barley, bacon, hams, flour, butter, eggs, hides, skins, corn-meal and oil-cake, horses, and cattle. The value of butter exported to the United Kingdom in 1904 was £9,636,600, eggs accounting for £1,511,000, and bacon £4,460,000; the principal imports from the U.K. being coal and fuel (£1,600,000). There is a mercantile marine of 3,679 vessels, with a tonnage of 453,112. There are (1903) 1,879 miles of railway and 3,817 miles of telegraph line (1902).

Santo Domingo, formerly the Spanish portion of the island of Hayti, is the oldest settlement of European origin in America, having been founded in 1494 by Bartolomeo Columbus. The capital city contains the cathedral and Columbus's remains. It comprises an area of about 20,596 square miles, with an estimated population of nearly 500,000. The chief products are tobacco, coffee, sugar, cocoa, mahogany, and a great variety of other furniture woods, wax, honey, logwood, fustic, turtle-shell, hides, bananas, and divi-divi. Sugar is the most important crop, and cocoa, coffee, and tobacco are grown. Gold is found and copper mines of great richness are being worked in the vicinity of San Cristobal. Iron and coal are also found, and a petroleum well has been opened up. There are about 120 miles of railway, and telegraphic and telephonic communication has been established throughout the Republic, which is connected by cable with North and South America. The Customs are administered temporarily by officials lent by the United States Government, pending a Treat now in process of ratification, under the terms of which the United States will collect the Customs Revenues, assist the Dominican Government to maintain peace and act as intermediary between the Republic and its foreign creditors. Since April, 1905, 55 per cent. of the Revenues are being deposited in a New York Bank to the credit of the Foreign and Interior Debt. This fund now amounts to over £300,000.

A State of South America, on its western side, being that portion of the original Republic of Colombia which lies on each side of the Equator, extending from lat. 1° 38′ N. to 6° 26′ S. (according to the Ecuadorian geography, but there are boundary disputes with Peru and Colombia), and between 70° and 81° W. long., comprising an area of 120,000 English sq. miles. It has a population of about 1,270,000, mostly descendants of the Spaniards, aboriginal Indians, and Mestizoes. The giant chain of the Andes here presents the Chimborazo, 21,525 feet, the Cotopaxi, 19,613 feet, the Antisana, 19,335 feet, Cayambe, 19,186 feet above the level of the sea, and others. Ecuador is watered by the Upper Amazon, and by the rivers Guayaquil, Mira, Santiago, Chones, and Esmeraldas on the Pacific coast. There are extensive forests, and the cinchona bark tree is common. Its chief products are cocoa, vegetable ivory, cotton, coffee, india-rubber, orchella weed, straw hats and hammocks, bark, yams, tobacco, fruits, sarsaparilla, wheat, &c. Its minerals consist of gold, quicksilver, lead, iron, and copper; emeralds and rubies are occasionally met with, and sulphur is found in many parts. The chief exports are—cocoa, caoutchouc, silver specie and gold, cinchona bark, Panama hats, coffee, and cattle. Ecuador is divided into 15 provinces and one territory. In 1891 there were 15 miles of railway open. An arrangement was recently made with the bondholders for the conversion of the Debt, but the Dictator, in 1895, suspended payment pending a further and less onerous arrangement; meanwhile a 10 per cent. surtax upon import dues is being collected and deposited in a Guayaquil bank. Guayaquil is the chief port; population, 1896, about 50,000. In 1890 the Customs duties amounted to £460,162. The currency is a gold condor (of 10 sucres) value £1.

The population of the other chief towns is approximately as follows: Quito, 40,000; Cuenca, 25,000; Riobamba, 12,000; Ambato, Loja, and Latacunga, 10,000.

The GALAPAGOS ISLANDS (2,400 square miles) belong to Ecuador; only about 200 miles are susceptible of cultivation.

A country in the north-east corner of the Continent of Africa; was made part of the Turkish Empire in the latter part of the 12th century. Its history became interwoven with that of Europe when the army of Napoleon the Great entered into possession in 1801. British successes drove out the invaders, and in 1803 the newcomers also evacuated the country, which they endeavoured to restore to the control of the Sultan of Turkey; but after the abandonment by Great Britain a struggle arose between two Turkish parties, the Albanians and the Ghuzz, the former being completely victorious under their leader, Mehemet Ali, who, in 1811, in spite of the attempted intervention of Great Britain, obtained the supreme power and ruled the country, agreeing to pay an annual tribute to the Porte of £682,092. His successors were Ibrahim (1848), Abbas (1848–1854), Said (1854–1863), whose reign was marked by the Suez Canal concession, and Ismail (1863–1879), who by a firman of the Sultan (14 May, 1867) was granted the title of KHEDIV MISR, or Ruler of Egypt, the previous rulers having had the title of Vali, or Governor. In the early years of his reign the Egyptian dominions were very largely extended, until in 1875 its territories comprised an area of nearly 1,500,000 square miles, with a population of about 16,000,000. But on the heels of annexation and conquest followed misgovernment and financial embarrassment. At this point the Governments of France and Great Britain intervened, and forced Ismail to abdicate, appointing his son Mohamed Tewfik (1879–1892) to succeed him. By a decree of 10 Nov., 1879, a Controller-General was appointed by each Power. In 1882, however, their work of reform was interrupted by a military revolt, headed by an officer of the Egyptian army (Arabi Pasha), and, the French Government declining to co-operate, a British expedition was despatched to re-establish the authority of the Khedive. The Dual Control was abolished by a decree of the Khedive (18 Jan., 1883), and a British financial adviser appointed as a member of the Khedivial Government. Meanwhile a revolt had broken out in the southern provinces, headed by Sheikh Mohamed Ahmed of Dongola, who proclaimed himself a Mahdi, or prophet, foretold by the Moslems. General Gordon, the hero of the Chinese rebellion, was despatched to Khartoum (Jan., 1884) as Governor-General of the Soudan, but this step was not followed by immediate movements of troops against the rebels, and in 1885 General Gordon fell at the capture of Khartoum (26 Jan.) before the Nile relief expedition reached him.

In 1883 the Khedive created a Legislative Council of 30 members, and a General Assembly, consisting of the Legislative Council, the six Ministers of State, and 46 members elected by the people. These bodies, however, were, and still are, mainly consultative, the real legislative power resting with the Khedive and his Ministers. The command of the army is made by Khedivial decree with the consent of the British Government.

In 1892 (7 Jan.), the Khedive Mohamed Tewfik died, and was succeeded by his elder son Abbas, the present ruler.

For the purposes of local government the country is divided into governorships and provinces, the latter being sub-divided into districts. Justice is administered by (1) Religious Courts; (2) the Mixed Tribunals established in 1875, to deal with questions arising between foreign inhabitants of different nationality and civil suits between natives and foreign subjects; (3) the Consular Courts, by which criminal charges against foreign subjects are investigated; and (4) the Native Tribunals containing Egyptian and foreign judges, dealing with criminal charges against natives, and with civil cases in which both plaintiff and defendant are local subjects. A British Judicial Adviser to the Khedive watches the proceedings of the latter.

The population in 1882 was 6,814,000, including 90,886 European foreigners (37,301 Greeks, 18,665 Italians, 15,716 French, 8,022 Austrians, 6,118 English, &c.); and by the census of 1897, Egypt Proper contains 9,734,000 inhabitants (750·5 per square mile), of whom 112,500 were foreigners (38,000 Greeks, 24,500 Italians, 14,000 British subjects, 5,000 British army, 14,000 French subjects, 7,000 Austrians, 3,200 Russians, and 1,300 Germans).

The cultivated portion of Egypt is confined to the country annually inundated by the Nile, or capable of being irrigated by canals. The great irrigation works, to which Egypt may be said to owe its existence, are being further extended by elevating dams across the Nile at Assuan, Assiut, and Zifta (completed and inaugurated in 1902) for raising the water.

Education (see p. 634).

Agriculture and Industry.—Its products consist of cotton, millet, maize, wheat, rice, melons, gourds, sugar, hemp, &c. No metals have been worked within recent times in any considerable quantity, but recently prospecting has been undertaken in the ancient mining districts for gold, copper, lead, sulphur, emeralds, &c., and several mines are being opened up. Salt is extracted in large quantities (53,425 tons in 1902). Nitre, marble, red granite, Oriental alabaster, and limestone are found, in addition to indications of petroleum and coal. Most of the turquoises of the world come from the mines in the Sinai peninsula.

Trade.—The chief imports are cotton stuffs, coals, provisions, woollens, coffee, tobacco, indigo, hardware, timber, wine and spirits, and machinery. The exports consist mainly of cotton and cotton-seed (88 per cent.), beans, wheat, sugar, maize, rice, gums, hides, wool, barley, cigarettes, ivory, and ostrich-feathers. Of the entire trade over 42 per cent. is British, 9 per cent. being carried on with France, 8 per cent. with Turkey, and 6 per cent. with Germany and Austria.

Communications.—There is a network of railways in the Delta, the principal lines radiating from Cairo to Alexandria, Damietta, Ismailia (continuing northwards to Port Said and southwards to Suez) and Shellal. There are also extensions from Wadi Halfa to Khartoum, and from Berber to Suakin. The total length of these lines (exclusive of the Wadi Halfa-Khartoum line) was 1,448 miles on 31 Dec., 1904, and 17,734,900 passengers and 3,529,559 tons of goods were carried in 1904, the net receipts being £E1,158,080. From the terminus to Luxor the standard gauge is used, but thence to Shellal the gauge is 3 ft. 6 in., as in the extensions from Wadi Halfa to Kerma and Wadi Halfa to Khartoum. There are (1904) 2,562 miles of telegraph, with 10,868 miles of wire, over which 1,824,620 messages were transmitted in 1904. The net postal revenue was £63,989 in 1904.

Defence.—The British army of occupation numbers about 4,880 men. The Egyptian forces in 1904 numbered about 16,000.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Guaranteed debt, 3% ... ... ... | | £7,805,700 |
| Privileged ,, 3½% ... ... ... | | 31,127,780 |

By the agreement (8 April, 1904) between Great Britain and France, to which all the Powers subsequently adhered, the restrictions which, since 1876, have hampered the liberty of the Egyptian Government in financial matters were abolished. Though the Caisse de la Dette still exists, its duties are limited to receiving the revenues necessary for the interest and to the payment of the coupons.

Detailed accounts of the various administrative and financial reforms which have been carried out since 1882, and have entirely changed the state of the country, may be found in the annual reports addressed by Lord Cromer to the Foreign Office.

The Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal was opened in 1869, the British Government acquiring by purchase (25 Nov., 1875) shares to the amount of £4,000,000 (the value 31 March, 1906, being fully £31,000,000). The total length of the canal is 99 miles, with a width of 37 metres (121ft. 5in.), having cost £24,000,000 to construct and enlarge; the maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 8·23 metres (27 feet). By a convention, signed on 29 Oct., 1888, the canal was exempted from blockade, and vessels of all nations, whether armed or not, are to be allowed to pass through it in peace or war. The management of the canal is entrusted to a council of 32 administrators, of whom 10 are British (three representing H.M. Government and seven the shipowning interest). The British directors are Sir Henry Austin Lee, K.C.M.G., C.B., Maj.-Gen. Sir John Ardagh, K.C.M.G., and Henry Torrens Anstruther, representing the Government; and R. Alexander, R. S. Donkin, F. Green, Sir J. L. Mackay, G.C.M.G., Lord Rathmore, J. W. Hughes, and Sir Thomas Sutherland, G.C.M.G., representing the shipping interest.

The transit receipts in 1869 were £2,178; in 1870, £206,273; in 1893, £2,826,692; in 1894, £2,951,072; in 1895, £3,124,148; in 1896, £3,255,061; in 1897, £2,913,221; in 1898, £3,411,790; in 1899, £3,652,751; in 1900, £3,624,944; in 1901, £4,015,456; in 1902, £4,148,800; in 1903, £4,144,812; in 1904, £4,616,034; and in 1905, £4,554,672.

The present rate of transit dues is 7fr. 75c. per ton, being a reduction of 75c. per ton on the former rate of 8 fr. 50 c., which prevailed from the beginning of 1903 until the end of 1905.

The Sudan Provinces were recovered by Anglo-Egyptian expeditions, 1896–1899, and their extent is defined in a convention signed, on 19 Jan., 1899, by Viscount (now Earl of) Cromer and the Egyptian Minister for Foreign Affairs, laying down the principles of administration. The territories affected are all those lying south of the 22nd parallel of latitude, which have never been evacuated by Egyptian troops since 1882, and those which, if evacuated and temporarily lost, have since been, or shall henceforth be, reconquered by the two Governments acting in concert. The Government is to be administered by a Governor-General in supreme civil and military command, appointed and removable by Khedivial decree with the consent of the British Government. The Governor-General may legislate by proclamation with the consent of the Governments, and the territories do not fall under the jurisdiction of the Mixed Tribunals. The British and Egyptian flags together are used in the Sudan.

The seat of Government is Khartoum, where a palace for the Governor-General and Government offices and barracks have been built. The town will shortly be lighted throughout by electricity and provided with an efficient water supply, independent of the river. On 5 Jan., 1899, the foundation stone was laid of the Gordon Memorial College, for the establishment of which Lord Kitchener obtained the necessary funds by public subscription (see also p. 654). The College was formally opened by Visct. Kitchener on 8 Nov., 1902, and about 100 pupils had been admitted in Oct., 1903, the majority of whom pay small annual fees. There are also primary schools, where English is taught, at Omdurman (250 pupils), Halfa, and Suakin, and small schools at Berber, Dongola, Wad Medani, Kassala, &c. One of the largest and finest of modern mosques has been built at Khartoum, as that city will be the centre of Mohammedan religion in the Egyptian Sudan. Hotels are being built and wagons-lits run on the Sudan Railway. Tourists can now perform the journey from Cairo to Khartoum in 95 hours in trains and steamers replete with every comfort, and tourist steamers also run from Khartoum to Gondokoro (Uganda), viâ Kodok and the unique "sudd" region.

The territories are divided into 13 provinces. The Sudan Railway reached Khartoum in 1899. There is a line from Atbara to the Red Sea at Port Sudan and Suakin (declared open January, 1906). A branch to the Halfa Khartoum line from Abu Hamed to Kareima to tap the Dongola Province was also opened in 1906. South of Khartoum communication is established by steamers and boats on the Blue and White Niles, Sobat and Bahr-el-Ghazal and inland chiefly by camels and donkeys. Kassala, Gallabat (on Abyssinian frontier), Roseires, Tanfikia (50 miles south of Kodok), and El Obeid are in telegraphic communication with Khartoum.

The cost of military operations in the Sudan in the years 1883–86 amounted to £7,091,310, and on the expedition by which these territories were recovered the sum of £798,802 only was expended, excluding the sum of £215,000 provided in 1897–8 by the Egyptian Government.

The territories are not expected to provide an income equivalent to their cost for some time; long periods of war, famine, and disease have caused great ravages amongst the population, and some years must elapse before a substantial revenue may be expected, the cost of administration being meanwhile partly borne by the Egyptian Government. The population of the territories at the present time is roughly estimated at 2,000,000.

CAPITAL, Khartoum. Population 8,000, consisting of merchants, workmen, &c., and the garrison; the population of Omdurman, with the garrison, is about 48,000, and Khartoum North contains 2,000, the suburbs (11,000) making a total of 69,000. Distance from London viâ Cairo, 4,196 miles.

Chancelier, M. Doyen.

The most westerly State of Central Europe, extending from 42° 20′ to 51° 5′ N. lat., and from 7° 45′ E. to 4° 45′ W. long., bounded on the north by the Channel and Straits of Dover, which separate it from England. Its circumference is estimated at about 3,000 miles, and its present area at 207,218 square miles. The territory lost in 1871 amounted to 5,602 square miles. France is divided into 87 departments, including the island of Corsica, in the Mediterranean, off the west coast of Italy. The head of the Government is the President, elected septennially. The principal rivers are the Seine, Loire, Garonne, and Rhône; the principal forests Ardennes, Compiègne, Fontainebleau, and Orléans, consisting chiefly of oak, birch, pine, beech, elm, chestnut, and the cork-tree in the south. Fruit trees abound, and are very productive, the principal being the olive, chestnut, walnut, almond, apple, pear, citron, fig, plum, &c. The vine is cultivated to a very great extent (1,246,654,288 gallons of wine were produced in 1905), as the names Bordeaux, Burgundy, Champagne, &c., universally testify; cider making is also an important industry, but the crops in 1905 produced only 106,218,046 gallons, as compared with 900,969,630 gallons in the preceding year. The chief agricultural products are wheat, barley, rye, maize, oats, potatoes, beetroot, for the manufacture of sugar, hops, &c. Its mineral resources are comparatively small. They include, however, coal (1904, 33,502,394 metric tons), pig iron (1904, 2,974,000 metric tons), copper, lead, silver, antimony, and salt. The most important manufactures are of metals, watches, jewellery, cabinet-work, carving, pottery, glass, chemicals, dyeing, paper-making, woollens, carpets, linen, silk, and lace. Its oyster fisheries are an important industrial feature, and in the year 1902 produced 1,197,126,229 oysters, representing a value of £711,638. The increase of population is very slow, as will be seen from the following table:—

| Year. | Population. | Year. | Population. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1700 | 19,660,320 | 1872 | 36,102,921 |
| 1801 | 27,349,003 | 1881 | 37,672,048 |
| 1821 | 30,461,875 | 1886 | 38,218,903 |
| 1831 | 32,569,223 | 1891 | 38,343,192 |
| 1841 | 34,230,178 | 1896 | 38,517,975 |
| 1846 | 36,039,364 | 1901 | 38,961,945 |
| 1866 | 38,067,064 | | |

France has always been attractive to foreigners, of whom (1901) 1,037,778 were resident there, or 2·66 per cent. of the legal population; this number included 395,498 Belgians, 291,886 Italians, 90,746 Germans, 36,249 English, 14,230 of the latter residing in the Department of the Seine. There are about 517,000 Frenchmen in the Colonies and in various parts of the world, and a colonial population of (according to the estimates of the French Ministry of Commerce) 31,053,774; but with French protectorates 77,139,000, including France. About 26,000 Frenchmen are resident in England. The comparatively small increase of the population is largely due to immigration from other countries. There has, however, been a preponderance of births over deaths in recent years:—

| | Births. | Deaths. | | Births. | Deaths. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1804 | 855,388 | 815,620 | 1900 | 827,297 | 853,285 |

Defence (for Army, see p. 632).

The Navy consisted in 1906 of 31 battleships (also 4 building and 6 ordered), 8 armoured coast defence vessels, 19 armoured cruisers (and 5 building), 36 protected cruisers, 1 unprotected cruiser, 41 sloops, torpedo vessels, gunboats, training ships, &c., 33 destroyers (also 23 building and 10 ordered), 263 torpedo boats (and 41 building), 39 submarine boats (and 30 building, 20 ordered), with 2,895 officers and 53,277 men.

Education (see pp. 634–5).

Communications.—The system of railways in France is very extensive; they are almost entirely concédés, and become State property after the expiration of the concession. The length of lines of general interest, exclusive of local lines, open for traffic on 31 December, 1905, was 24,500 miles, the total receipts from passenger and goods traffic, &c., being £63,100,000, and the expenses £32,900,000. The number of passengers carried in 1902 was 423,251,784. The length of telegraph wires is 354,874 miles. At the 1st of January, 1905, the mercantile marine, comprising vessels of 2 tons and upwards, amounted to 16,514 vessels of 1,349,327 net tons (of which 15,057 were sailing ships, representing 653,268 net tons). The sums voted by Parliament for construction and navigation Bounties to Shipping in 1906 amounted to £1,441,200, and £1,036,030 for Postal Service Subventions.

Commerce.—The principal imports in 1905 were wool, wines, silk, coffee, cotton, coal, oleaginous fruits and seeds, cereals, timber, machinery, silk tissues, minerals, cod and other fishing products, sugar, nitrate of soda, and products from tar. The exports rank thus:—Woollen tissues, silk tissues, wines, wool, cotton tissues, smallwares, tools and other metal goods, dressed skins, skin and leather goods, millinery, machinery, butter, raw skins, &c., ladies' garments, brandy and spirits, raw and refined sugars, and table fruits.

The trade in 1905 (provisional returns) was shared as under:—

Shipping.—During the year 1905 the total number of French and foreign vessels entering French ports with cargo amounted to 24,839, representing a tonnage of 19,322,077 tons, of which only 25·65 per cent. was French, while the total clearings with cargo amounted to 21,409 ships of a tonnage of 14,904,130 tons, of which 31·57 per cent. was French. In 1904 British tonnage entering amounted to 35·34 per cent. against 31·30 clearing.

Debt.—The National Debt is stupendous, the nominal capital of the Funded Debt amounting in 1905 to £1,163,770,606 (the total of the Floating Debt being £74,738,093), the heaviest debt ever yet incurred by any nation in the world. The Public Debt of France in 1870 amounted to £511,840,000.

The Interest on the Funded Debt paid in 1905 and 1906 was as follows :—

| | 1905. | 1906. |

Algeria.—The three departments of Algeria—Algiers, Oran, and Constantine—form an integral part of France, under a Governor-General, assisted by a Consultative Council. These departments lie between 4° 36′ W. to 6° 16′ E. longitude, 37° 6′ N. to an undetermined S. limit, about 30° N., covering an area estimated at about 184,898 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 4,739,331, of whom 364,257 were French and 4,375,074 Arabs and other nationalities. The revenue in 1904 was estimated at £2,603,901, and the expenditure at £2,602,122, the imports in 1903 were valued at £13,724,801 (from France, £11,466,240, and from foreign countries, £2,258,561), and the exports at £12,515,744 (to France, £10,510,680, and to foreign countries, £2,005,064). The exports consist mainly of wine, wheat and other cereals, sheep and oxen, skins, fruits, zinc and iron ores, olive oil, phosphates, cork wood, esparto grass, manufactured tobacco, and vegetables. Iron, copper, quicksilver, zinc, and lead mines are being worked. The value of the exports of phosphates, in 1903, amounted to £268,908; being principally to the United Kingdom. In 1904 there were about 1,912 miles of railway open for traffic, and in that year the number of ships entering and leaving Algerian ports was 8,266, of a tonnage of 6,718,441 tons. The principal town is Algiers, the capital (pop., 1900, about 120,000), a most important coaling station and much frequented as a health resort; other large towns are Oran, Constantine, Bône, and Tlemçen.

Geographically, the French Colonies are divisible into four main groups, according to their situation in Asia, Africa, America, Oceania.

I. Asiatic: French India.—The area of the French possessions in India is 193 square miles; population (1901), 273,185; (1891, 282,923). Pondicherry (area 115 sq. miles, pop. 174,456), the chief of these dependencies, is on the Coromandel coast, 85 miles S. by W. from Madras. The town of Pondicherry has 45,583 inhabitants. The fortifications were once strong, but in the war with England they were destroyed, and under the Treaty of Paris they must not be rebuilt, while the French garrison must be only sufficient for police purposes. Rice, oilseeds, pulse, and cotton are cultivated. The chief industry is cotton spinning. There are five cotton-mills, employing about 7,460 hands. In 1904-5 the imports into French possessions were valued at £114,000, and the exports at £947,000. The chief exports are ground nuts, cotton goods, and rice; the imports consist principally of raw cotton, cotton tissues, wood, seeds, and oils. There is no harbour, though the roadstead is as good as any along this coast. The minor settlements are Chandernagore, on the Hoogly, 17 miles north of Calcutta (area 4 sq. miles, pop. 26,831); Karikal, in the Cauvery delta (area 53 sq. miles, pop. 56,595); Yanaon, in the Godavery delta (area 5 sq. miles, pop. 5,005); and Mahé, on the Malabar coast (area 26 sq. miles, pop. 10,298). There are 23 miles of railway in French territory, 8 to connect Pondicherry and 15 to connect Karikal with the South Indian Railway. The revenue is about £100,000, of which £20,000 is a contribution from France, besides a subvention of £2,600 for the upkeep of a corps of Sepoys. Governor, M. Angouivant.

French Indo-China.—These possessions have an area of about 270,000 square miles and a population of about 18,708,000. They extend northwards to 25° 20′, and march with China as far as the river Mekong, which forms the western boundary along almost the whole length of French Indo-China. They comprise Cochin-China, and the four protectorates of Cambodia, Annam, Tonkin, and Laos. In 1898-9 Kwang-Chow-Wan (pop. 190,000), a free port on the Lien-Chow peninsula, was acquired on a lease of 99 years from China. French Indo-China has been rapidly developed since 1893 by public works, by the influx of capital and enterprise, and by the reorganisation of the finances. The financial and political unity of Indo-China was finally established in 1898. These reforms were chiefly the work of the late Governor-General, M. Paul Doumer. The revenue is about £3,200,000. Since 1899 the colony has been self-supporting, and taxation is not very high. The revenue is derived mainly from customs, excise, and other indirect taxes. A loan of 200 million francs was easily raised in France for railways. The deltas of Cochin-China and Tonkin are fertile. Annam, connecting them, is a long mountainous tract, with a narrow littoral, habitable and cultivable, on one side, and a wild, sparsely populated hill-tract stretching to the Mekong on the other. Laos is practically inaccessible except by this river. Rice, silk, cotton, sugar, poppy, tea, seeds, tobacco, pepper, and fish are the principal productions of Indo-China. The chief mineral product is coal, which is mined at Hongay on the Tonkin coast. Other minerals are said to exist. Cotton yarn, cement, &c., are manufactured. The principal harbours are Saigon, Haiphong in Tonkin, and Tourane in Annam. Haiphong is 48 hours by mail steamer from Hong Kong. The chief rivers are the Mekong (1,900 miles long), which, notwithstanding obstructions, has been navigated as far as Chinese territory, though it is not likely to become an important commercial route; the Songkoi or Red River, which is navigable by small steamers as far as Laokai in Yunnan; and the Black River. There are railways from Haiphong to Hanoi, and thence to Langson (160 miles) on the border of Kwangsi, China, and to Laokai (240 miles) on the Yunnan frontier, completed in 1906; Hanoi to Vinh (204 miles); Saigon to Mytho (44 miles), &c. The Laokai line is being extended to Yunnan-fu (about 298 miles) by a subsidised company. Other lines are projected or under construction. The foreign trade in merchandise in 1905 was valued at—Imports, £8,958,000; and Exports, £5,526,000, in addition to a transit trade of £1,225,000, which goes mainly through Mengtsz, a treaty "port" in Yunnan, opened in 1889. A large part of this transit trade is in British and Indian goods. Much of the Indo-China trade goes or comes vià Hong Kong. By far the largest export is rice, £2,780,000 in 1905 (chiefly from Cochin-China), fish and pepper coming next. The chief imports are metal manufactures, cotton tissues and yarns, jute bags, liquors, machinery, petroleum, paper, opium, &c. The yarns and jute bags are mainly Indian. The French customs tariff is in force, with some exceptions. About half the trade is with France and French colonies, and most of the rest with China and India. The shipping is chiefly French, British, and German. The French Army of occupation numbers about 8,000, in addition to 35,000 native troops. There is a Bank of Indo-China. Exports from the United Kingdom in 1905, £66,855; Imports into ditto, £137,316. Capital, Hanoi, in Tonkin. Pop., 100,000. Gov.-Gen. of Indo-China—M. Beau. Sec.-Gen.—M. Bulloche. Regent—Hoang-lao-Khai. Résident-Supérieur—M. Broni. H.B.M.'s Consul—T. F. Carlisle. Capital of Cochin-China, Saigon. Pop., 19,200. Lieut.-Gov. of Cochin-China—M. Rodier. H.B.M.'s Vice-Consul—J. L. O'Connell. Capital of Cambodia, Pnom Penh. Pop., 40,000. King—H.M. Sisowath. Résident-Supérieur—M. de Lamothe. Capital of Annam, Hué. Pop. 30,000. King—H.M. Thau-Thai (declared insane in Oct. 1906). Résident-Supérieur—M. Auvergne. Capital of Laos, Luang Prabang. Résident-Supérieur, Lt.-Col. Tournier.

II. African: The French African Empire consists of the colony of Algeria and the protectorate of Tunis in the north; in the north-west of an immense tract of country, in four main divisions, on the coast-line (Senegal, French Guinea, Ivory Coast, and Dahomey), penetrating inwards to meet the French possessions of Upper Senegal-Niger and Territory of Mauritania, which form a hinterland for all the colonies on the coast. In West Central Africa the French Congo joins, through protected territory, the French possessions which form the common hinterland of the north-western possessions. This common hinterland stretches northwards in the direction of Algeria and Tunis, so that the whole north-western portion of the vast continent, except where occupied by Morocco and Tripoli, and Spanish, Portuguese, British, and German possessions, is claimed by France. In the east France possesses a portion of Somaliland and the island of Madagascar in the Indian Ocean, with certain dependencies. Conventions have been signed by Great Britain and France delimitating the boundaries of co-terminous territories in the west, and, owing to the British advance in the Nile region, delimitating their respective spheres in East and Central Africa.

On the East Coast is JIBUTI, the port and seat of government of the French Somali coast protectorate. The coast-line of this territory extends for 60 miles; the inland frontier is fixed at a distance of about 57 miles. The population is about 50,000. A railway from Jibuti to Harrar and thence to Adis Abeba, the present capital of Abyssinia, is being constructed, and in 1904 was completed as far as Diré-Daouah (315 miles). At Jibuti a jetty, 800 metres in length, has been erected and is used principally by small craft, and a second one of 900 metres in length is being constructed for the requirements of large vessels. The imports (chiefly cotton goods) amounted to £506,650 in 1904, while the exports amounted to £659,000; the imports from France in 1904 amounting to £111,300, and the exports to France only £21,000. There is an Anglo-French agreement defining the boundary of the French and English spheres of influence in the direction of Harrar, which place neither party is at liberty to annex.

Governor—M. Bonhoure; Envoy to the Emperor Menelik of Ethiopia, M. Lagarde.

Off the East coast, in the Indian Ocean, is the vast island of MADAGASCAR, the fourth largest island in the world, being 975 miles long and 350 miles broad at its greatest width. The total area is about 230,000 square miles, and the native population is estimated at 4,000,000 and from 5,000 to 6,000 French, the rest being chiefly British subjects, the Hova being the dominant tribe. Christian missions have been active in the island, and about 450,000 of the natives are Protestants, and about 50,000 Roman Catholics. A French colonial station was planted, under the protection of Richelieu, in 1662, since when the island has been almost continuously claimed by the French. Active steps were taken in 1885 to make their influence felt, and in 1894–1895 a military expedition captured the capital and deposed the queen, the island being declared a French possession in 1896. A railway between Tamatave on the coast and the capital (Antananarivo or Tananarive) is in course of construction; 64 miles were being worked in 1905, the first 19 miles of which were opened in Oct., 1902; and in 1900 a loan of £2,400,000 was raised for the construction of railways, roads, telegraphs, &c. Gold reefs have been found in different parts of the island, and up to the end of 1904 there were 1,099 prospecting permits held by 317 different persons, 64 of which are British.

Minerals are found in large quantities, and in the lowlands rice, manioc, arrowroot, sugar-cane, tobacco, hemp, cotton, vanilla, tea and coffee are successfully grown; caoutchouc and gum-copal are indigenous, and there is a wealth of timber. The revenue of the colony in 1904 amounted to £994,612, and the expenditure to £897,357. The exports (£770,000 in 1904) are gold (3,035,000 grammes, of the value of £307,718), cattle, rubber, hides, rafia-fibre, bullocks, beeswax, gum-copal, sugar, vanilla, coffee, rice, and lamba manufactures; the imports, largely reduced since the high protective tariff of 1897, are mainly cotton goods, wine, spirits, food-stuffs, metal manufactures, and building material, and amounted to £1,056,800 in 1904, of which France supplied £875,000. The trade with the United Kingdom was valued at £25,300 for imports into the island, and consisted chiefly of coals, bread-stuffs, metal-work, and tissues; and at £29,000 for exports, in 1904. The capital, Tananarive (called by the natives Antananarivo), had in 1901 55,579 inhabitants. Tamatave is the chief port, others being Majunga, Tolia, Farafofay, Mananjura, Mahanoro, and Vatomandry. Madagascar has immediate dependencies in the islands of NOSSI BÉ and SAINTE MARIE, while further east (450 miles from Madagascar) is the island of RÉUNION (capital St. Denis, area about 1,000 square miles, population estimated at 173,192); imports in 1904, £772,000; exports, £543,300; with the COMORO Islands, halfway between Madagascar and the coast, and the islands of ST. PAUL and AMSTERDAM and KERGUELEN to the south-east.

Gov.-Gen. of Madagascar, M. Augagneur.

West Africa.—The administration of the French possessions in North-West Africa (exclusive of the French Congo), which has been in process of reorganisation since 1895, was completed and consolidated by a Decree of 18 October, 1904. The territories of Senegambia and the Niger have been converted into a separate colony under the name of Upper Senegal-Niger, and a commissioner attached to the general government has been appointed for the administration of the civil territory of Mauritania, or vast regions on the right bank of the Senegal River, and which will probably be eventually extended to the French possessions in South Algeria. A general budget has been created, to be settled by the governor-general in council, to which are devoted the funds derived from the customs and navigation duties of all the constituent colonies, and which provides for all expenses which interest all the colonies generally. The several colonies, therefore, can only reckon on the funds arising from their internal resources, such as capitation tax, trading licences, etc., but they are at the same time relieved of many expenses which have been transferred to the general budget. Provision is also made in the general budget for subventions to those of the colonies requiring financial help. The colony of UPPER SENEGAL-NIGER may be said to comprise the whole of the hinterland of West Africa, and includes the great bend of the Niger and the territories enclosed within it, but it has no seaport. It is divided into a civil and a military territory, and is administered by a lieutenant-governor, resident at Bammako, under whom is a superior officer entrusted with the administration of the Niger military territory. SENEGAL is the oldest and most important of the French possessions in West Africa. It is situated to the north of the British colony of the Gambia, and has an area of about 806,000 square miles and a population estimated at 1,130,000, 200,000 of which are placed directly under the French administration; capital, St. Louis (local budget in 1903, £208,378). The principal exports are gold, ground-nuts, gum, palm nuts and oil, and rubber. The exports from Senegal and Upper Senegal-Niger in 1904 were valued at £1,996,833, and the imports at £1,993,867; 554 ships (tonnage 644,424) entered, and 558 of a tonnage of 636,835 tons cleared at Senegalese ports in 1904. A railway has been constructed from Dakar to Rufisque, and thence north-west to St. Louis at the mouth of the Senegal River, a distance of 177 miles, and from Kayes, on the same river, a narrow-gauge line has been constructed to Koulikoro, on the Niger. Next in order to the south, comes FRENCH GUINEA (local budget in 1903, £160,000; imports, 1904, £593,000, exports £547,000), comprising the settlements of RIVIÈRES DU SUD (capital, Konakri) and FUTA JALLON, and extending up the whole of the north-west coast (save where intercepted by Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of the Gambia) to join the colony of Senegal. Between the British colony of the Gold Coast and the Republic of Liberia is the FRENCH IVORY COAST (local budget in 1904, £103,460; imports £623,335, exports, 1904, £304,530), comprising the settlements of GRAND BASSAM and ASSINIE and the KROO country with the hinterland. To the south is DAHOMEY, between the British colony of Lagos and German Togoland (local budget in 1903, £150,663; imports, 1904, £427,249, exports £446,240); it consists of about 95 miles of the Benin coast, where are the settlements of KOTONOU and GRAND POPO with the hinterland. The ancient capital of the colony is Abomey, which has now been transferred to Porto Novo. The chief port is Kotonou. The FRENCH CONGO borders the Congo Free State on the south and east, and the German Cameroons on the north and west, but undefined to the north-east, comprises the colony of the Gaboon, the middle Congo, the territory of Ubangui-Shari, and the Lake Chad territory (local budget in 1903, £111,736). The principal exports are ivory, india-rubber, cocoa, coffee, ebony and other wood, gum-copal, palm oil, and amounted in 1904 to £397,529. The imports, consisting chiefly of cotton goods, spirits, ammunition, tobacco, rice, and salt, were valued at £485,420; the chief town and trading station being Libreville, on the coast.

III. American: France possesses two small groups of islands off the south-east coast of Newfoundland, of which ST. PIERRE and MIQUELON are the largest respectively; their combined area is about 95 square miles, with a total population of about 6,352, and they form an excellent basis for the French cod fishery. Local budget in 1903, £25,283; importations in 1904, £249,227; exports, £306,415. In the West Indies two of the most fertile of the Lesser Antilles belong to France, viz., MARTINIQUE (capital Port de France), area about 381 square miles; population, 189,599; (local budget in 1903, £191,975; total imports, 1904, £618,788, exports £527,051); and GUADALOUPE and BASSE TERRE (capital Pointe-à-Pitre), area about 687 square miles, population 182,112 in 1902 (local budget in 1903, £227,729; total imports, 1904, £530,415, exports £517,325). They have six dependencies: MARIE GALANTE and ILE DES SAINTES to the south and south-east, and PETITE TERRE on the east (part of the administrative island), with ST. BARTHOLOMEW and the northern half of ST. MARTIN, about 150 miles north-west and almost due south of Anguilla (British). In South America, CAYENNE or FRENCH GUIANA has an area of about 27,027 square miles, and an estimated population of about 26,000 (town population 12,000). The local budget of the colony in 1903 amounted to £125,658 (imports, 1904, £517,325, exports £426,125).

IV. In Oceania: France possesses the penal colony of NEW CALEDONIA (capital Noumea), a large island containing an area of 4,618 square miles (white population, 1904, 23,000, of whom about 12,500 are of free and 10,500 of convict origin), with its dependencies, Isle of Pines, Loyalty Islands, Huon Islands, Chesterfield Islands, and the Wallis Archipelago, annexed in 1853 (local budget in 1903, £299,691; total imports from New Caledonia, 1904, £499,145, exports £441,650); and the SOCIETY ISLANDS, Tahiti, Moorea, &c. (local budget in 1903, £52,066; imports into Tahiti, 1904, £128,795, exports £142,528), the LOW ARCHIPELAGO or Tuamotu, the MARQUESAS, and the AUSTRAL ISLES or Tubuai, and the GAMBIER ISLANDS, altogether amounting to about 1,400 square miles, with about 20,000 inhabitants. CLIPPERTON in the N. Pacific is an isolated and desolate possession of about two square miles. By a convention with Great Britain of 24 Oct., 1887, it was agreed that the protection of persons and property in the NEW HEBRIDES (5,106 square miles, population 70,000), should be secured by means of a mixed commission of naval officers belonging to the French and British naval stations in the Pacific.

The Empire, according to the Constitution of April 16, 1871, is a Confederate League, bearing the name German Empire, under the hereditary presidentship of the King of Prussia, who holds the title of German Emperor, and whose eldest son is styled His Imperial and Royal Highness. The Emperor as such represents the Empire in all matters affecting international law; in the name of the Empire he declares war and makes peace; concludes alliances and treaties with foreign States, and accredits and receives Ambassadors. Except to repel an attack on the territory or the coasts of the League, the Emperor cannot declare war in the name of the Empire without the consent of the Federal Council. The consent of the Federal Council and Reichstag is necessary in regard to certain specified treaties (cf. Art. 4 of the Constitution). The Emperor has the right to summon, open, adjourn, and close the Reichstag. The Federal Council and Reichstag must be summoned to meet every year; the Reichstag cannot be summoned without the adherence of the Federal Council. All bills are brought before the Reichstag in the name of the Emperor after acceptance by the Federal Council. Laws are promulgated by the Emperor in the name of the German Empire after acceptance by the Federal Council and the Reichstag. All edicts and orders of the Emperor made in the name of the Empire must be countersigned by the Chancellor, who is thereby responsible for them. The Emperor is the Bundesfeldherr, or Federal Commander-in-Chief of the whole German Army. In time of war he holds supreme command: in time of peace the Kings of Bavaria, Saxony, and Württemberg retain their sovereign rights as heads of their respective armies. In time of peace the Bavarian army administration is wholly independent of that of the rest of the German army, and only falls under the direct command of the Emperor when the army is mobilised for war. The rights of the Kings of Saxony and Württemberg in time of peace are not quite so extended as those of the King of Bavaria; but their armies remain distinct and form separate army corps. The contingents of all the other Federal States are under the direct command of the King of Prussia, and under Prussian administration. The troops of all the Federal States swear loyalty to their respective sovereigns and obedience to the orders of the Emperor—in the case of Bavaria this obedience is limited to war-time. On the other hand, the German Navy is Imperial (Kaiserlich), and the Emperor as such is the supreme Admiral-in-Command of the Imperial German Navy in peace as well as war. The Reichstag, or Imperial Diet, consists of 397 Deputies; the original idea was that there should be one deputy to every 100,000 inhabitants of the Empire. The Reichstag sits for a period of five years, unless previously dissolved by the Emperor. Amongst the matters belonging to the jurisdiction of the Empire are all those that refer to the army and navy; the common, civil and penal law of the Empire; posts and telegraphs (not including the special rights reserved by Bavaria and Württemberg); the railways (subject to Bavaria's rights); inland navigation; the Customs of the Empire; weights and measures; coinage; banking; patents; foreign trade; the German mercantile marine; the Press; everything relating to the right of forming corporations; colonisation. A majority of the Federal Council and Reichstag is necessary, and also sufficient, for the validity of a law. The laws of the Empire take precedence of the laws of the Confederate States within the scope of the Constitution of the Empire; they are compulsory on all Governments of the Empire.

The German Empire consists of the following 26 States:—Prussia (including Heligoland since 1890); Bavaria; Saxony; Württemberg; Baden; Hesse; Mecklenburg-Schwerin; Mecklenburg-Strelitz; Saxe-Weimar; Oldenburg; Brunswick; Saxe-Altenburg; Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; Anhalt; Schwarzburg-Sondershausen; Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt; Waldeck; Reuss (elder line); Reuss (younger line); Schaumburg-Lippe; Lippe; Reichsland; Lübeck; Bremen; Hamburg.

The census of 1905 shows a total population of 60,605,183, of whom 29,868,096 are males, and 30,737,087 females (according to figures provisionally published).

The religious confessions were divided in 1900 as follows:—35,231,104 Protestants (62·5 per cent.), 20,327,913 Roman Catholics (36·1 per cent.), 203,793 Christians of other categories, 586,833 Jews (1 per cent.), 17,535 adherents of other religions, or unknown. Only the figures for Prussia for 1905 are so far attainable; cf. infra.

There were in 1900 4,231,129 persons residing within the limits of the Empire who spoke a non-German language, viz.:—80,361 Dutch, 20,677 Frisians, 141,061 Danish (and Norwegians), 8,998 Swedish, 20,217 English, 211,679 French, 11,841 Walloons, 65,961 Italians, 2,059 Spanish, 479 Portuguese, 3,086,489 Poles, 142,049 Massurians, 100,213 Kassubians, 93,032 Wends, 64,382 Moravians, 43,016 Tzechs, 9,617 Russians, 106,305 Lithuanians, 8,158 Hungarians, 14,535 not above specified.

There are 41 large towns with over 100,000 inhabitants, and of these 28 are in Prussia, 4 in Saxony, 2 in Bavaria and Baden, and 1 each in Hamburg, Württemberg, Bremen, Reichsland, and Brunswick.

Education (see p. 635).

EMIGRATION.—At the commencement of the nineteenth century few Germans emigrated, but about fifty years afterwards there was a strong desire to leave the mother country. The figures are as follows:—

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1831–41 | ... | 152,000 | 1871–80 | ... | 623,000 |
| 1841–50 | ... | 435,000 | 1881–90 | ... | 1,342,432 |
| 1851–60 | ... | 952,000 | 1891–00 | ... | 529,875 |
| 1861–70 | ... | 822,000 | 1901–05 | ... | 146,540 |

Out of thirty millions of emigrants from Europe in the nineteenth century Germany contributed about five millions—viz., ⅙ of the whole number.

In the eighties the average number per annum was over 100,000. In 1880 the number of emigrants was 117,097; in 1881 it rose to 220,902—the highest figure hitherto attained in one year. The statistics since 1880 are as follows:—

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1881 | ... | 220,902 | 1894 | ... | 40,964 |
| 1882 | ... | 203,585 | 1895 | ... | 37,498 |
| 1883 | ... | 173,616 | 1896 | ... | 33,824 |
| 1884 | ... | 149,065 | 1897 | ... | 24,631 |
| 1885 | ... | 110,119 | 1898 | ... | 22,221 |
| 1886 | ... | 83,225 | 1899 | ... | 24,323 |
| 1887 | ... | 104,787 | 1900 | ... | 22,309 |
| 1888 | ... | 103,951 | 1901 | ... | 22,073 |
| 1889 | ... | 96,070 | 1902 | ... | 32,098 |
| 1890 | ... | 77,103 | 1903 | ... | 36,310 |
| 1891 | ... | 120,089 | 1904 | ... | 27,984 |
| 1892 | ... | 116,339 | 1905 | ... | 28,075 |
| 1893 | ... | 87,677 | | | |

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.—Germany is becoming more and more a manufacturing country. In 1895, 34·9 per cent. of the population were supported by agriculture, 3·6 per cent. by mining, 35·5 per cent. by industries, 11·6 per cent. by trade and traffic. Of the total area in 1900, 48·6 per cent. was under cultivation, 16 per cent. consisted of meadows and pastures, and 26 per cent. of forest land. Germany supports nine-tenths of her population by her own produce. The mineral produce was valued in 1904 at £66,754,233, and included 118,658,080 English tons of coal, 47,766,616 of lignite, 21,653,643 of iron ore, 4,012,445 of kali, kainit, and other kali salts. The total mineral produce amounted to 197,020,900 English tons, including, besides the above, rock-salt, lead-ore, gold and silver ore, graphite, asphalt, petroleum, Epsom-salts, boracite, tin-ore, quicksilver-ore, antimony-ore, cobalt-ore, nickel-ore, arsenic-ore, manganese-ore, bismuth-ore, uranium-ore, wolfram-ore, pyrites, vitriolic-ore, and alum-ore. Crefeld, Elberfeld-Barmen, Mühlhausen, Chemnitz, and the provinces of Westphalia and Silesia are the great centres of the textile industries.

The chief articles of export to the United Kingdom in the year 1905 were the following (£1 = Mks. 20.43):—

|---|---|
| Sugar, refined and unrefined | £6,857,000 |
| Woollen Unprinted Cloth Stuffs | 1,972,000 |
| Half-Silk Stuffs, Scarves, and Shawls | 1,585,000 |
| Coloured Prints, Engravings, &c. | 1,218,000 |
| Billot Iron, Pig Iron, Ingots | 1,190,000 |
| Women's Clothing of Cotton, Linen, Wool | 1,190,000 |
| Hides | 1,135,000 |
| Cotton Embroideries | 1,112,000 |
| Cotton Lace | 1,081,000 |
| Toys | 988,700 |
| Glove Leather, Manufactured Leather | 905,500 |
| Aniline and other Coal-Tar Stuffs | 886,000 |
| Machines and Parts of Machines, exclusive of locomotives, sewing machines, &c. | 820,500 |
| Fine Iron Goods | 773,300 |
| Cotton Stockings | 768,000 |
| Common Iron Goods | 660,800 |
| Pianos | 651,000 |
| Cotton Gloves | 597,500 |

The chief articles of import were:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Coal | £5,310,000 |
| Woollen Yarn | 3,973,000 |
| Cotton Yarn | 2,770,000 |
| Wheat | 2,451,000 |
| Hides | 2,163,000 |
| India-rubber and Gutta-percha | 1,840,000 |
| Salted Herrings | 1,160,000 |
| Raw Silver | 955,400 |
| Combed Wool | 895,700 |
| Machines and Parts of Machines, exclusive of locomotives and sewing machines | 822,230 |
| Fresh Fish (of which Herrings £465,000) | 572,700 |

MERCANTILE MARINE.—The Mercantile Marine consisted in 1905-6 of 1,273 steamers of 100 tons and upwards (3,033,333 tons gross register), and of 955 sailing vessels of 50 tons and upwards (492,411 tons net register). The gross tonnage of the British Mercantile Marine is about five times as great as that of the German Mercantile Marine.

The number of seamen in the German Mercantile Marine on January 1st, 1905, was 60,616. Germany now ranks second in the list of the countries of the world that own shipping. In 1870 Germany's fleet of merchant steamers was only half as large as that of France; now it is twice as large. The year 1905 realised the expectations as regards an improvement in the shipbuilding trade. There were built in 1905: 321 steamers, 259,243 tons gross (1904, 278 steamers, 210,999 tons gross), and 325 sailing vessels, 51,528 tons net (1904, 256 sailing vessels, 49,712 tons net).

COMMUNICATIONS.—The total length of the Railways in the Empire at the end of 1904 extended to 53,822 kilometres = 33,423 miles, of which about 91 per cent. belong to the State; the total cost of construction was £20,766 per mile; the expenses in 1904 were £70,141,948, and the receipts £110,964,268.

IMPERIAL POST (including Bavaria and Württemberg), 1904:—Length of telegraph lines, 88,244 miles (length of wires, 331,670 miles); telegrams handed in, 39,235,000; post offices, 38,658; telegraph offices, 29,978; telephone call-stations, 22,972; letters delivered, 4,232,000,000; cash on delivery orders, £37,219,775; money orders, £521,585,707; telegrams despatched, 39,235,000; telegrams received, 40,223,000. The number of employés in the service of posts and telegraphs was 261,985.

DEBT.—The National Debt amounted at the end of 1905 to £162,677,400, of which £60,695,000 bears interest at 3½ per cent., £87,298,100 at 3 per cent., £8,870,600 are Treasury Bonds, and £5,873,700 are Bank Notes. The debt of the former Norddeutscher Bund was cancelled by limitation at the end of 1902. (£1 = Mks. 20.43.)

DEFENCE (for Army, see p. 632).—The Imperial Navy consisted at the end of 1906 of the following ships, built or building: 29 Battleships, 8 ironclad Coast Defence ships, i.e., 37 Battleships (1st, 2nd and 3rd class, according to British classification), 15 large Cruisers (9 armoured, 6 protected), 37 small Cruisers, 10 Gunboats, 68 large Torpedo Boats (mostly equal in size, but not in armament, to British Destroyers), 72 small Torpedo Boats—47 up to date, the others of various sizes, many of them only useful for training purposes; a number of special ships and gunboats of no great fighting value on the high seas. The personnel of the Imperial Navy consists of: 1,700 officers, 269 engineer officers, 221 surgeons, 180 paymasters, 1,883 warrant officers, 8,985 petty officers, 29,316 seamen, 1,100 ships' boys—total, 43,654.

OLD AGE AND INFIRMITY INSURANCE.—The German scheme of social legislation gives all subordinate bread winners in the Empire a legal right to pecuniary subvention when unfitted for work through sickness, accident, premature infirmity, or old age. Insurance is compulsory. The National Insurance is based on mutual insurance and self-administration. The Infirmity Insurance Act came into force 1 January, 1900. From 1891–1902 inclusive, £17,524,509 were given as pensions to invalids (i.e., persons unfit for work); £14,387,255 as old age pensions; £1,627,451 for the cure of patients; whilst £1,774,510 were refunded—total, £35,313,725. In 1904, the pensions to workmen unfit to work amounted to £5,156,446; old age pensions, £1,021,449; contributions for cure of patients, £533,940; refunded, £384,690. Including other expenditure, there was a total outlay of £7,261,665, of which the State contributed £2,256,130. The insured are divided into five classes, according to the amount of their annual earnings, of £17 10*s.*, £27 10*s.*, £47 10*s.*, £57 10*s.*, and £100 respectively. Contributions are paid weekly, viz., 1·45*d.*, 2·34*d.*, 2·82*d.*, 3·30*d.*, and 4·23*d.* respectively—one half by the employer, the other by the employed: the State contributes a subsidy of £2 10*s.* to the pension. The infirmity pensions amount respectively (including the State subsidy) to £8 2*s.*, £11 5*s.*, £13 10*s.*, £15 15*s.*, and £18; the old age pensions to £5 10*s.*, £7, £8 10*s.*, £10, and £11 10*s.* respectively. The insured include all persons working for wages or salary as workpeople, artisans, journeymen, apprentices, domestic servants, laundresses, dressmakers, sempstresses, housekeepers, charwomen; overseers, foremen, engineers, assistants, clerks and apprentices in merchants' offices (excepting assistants and apprentices in chemists' shops), schoolmasters, schoolmistresses, tutors and governesses—in so far as the incomes do not exceed £100—including foreigners working in Germany under these categories. Pensions for premature infirmity are given to insured persons when unfit for work; old age pensions to all insured persons on attaining the age of 70, though still capable of work.

The imports from the U.K. and the British Colonies formed 17·92 of Germany's total imports in 1905 (1904, 21·87); the exports to the U.K. and the British Colonies formed 21·65 of Germany's total exports for 1905 (1904, 22·38). The imports from the U.K. and the British Colonies to Germany were in 1905 over £8,250,000 less than in 1904; whilst the exports from Germany to the U.K. and the British Colonies show an increase in value of about £3,700,000 in 1905 as compared with 1904. The imports from Russia and the United States of America to Germany far exceeded those from the U.K. in 1905; whilst the exports to the U.K. further increased—the U.K. thus remaining by a long way Germany's best customer.

The Imperial War Treasure deposited in the Julius Tower at Spandau amounts to £5,873,715.

Prussia possesses a large number of navigable rivers intersecting the country–viz., the Niemen, Pregel, Vistula, Oder, Elbe, Weser, and Rhine. The coasts of the Baltic and North Seas form a number of gulfs and bays. Its principal mountains are the Harz and the Giant Mountains, the latter reaching an altitude of 5,255 feet. The forests are extensive,occupying an area of nearly 20,435,491 acres, chiefly consisting of fir. Minerals consist of iron, copper, lead, alum, nitre, zinc, cobalt, sulphur, nickel, arsenic, baryta, amber, agate, jasper, onyx, &c., and, to a small extent, silver. Salt (from the brine springs of Prussian Saxony) is abundant, also coal. Metallic ores, salt, precious stones belong partially, and amber totally, to the Crown. Agriculture and the rearing of cattle are the principal industries. Wheat, rye, oats, barley, peas, millet, rape-seed, maize, linseed,flax,hemp, tobacco, hops, &c., are extensively cultivated and are exported. Its manufactures consist chiefly of cotton goods, machines of all kinds. The cotton works are extensive, and there are numerous manufactories of silk, woollen, mixed cotton and linen fabrics, including shawls, carpets, &c., and woollens, with leather, earthenware, glass, paper, and tobacco manufactures, and working in metals. Brewing is a business of great importance. The principal imports comprise coffee, tea, cotton, and other produce of the colonies ; wines, silk, fruit, manufactured goods, tin, furs, and dye-stuffs. The principal exports comprise linens, woollens, hardware, wool, timber, pitch, linseed, tobacco, mineral waters ; to which may be added horses, horned cattle, hams, salt meat, and wine from the Rhenish provinces.

THE FREIEN AND HANSE TOWNS.

The Free Hanse Towns comprise the three cities of Hamburg, Bremen, and Lübeck, each with a small rural territory, retaining their sovereignty and local self-government, like the other States of the Empire, and are situated in the North of Germany, on the Elbe, Weser, and Trave respectively. Hamburg is the great emporium of Germany, and is 65 miles from Cuxhaven, to which port it is connected by railway. Bremen is much smaller, but very prosperous, and only second in commercial importance to Hamburg. It is connected by railway with the outport of Bremerhaven, 35 miles distant, and carries on a very extensive American trade. Lübeck is situate near the Baltic, and is connected with the Elbe by the Elbe-Trave Canal; its commerce is principally with Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Russia.

GERMAN COLONIES.

The German Colonies have a total area of 2,658,449 sq. kils. = 1,028,181 sq. miles, and had (1905) a population of a little over 13,000,000, of whom, before the war in South-West Africa broke out, 13,891 were whites. Of these whites about 6,299 were Germans—312 were German officers, 4,232 non-commissioned officers and men; total, 4,544.

AFRICA.—Togoland: Area, 87,200 sq. kils. = 33,659 sq. miles; population about 1,500,000. Capital, Lome. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £148,360, of which Imperial loan, £58,737; expenditure, £148,360. 1904: Imports, £337,640; exports, £173,813.—Cameroon: Area, 495,000 sq. kils. = 191,074 sq. miles; population, 3,500,000. Capital, Duala. Budget for 1906: Receipts, £267,205, of which State aid, £126,578; expenditure, £267,205. 1904: Imports, £458,933; exports, £392,609.—German South-West Africa: Area, 835,100 sq. kils. = 322,348 sq. miles; population, 200,000 before the war. Capital, Windhoek. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £4,513,607; expenditure, £4,513,607. State aid, £4,421,390. 1904: Imports, no return; exports, no return.—German East Africa: Area, 995,000 sq. kils. = 384,079 sq. miles; population, 7,000,000. Capital, Dar-es-Salaam. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £520,117, of which State aid, £292,120; expenditure, £520,117. 1904: Imports, £701,860; exports, £438,181. — German Australia, under which name are now included New Guinea, Kaiser Wilhelm Land, Bismarck Archipelago, Solomon Islands, Marshall Islands, Caroline, Pelew, and Ladrone (Marianne Islands). Total area, 482,481 sq. kils. = 186,249 sq. miles; population, 656,000. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £104,454, including State aid, £81,596; expenditure, £104,454. 1904: Imports, £170,288; exports, £113,901.—Samoa: Area, 2,588 sq. kils. = 1,003 sq. miles; population, 33,000. Capital, Apia. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £35,193, of which £11,404 State aid; expenditure, £35,193. 1904: Imports, £113,411; exports, £81,987.—Kiao-Chao: Leased for a period of 99 years from China in 1898. Area, 501 sq. kils. = 193 sq. miles; population (in leased territory), 33,000; in sphere of interest, 92,000. Chief seat of government, Tsingtau. Budget, 1906: Receipts, £694,958, of which State aid, £643,661; expenditure, £694,958. The German garrison in Kiao-Chao consists of 102 officers, 3,401 German non-commissioned officers and men, and one battalion of the East Asiatic Garrison brigade. It was further agreed that within a 50 kils. zone (31 English miles) from all points of the leased territory the Chinese Government should no longer, for the space of 99 years, be entitled to take any steps without previous authorisation from the German Government. Germany also received mining and railway concessions in the province of Shan-Tung, which is called "the sphere of influence," area about 2,750 English sq. miles, population 84,000. The leased territory, as it is called, comprises the bay up to high-water mark, its islands, and the north and south tongues of land at the mouth of the harbour.

Germany's share in the trade with her colonies in 1904 was 36·8 per cent.

GREECE.

Cons.-Gen., T. Stavridis, 40 Old Broad St., E.C.
Consul and Secretary, J. M. Joannides.

A maritime Kingdom in the south-east of Europe, situate in lat. 35° 40′—40° 10′ N. and long. 18° 20′—25° 50′ E., comprising an area of 24,977 square miles (inclusive of the territory lost by the rectification of the Thessalian frontier after the war with Turkey in 1897), with a population (in 1896) of 2,433,806. The country is composed of a continental portion, almost separated into two parts by the Gulfs of Patras and Lepanto on the west, and the Gulf of Ægina on the east, the Archipelago of the Ægean Sea and the Ionian Islands, and is divided into twenty-six provinces, called Nomarchies. The surface is nearly all mountainous; the coasts are elevated, irregular, and deeply indented. The most important of the fruit trees are the olive, the vine, orange, lemon, fig, almond, citron, pomegranate, and currant-grape. The imports are cotton and other manufactures, corn, timber, cattle, hides, sugar, salt fish, and coal. Its exports consist of currants, figs, olive oil, wine, cognac, tobacco, hides, lead, magnesium, emery, marble, and sponges.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The navy consisted of 3 ironclads, 2 armoured vessels, 1 cruiser, 10 gunboats, 4 steam corvettes, 8 schooners, 7 torpedo boats, 3 transports, and 7 various vessels, mostly obsolete, in July, 1903.
Education (see p. 635).
Communications.—There are 830 miles of railway open for traffic. There is a ship canal cutting through the Isthmus of Corinth, but it is rarely used by foreign vessels. Telegraphs, 4,951 miles. The mercantile marine consists of 1,035 sailing vessels above 30 tons capacity, and 206 steamers (198,681 tons).
Finance.—On December 31, 1905, the public Gold Debt of Greece amounted to £29,037,580, involving an annual charge of £770,840, and the Interior Paper Debt to 171,629,436 drachmæ, with a charge of 7,593,535 drachmæ. In the Gold Debt is included the first portion (£880,000) of a 4 per cent. loan contracted in March, 1902, for the construction of a railway from the Piræus to Demerly in Thessaly. The second portion (£870,000) was issued in June, 1904, and a further instalment (£230,000) for the extension of the railway to Larissa was issued in Jan., 1905. The service of the Debt was entrusted (1898) to an International Commission, sitting at Athens, consisting of representatives of the Governments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, and Italy. To them are assigned the revenues from (1) the State monopolies (salt, matches, petroleum, playing cards, cigarette paper, and emery), (2) the tobacco tax, and (3) the stamp duties, together with the revenue from the Piræus Custom-house as a supplementary guarantee. The gross receipts from the first three sources mentioned are estimated at 28,900,000 drachmæ, out of which a minimum interest of 43 per cent. of the original interest on the Monopoly Loan (1887), and 32 per cent. of the original interest on all other loans contracted previous to 1898, as well as the full interest of 2½ per cent. on the loan of 1898, is guaranteed. If the receipts exceed 28,900,000 drachmæ, the surplus, less 18 per cent. for expenses of administration, is divided between the Government and the bond-holders, in the following proportions: 30 per cent. for increase of interest, 30 per cent. for increase of sinking fund, and 40 per cent. to the Hellenic Government. Profit on exchange is distributed in the same proportions. If the receipts fall short of the estimate, the revenue from the custom-houses at Laurium, Patras, Volo, and Corfu are successively assigned to make good the deficit.

The trade of Greece is hampered by a forced circulation of about 150,000,000 drachmæ (nominally equal to the French franc) in a depreciated paper currency. The agio on gold has been steadily declining during the last few years. The average exchange in 1903 was 39·125 drachmæ to the £ sterling; in 1904 it was 34·5; for 1905 it was 30·77½, and for the first 8 months of 1906 it was 27·63. The figures below are merely provisional.

Guatemala, the most northerly of the Republican States of Central America, is situated in N. lat. from 13° 40′ to 17° 40′, and in W. Long. from 88° 15′ to 92° 30′, and comprises an area of 46,774 square miles, and a population in 1905 of 1,800,000. The Republic is divided into 22 departments, and is traversed from W. to E. by an elevated mountain chain, containing several volcanic summits rising to 13,000 feet above the sea: earthquakes are frequent. The country is well watered by numerous rivers; the climate is hot and unhealthy near the coast, but more temperate and salubrious in the higher regions. The Central Railway connects the port of San José (Pacific) with the capital. Work on the Northern Railway, which is to connect Port Barrios (Atlantic) with the capital, is being actively carried on, and is to be completed by contract in 1907. The total mileage in the Republic open for traffic in 1905 was 415 miles, with 65 miles under construction. There were 3,790 kilometers of telegraph working in 1905. The chief ports are San José de Guatemala, Champerico on the Pacific, and Livingston and Puerto Barrios on the Atlantic side. The principal export is coffee, valued at £1,459,469 in 1905; the other articles are sugar, rubber, hides, bananas, and timber.

The Republic of Hayti is the western or French portion of the island of San Domingo, which, next to Cuba, is the largest of the West India Islands. It contains 29,830 square miles, of which 9,242 square miles belong to Hayti. It lies in N. lat. between 17° 37′–20°, and in W. longitude between 68° 20′–74° 28′; and belongs to the group of the Greater Antilles. The portion belonging to Hayti contains a population of 1,425,000 (1906). The mountains are richly and heavily timbered, and susceptible of cultivation nearly to their summits; it is probably the most fertile spot in the West Indies, whilst its harbours, especially Port-au-Prince, offer considerable facilities to foreign trade. The principal productions are coffee, logwood, cocoa, cotton, hides, sugar, honey, gums, these being the chief exports. It is said to contain mines of gold, silver, copper, tin, and iron. Its commercial prosperity has been almost annihilated by repeated revolutions. The principal foreign trade is carried on with the United States, Great and Greater Britain, France, and Germany.

President, Manuel Bonilla, b. 1849, elect. 1 Feb., 1903, for 4 years.

Consul-General in London, M. J. Kelly, 8 Idol Lane, E.C.

The Middle State of Central America, stretching in N. lat. between 13° 10′ and 16°, and W. long. between 83° 10′ and 88° 40′; containing 42,558 English square miles, including a small portion of the Mosquito Territory, and the Bay Islands in the Gulf of Honduras. The population in 1902 was 774,900, mostly of aboriginal blood. It has a coast-line of nearly 400 miles on the Caribbean Sea, chief ports, Truxillo, Puerto Cortez, Omoa, Roatan, and La Ceiba; but only about 40 miles on the Gulf of Fonseca, on the Pacific side, chief port, Amapala. The country is mountainous, being traversed by the Cordilleras. The products are mahogany, fruit, cattle, cotton, sugar, tobacco, coffee, indigo, sarsaparilla, hides and skins, india-rubber, cedar, fustic, rose, and Lima wool. Its mineral wealth is great. The only railway (42-inch gauge) runs from Puerto Cortez to Pimienta, 60 miles, which it is intended to develop into an inter-oceanic railway, connecting the Atlantic with the Pacific.

Minister for Iceland (Resident), H. Hafstein, appd. 2 Feb., 1904.

Iceland is a large, volcanic, and treeless island in the North Atlantic Ocean, extending from 63° 23′ to 66° 33′ N. lat., and from 13° 22′ to 24° 35′ W. long., with an estimated area of 40,497 square miles, or greater than that of Ireland. The population was estimated in 1898 at 76,237.

The present constitution was granted in 1904, and the assembly (Al-thing) is more or less controlled by the Government at Copenhagen. The principal products of the island are sheep, cattle, ponies, and fish, and the imports consist of almost all the necessaries of life, the chief items being grain and meal, sugar, coffee, salt, cotton goods, tobacco, spirits, hardware, and timber. Iceland is now in direct telegraphic communication with this country.

A Kingdom in the South of Europe, consisting of a peninsula, the large islands of Sicily and Sardinia, the island of Elba, and about 66 minor islands. It is situate between lat. 36° 38′ 30″—46° 40′ 30″ N. and long. 6° 30′—18° 30′ E., and comprises a total area of 110,623 square miles (91,277 mainland, 19,346 islands), with a population (10 Feb., 1901) of 32,475,253. Formerly it was composed of the various States of Sardinia, the Two Sicilies, the Pontifical States, the Lombardo-Venetian provinces of the Austrian Empire, the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, and the Duchies of Parma and Modena. In 1870 the unity of the country was finally effected, and Rome became again the capital of Italy, which is now divided for administration into 69 provinces. The coast-line of the mainland is estimated at 1,999 miles; of Sicily, Sardinia, and Elba at 1,389 miles; of the minor islands at 557 miles; in all 3,945 miles, having several large bays and gulfs. The peninsula is traversed throughout its length by the chain of the Apennines; the Alps form its northern limits, dividing it from France. The chief rivers are the Po, the Adige, the Tiber, and the Arno. The principal towns are Naples, Rome (over 500,000), Milan (over 450,000), Turin, Palermo (over 300,000), Genoa, Florence (over 200,000), and Bologna, Venice, Messina, Catania, and Leghorn (over 100,000 inhabitants). Its wines are numerous and celebrated, and olives and olive-oil are furnished by Tuscany, Liguria, and the province of Bari; while fruit abounds and is largely exported. The cultivation of silk forms an important agricultural industry. Among the principal minerals are iron, lead, zinc, copper, manganese, and antimony ores, sulphur, gypsum, amianthus, alum, and boracic acid. Silver is found in Sardinia, and some gold in the Alps. Salt is a Government monopoly, and 45,268 tons were produced in 1903. The mineral produce in 1903 included iron ore (£216,396), zinc ore (£685,748), and crude sulphur (£1,754,097). The railway system is making rapid progress throughout the kingdom; in 1901 there were 9,943 miles open for traffic, and 27,820 miles of telegraph line. The commercial marine (1902) consisted of 5,690 vessels (485 steamers), of 1,018,807 tons. The imports chiefly consist of cotton, wheat, coal, coke, chemicals, colonial produce, yarns, jute and manufactured goods, woollens, raw silk, silkworms' eggs and cocoons, machinery, iron and steel in bars, plates and rails, hardware, raw hides, horses and cows, fixed oils, salt fish, dye-stuffs, tobacco, earthenware, &c. The principal exports are olive-oil, wine, candied citron, sienne earths, pastes, coral, rags, boracic acid, raw and thrown silk, hemp, cattle, straw hats, rice, iron, zinc and copper ores, sulphur, marble, fruit, vegetables, fresh and prepared meats, poultry, chemical products, woods, roots, &c., for dyeing and tanning, artistic works, &c. The manufactures are woollen, cotton, silk, hemp, and linen yarns and tissues, leathers, straw and felt hats, furniture, chemical products, paper, agricultural and other machinery, prepared meats, artistic works (such as mosaics, pottery, Venetian glass, alabaster ornaments), &c. Sugar is extracted from beet in large quantities for home consumption. There is a large settled and floating population of English and Americans, with churches (one costing £40,000) and chapels belonging to Methodists, Baptists, and others. Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The navy in 1904 consisted of 14 first-class battleships (and 5 building), 4 third-class ditto, 5 armoured cruisers (and 1 building), 18 protected and 1 unprotected cruisers, 12 torpedo vessels, 13 destroyers (and 2 building), and torpedo boats: divisional 7 (and 8 building), and class 94. Spezia, the chief naval and military port of the kingdom, is securely fortified. Education (see p. 635–6).

Foreign merchants vessels of 13,710,085 total tonnage entered and of 13,652,811 tons cleared at Italian ports in 1903. Italian vessels of 19,814,202 tons entered and of 19,749,749 tons cleared in 1903.

COLONIES. — Italy possesses the colony of Eritrea, a protectorate over part of the Somali coast, extending from Cape Guardafui to the Juba river, on which they have a station. The southern portion of this protectorate is administered by the Benadir Company, and an annual rent is paid by them to the Sultan of Zanzibar for the Benadir ports leased by him to Italy. The commencement of Italian influence was made in 1880, when the district of Assab was transferred from a trading company to the Government. The tract of land now known as ERITREA ("Red Sea") consists of a triangular portion of barren and sandy lowland between 12° and 18° N., containing in all a coast-line along the Red Sea of about 700 miles, with a total area of 85,000 to 90,000 square miles, and a population of about 400,000. The capital is Massowa, where there is a good harbour, and the principal product, salt, of great value as being the monetary currency of Southern Abyssinia. In 1889 a protectorate was declared over the neighbouring kingdom of Abyssinia, which was repudiated in 1893 by the Negus, Menelek II.; after a campaign which ended in disaster, the Italian Government concluded a treaty (1896) withdrawing the protectorate from all parts, except from the portion of Somaliland above referred to. The total area is about 130,000 square miles, and the population about 300,000, Itala, a newly formed settlement, being the seat of government.

This ancient and extensive Empire, now in alliance with the United Kingdom, consists of four large and many small islands, said to comprise in all above 4,223, the principal of which are Hondō (the name of the Empire being Nihon), Shikoku, Kiū-shū, and Hokkaidō or Yé Zo, situate to the north of the main island, from which it is separated by the Tsugaru Straits, and Formosa. The Ainu, an uncivilised but harmless tribe, who in ancient times occupied the greater part of the country, are still found in Yé Zo. The Kurile Islands have belonged to Japan since 1875, and in 1876 she incorporated the Luchu (Riu-kiu) Islands under the name of "Prefecture of Okinawa." The empire comprises an area of 162,655 square miles, with a population of 44,260,606, according to the last census, there being 22,329,925 men and 21,630,681 women.

Japan is said to possess a written history extending over 2,500 years, and its sovereigns to have formed an unbroken dynasty since 660 B.C., the present Emperor being the 121st of his race; but the authentic history begins about 400 A.D. Within the last few years Japan has made unparalleled progress in civilisation and the adoption of Western manners and customs. The feudal system, under which the country was governed by numerous lords, has been abolished, and the Mikado is now absolutely the Sovereign of the State, which has since the revolution of 1868 shown a most remarkable power of adopting Western knowledge and experience. A wise and enlightened ruler is at the head of the nation, and the first national Parliament, the outcome of the constitution granted to the people by the Emperor, promulgated 11 Feb., 1889, met for the first time in November, 1890. The feudal lords, who have lost all their powers of government, still retain their high social positions, and a new aristocracy with these as its basis has been formed; it consists of five grades, corresponding to the European titles of Prince (not Imperial), Marquis, Count, Viscount, and Baron. The islands are eminently volcanic, and 18 of the summits are still active; the chief of these, Fuji-san, or Fuji-yama, the loftiest and most sacred mountain of Japan, about sixty miles from Tokio, is 12,370 ft. high, and has been dormant since 1707. Japan is also liable to frequent and disastrous earthquakes. The country is very mountainous, and not more than one-sixth of its area is available for cultivation. It possesses numerous fine harbours. The soil is productive, teeming with every variety of agricultural produce. Copper, iron, and sulphur abound, whilst agate, cornelian, and rock crystal are also found. Gold was discovered in 1899 in considerable quantities in the northern island, and silver mining is prosecuted on a small scale; while there is a good supply of middling coal. Among the vegetable productions may be noted the camphor-tree, paper mulberry, vegetable wax-tree, and a lacquer-tree, which furnishes the celebrated "lacquer" of Japan. The principal timber trees are the Cryptomeria japonica, Pinus Massoniana, and Zelkowa Keaki; the maple is merely for ornament. Chestnut, oak, beech, and elm are comparatively rare and little used. The tobacco-plant, tea-shrub, potato, rice, wheat and other cereals are all cultivated; agriculture, upon which the Japanese bestow great care, being their chief occupation. The coasts are extremely rich in fish. The floral kingdom is rich, beautiful, and varied. The fruits are abundant, but for the most part of inferior quality.

Commerce and Industry.—The chief manufactures are silk and cotton, cotton yarn, matches, paper, glass, japanned ware, porcelain, and bronze, and shipbuilding is an important industry in the yards. The chief imports are raw cotton from India, U.S., Egypt, and China; flour from the U.S.; and piece goods, metals, woollens, wool, drugs, rails, locomotives, and machinery from Europe and the U.S.A. Sugar is largely imported from Java, Philippines, Germany, Austria, Hong Kong, and Formosa; indigo from Germany, British India, and Java; kerosene oil from U.S. and Russia; beans, peas, and pulse from China and Korea; and rice, principally from British India, French India, Korea, Siam, and China. The chief exports are silk, cotton yarns, rice, tea, fish, copper, matches, coal, camphor, straw plaits, and marine products.

Communications.—There were 3,151 miles of private railway and 1,345 miles of Government lines open in 1905. The Tōkaidō, Shinano, and Echigo, and Oshiu and Dewa lines are the property of the Government, with a total length of 661 miles, and the work of duplicating Tōkaidō (East Coast route) is progressing. A Japanese line has also been built in Korea from Fusan to Söoul. The gross receipts for passenger and goods traffic on all the lines in Japan during 1904 was £5,461,000. The mercantile marine of registered ships above 100 tons consisted (1904) of 658 steamers of 764,566 gross tons and 1,209 sailing vessels of 168,266 gross tons. Of the 6,580 vessels (tonnage 11,490,947) that entered Japanese ports (1904) 2,289 were British (tonnage, 5,993,843).

Defence (for Army see p. 632). The Navy consisted in August, 1905, of 5 first-class battleships (2 building); 1 second-class and 3 third-class battleships; 8 first-class cruisers; 2 second-class cruisers; 13 third-class cruisers; 45 t.b.d. and 80 torpedo boats (built or building). It was manned by about 20,000 officers and men.

Finance.—From Oct. 1, 1897, the currency was placed upon a gold basis, the unit being the gold yen of 8.333 gr. containing 75 grammes of fine gold; but there is no smaller gold coin than the 5-yen piece. The local exchange value of the yen was (1902 average) 2s. 0½d.

Education (see p. 636).

Under treaties with Great Britain and several other Powers, Yedo (Tōkiō), Kanagawa (Yokohama), Hiogo (Kohé), and Osaka (on the Inland Sea), Nagasaki in Kiushu, Hakodate in the Hokkaido (Yezo), Niigata, and 23 additional ports are open to trade. The following table shows the distribution of the foreign trade in 1904 among the countries principally concerned:—

| | Exports. | Imports. | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|
| British Empire | £6,953,000 | £15,666,000 | £22,619,000 |
| United States | 10,336,000 | 5,932,000 | 16,268,000 |
| China | 6,940,000 | 5,595,000 | 12,535,000 |
| France | 3,708,000 | 342,000 | 4,049,000 |
| Germany | 428,000 | 2,920,000 | 3,348,000 |

The principal articles exported to Japan from this country in 1904 were iron and steel manufactures (£817,000), locomotives (£249,000), machinery (£492,000), wool and woollens (£1,252,000), and cotton manufactures (£727,000). Japan sent to the U.K. silk manufactures (£1,029,366) and straw plaitings (£289,890).

Chief Commissioner of Customs, Sir J. M'Leavy Brown, C.M.G.

Korea, the bone of contention in the war between Japan and China (1894–5), and again in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904–5, is an Empire consisting mainly of a peninsula lying to the north-east of China, between 34° and 43° N. lat. and 125° and 130° E. long., the coast of which is fringed with innumerable islands, of which the largest is Quelpart. The country measures 600 miles from north to south, and 135 miles from east to west, with an area of about 80,000 square miles, and a population estimated at from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000. Confucianism and a corrupt form of Buddhism, mingled with spirit and ancestor worship, may be said to be the religion of the country. The people are, however, rather superstitious than religious. The Koreans are for the most part tall, robust, and good-looking, and belong to the Mongolian stock, their language being Turanian with a large admixture of Chinese words; they are idle, unprogressive, and uneducated, and the commerce and administration of the country is mainly in the hands of the Japanese. The soil is very fertile, but only partially cultivated; out of a total cultivable area of some 8,000,000 acres only about 4,500,000 acres are now under cultivation. The products of the country, with the exception of gold and hides, are mainly agricultural, and include rice, beans, and many varieties of cereals, also tobacco, hemp, cotton, &c. Ginseng, a medicinal root much affected by Chinese, is an important article of cultivation, and, being a Government monopoly, forms a rich source of revenue. Gold is abundant, and copper, coal, iron, and galena are also found. Native manufactures are in a primitive condition, the principal being hemp cloth and an excellent quality of paper manufactured from the bark of the Broussonetia papyrifera, and resembling the Japanese article.

The finances of the country, which have hitherto been in a state of great disorder, are now controlled by a Japanese adviser to the Finance Minister. A reform has been effected in the debased nickel currency of the country, which has been called in and replaced by a new currency consisting of nickel and silver coins upon a gold basis.

Commerce.—The sea-borne trade is almost entirely carried in Japanese bottoms, the number of Japanese vessels entered in 1904 being 4,531, with a tonnage of 784,436, out of a total (including Korean) of 7,259, with a tonnage of 1,392,473. In 1904 the trade of Chemulpo amounted to £1,912,365, including the value of the gold exported, amounting to £213,808. Since 1901 an annual appropriation has been made from the Customs revenue for the erection of lighthouses round the coast.

Communications.—These are now entirely in the hands of the Japanese. A railway runs from Söeul to Chemulpo, length 26 miles 7 chains; and in May, 1905, the Söeul-Fusan Railway was formally opened, the length of which is 286 miles. The construction of the line from Söeul to Wiju, viâ Pyeng Yang (Ping Yang) has now been completed with the exception of the bridge at Anju. Its length is about 300 miles. These two latter lines, when connected with the Siberian system, will complete the great highway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, across two continents.

The postal, telegraph, and telephone systems of Korea were placed under the administration of Japan by an agreement between that country and Korea signed on April 1, 1905, under which Japan assumed control of the entire Korean system of communications.

Chemulpo contains an agency of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and a number of Japanese banks.

JERUSALEM—PALESTINE.

Turkish Governor, Rashid Bey, appointed 8 Aug., 1904.

Palestine, which occupies so prominent a place in the history of human kind, and in the affections of the Christian world, is a country capable of considerable development, and, although her ancient glories are departed, still produces wine and olives, corn and the most varied fruits. Its population is not far short of 700,000, of whom 80,000 to 100,000 are Jews. In and about Jerusalem, the Jews number from 60,000 to 65,000.

Geographically, Palestine consists of a maritime lowland, the mountain region of Judah, which forms its backbone, the remarkable depression through which the Jordan wends its course towards the Dead Sea, and the elevated region lying to the east of the Jordan. It is barren only during the dry season, when the grasses are dried up, and the herdsmen retire with their flocks of sheep and goats to the loftier mountains, but the alluvial lowland to the south of Mount Carmel is as fruitful as ever, and it only needs an honest and vigorous administration to restore Palestine to its former prosperous condition. The entire area is computed to be about 11,000 square miles.

Palestine comprises the independent mutessariflik of Jerusalem (el Quds), together with the mutessariffliks of Acre and Nablus, the two last named belonging, for administrative purposes, to the vilayet (province) of Beirut. Since March, 1906, however, the kaza (district) of Nazareth, in the mutessariflik of Acre, has been included in the mutessariflik of Jerusalem. The stream Auja, which enters the sea a few miles north of Jaffa, forms the boundary between the independent district of Jerusalem and the above-named vilayet, the country to the east of the Jordan and the Dead Sea being subordinate to the vilayet of Damascus. Arabic is the language commonly spoken, and 80 per cent. of the population are Mohammedans; in addition to Mohammedans and Jews there are many Orthodox Greeks and foreigners of all denominations. A railway was constructed connecting Jaffa (Joppa) and Jerusalem in 1892.

The principal ports of Palestine are Acre, Haifa, Jaffa, and Gaza, and their exports amount annually to over £600,000, consisting principally of sesame, oranges, fruits, barley, olive oil, maize, and articles of Christian veneration, these latter weighing 2,700 cwt. The imports are estimated at £650,000 annually. The U.K. and France take the lead in this commerce.

An independent Negro Republic of Western Africa, occupying that part of the coast of North Guinea which is between the river Cavalla, S.E., and Manna, N.W., a distance of about 350 miles, with an area of about 48,000 square miles, and extending to the interior to latitude 8° 50′, a distance of 250 miles from the seaboard. It was founded by the American Colonization Society in 1820, and has been recognised by the United States and the European powers since 1847 as an independent State. The population numbers nearly 1,500,000. The principal exports are coffee, cocoa, palm-kernels, palm-oil, ivory, prassava, rubber, and camwood. The chief imports are cottons, haberdashery, salt, rice, provisions, arms and ammunition, tobacco, hardware, glass and earthenware, rum, gin, timber, and beads. The executive power is vested in a President elected for two years, assisted by a ministry; there are two houses of Legislature, the Senate, with eight members elected for four years, and the House of Representatives with fourteen members elected for two years. There is no regular army. Foreigners are only allowed to trade at the ports of entry and frontiers, of which there are thirteen along the 350 miles of coast, viz.: Manna, Robertsport, Monrovia, Marshall, Grand Bassa, River Cess, Greensville, Nanna Kroo, Niffoo, Harper, Half Cavalla, Jenne, and Webo.

Minister of State, M. Eyschen.

A Grand Duchy in Central Europe, bounded by Germany, Belgium, and France; it formed part of the Germanic Confederation, 1815–66, and is still included in the German "Zollverein." In 1867 the Treaty of London declared it a neutral territory under the sovereignty of the King of the Netherlands, on whose decease, Nov. 23rd, 1890, it passed to the Duke of Nassau. The area is 999 square miles; the population (1901) 236,543, nearly all Roman Catholics. The principality is rich in iron-ore. The revenue in 1905 was £519,000, expenditure £508,828; debt (Jan. 1, 1905) £445,360. There are 342 miles of railway. The army numbers about 325 men. The capital, Luxemburg (population 30,000), is a dismantled fortress.

A country in the southern part of the continent of North America, with an extensive seaboard to both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, situated between 15°—32′ N. lat. and 87°—117° W. long., and comprising one of the richest and most varied zones in the world, but from various causes her resources have never been fairly developed. It comprises 27 states, 3 territories, and the federal district of Mexico, making in all 31 political divisions, comprehending an area of 767,005 square miles, with an estimated population of (1900) 13,545,462, of whom "only about 3,500,000 are taxable." The surface consists of an elevated plateau, commencing at a few miles from the coast, and containing several volcanic summits, the highest of which, Ixtaccihuatl and Popocatepetl, rise to 17,879 and 19,784 feet above the sea. Acapulco, Manzanillo, Mazatlan, Salina Cruz, and Guaymas are the chief ports on the Pacific; and Vera Cruz, Tampico, Progreso, and Coatzocoalcos on the Atlantic or Gulf of Mexico. There were 13,515 miles of railway open on Sept. 15, 1906, and 35,205 miles of telegraph. The railways have in a large measure been built by American and English companies. The "Mexican Central" joins El Paso (Texas) with the city of Mexico, by which passengers can travel in five days from New York without change of carriage. The National Railway vid Laredo takes 4½ days to New York, and there is a third route vid Eagle Pass (International Railway). The principal crops are maize, wheat, barley, Chile-pepper, sugar, coffee, cotton, tobacco, vanilla, flax, grapes, and all kinds of tropical fruit. The maguey, or Mexican aloe, yields a favourite beverage, "pulque"; other species of the same plant supply pita-flax and sisal-hemp (henequen). The forests abound in mahogany, rosewood, ebony, and caoutchouc trees. The mineral wealth is very great; silver and gold, copper, lead, and quicksilver, iron and coal, are the leading products of the mines. Woollen and cotton spinning and weaving, and other branches of industry, are encouraged by high protective duties. The imports, nevertheless, consist very largely of textile manufactures. Of the exports 45 per cent. consist of silver and gold; sizal hemp (henequen), coffee, hides and skins, timber, logwood, vanilla, tobacco, dye-stuffs, sugar and drugs ranking next in importance.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy is limited to 7 small vessels, of about 200 to 300 tons, used for the prevention of smuggling.

Education (see p. 636).

Heir Apparent, Danilo Alexander, born 29 June, 1871; m. 1899, Princess Jutta of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.
Pres. of State Council and Minister for Foreign Affairs, Lazar Miouchekovitch.

A small Principality, which has always claimed to be independent, and recognised to be so by the Treaty of Berlin. It has an area of 3,486 square miles, and a population diminished by emigration to about 225,000, of whom 13,000 are Mussulmans, 14,000 Roman Catholics, and the remainder Orthodox Slavs. The surface forms a series of elevated ridges with lofty mountain-peaks, many of which are covered with forests. Chief products are maize, potatoes, sumac, cattle, castradina (smoked mutton), hides, and tobacco, which has been created a monopoly, and conceded for 25 years to an Italian company. The only manufactures are coarse woollens. Agriculture is the principal occupation. The imports are estimated at £114,000 from Austria, £28,000 from Turkey, £4,000 from United Kingdom, and £10,000 from Italy (1904).

A representative parliament was granted 5 Nov., 1905.

For military purposes the principality is divided into 12 brigade districts, furnishing 58 battalions (11 infantry and 1 artillery), or 36,000 men; one battalion is always in barracks at Cettinje; a battalion is also maintained and instructed at Podgoritza. The two ports, Antivari and Dulcigno, have about 150 coasting vessels.

MOROCCO, EMPIRE OF.

Sultan, Muley Abdul Aziz, b. 1879, s. June, 1894.
Grand Vizier, Sid Emfadi Gharnit.
Minister of Foreign Affairs, Sid Abdul Karim Ben Sliman.
Minister of War, Sid Mohammed Gabbas.
Commissioner for Foreign Affairs at Tangier, Sid Hadji Mohammed Torres.
Instructor-in-Chief of Army, Kaid Sir Harry Maclean, K.C.M.G.

The largest of the Barbary States, situate in the N.W. of Africa, between 27°—36° N. lat. and 1°—11° 40′ W. long. The Empire, which is an absolute monarchy, consists of the Kingdom of Fez and Morocco, to the north of the Atlas, and the territories of Sûs, Drâ, Wadi Tafilet, Tuat, and others to the south, which are again subdivided into 33 districts, each under the superintendence of a "Kaid"; but the semi-independent tribes are ruled by their own chiefs, and scarcely acknowledge the authority of the Sultan. Morocco contains about 314,000 square miles, of which the "Tell," or fertile regions of the mountains and coast, contain 76,000, the steppe-land 26,000, and the Sahara 217,000, with a population variously estimated at from 4,500,000 to 8,000,000. The Jews number about 300,000, chiefly in the cities. Among the chief products of the country are wheat, barley, maize, beans, peas, oil, esparto, and hemp; among fruits, the fig, almond, pomegranate, lemon, olive, orange, and date are common; but agriculture is greatly neglected. Morocco is said to be rich in mineral treasures: antimony, iron, coal, copper, lead, tin—the last three in considerable quantities. Gold and silver also are found, and wool is plentiful. The chief ports are Tetuan, Tangier (where the Representatives of fourteen nations reside), El Araish (Laraiche), Rabat, Casa Blanca (or Dar-al-baida), Mazagan, Saffi, and Mogador. There are no railways, and telegraphic communication from Tangier is by submarine cable of Eastern Telegraph Company to Gibraltar, by Spanish Government telegraph to Tarifa, and by French cable to Oran (Algeria). The principal exports (1905) were hides (£143,477), wool (£182,171), eggs (£244,648), skins (£377,781), almonds (£103,927), live cattle (£149,920); and the imports are cottons (£670,375), flour, &c. (£397,756), sugar (£592,610), tea (£153,909), linen, muslin and woollen goods, coffee, candles, cloth, silk, iron, brass, hardware, &c. The army consists of between 15,000 and 20,000, one-half of whom are negroes, Sultan's bodyguard, and a sort of militia, of various arms, amounting to 80,000 men. An English newspaper, Al Moghreb-al-Aksa, a French paper, La Dépêche Marocaine, and three newspapers in Spanish are published at Tangier. There are three capitals, of which Fez, population 120,000, is the seat of government, and Morocco (Marrakesh), 50,000, is the capital of the Moorish Empire; and Mequinez, 56,000.

A maritime Kingdom of Central Europe, situate on the North Sea, in lat. 50° 46′—53° 34′ N. and long. 3° 22′—7° 14′ E., consisting of 11 provinces, and containing a total area of 12,582 square miles, with a population, on Jan. 1, 1902, of 5,263,267. The majority, about three-fifths, belong to the Dutch Reformed Church; and the remainder are Roman Catholics, with a small number of Jews, mainly in large towns such as Amsterdam, where there are about 70,000. The land is generally flat and low, intersected by numerous canals and connecting rivers—in fact, a network of water-courses. The principal rivers are the Rhine, Maas, and Yssel, with the mouths of the Scheldt. The chief native products are cattle, horses, swine, sheep, potatoes, oats, rye, wheat, barley, beans, peas, buckwheat, beetroot, chicory, flax, hemp, tobacco, and dairy produce. The principal manufactures are shipping, bricks, butterine, cocoa, chocolate, linen, rich damasks, cottons, woollens, and "geneva." Diamond-cutting employs numerous hands in Amsterdam.

Communications.—There are 3,091 kilometres of railway open (31 Dec., 1905), and 31,975 kilometres of telegraph. The mercantile marine, on the 31st Dec., 1904, consisted of 269 steamers, tonnage 965,847 cubic metres, and 463 sailing vessels (165,114 cubic metres), employing 9,369 men on 31 Dec., 1904.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The royal Navy consisted, on July 1, 1906, of 122 vessels (8 of them ironclads, 7 protected cruisers, 18 coast and harbour defence vessels, 43 torpedo-boats (8 for the colonies), 46 special service vessels).

Trade and Commerce.—Holland figures largely in the trade returns of this country, a quarter of the value of which is represented by agricultural produce, but much of the merchandise sent to Holland was for distribution in Germany and other parts. The following are the Board of Trade figures for imports from the United Kingdom in the year 1905:—

DEPENDENCIES.—The Dutch possessions in the EAST INDIES are very considerable, comprising the whole of the SUNDA ISLANDS, with the exception of a small portion of Borneo and Eastern Timor, together with WESTERN NEW GUINEA, with an area of 738,000 square miles, and a population (1900) of 35,412,000, of whom as many as 28,747,000 live in the islands of Java and Madura. JAVA and MADURA (customs receipts, 1906, £1,652,250) produce a sufficient supply of food for a dense population, besides furnishing sugar, tobacco, tea, coffee and other products for exportation to Europe. The "outlying" islands are frequently administered by their own princes, subject to the directions of a Dutch Resident. There is a colonial army of 1,396 officers and 36,927 men. The colonial revenue for 1906 was estimated at £12,657,077, and was largely derived from the sale of coffee, salt, bark, and tin; whilst the estimated expenditure was £13,465,458. The exports, in addition to the above, include also tobacco, indigo, gums, and spices, and amounted in 1904, for Java, Madura, and the other outlying islands, to £22,921,891, while the imports for the same year amounted to £16,428,990.

In South America the colony of SURINAM, or Dutch Guiana (imports, 1905, £546,443; exports, £369,311), embraces 46,072 square miles and contains 80,024 inhabitants; and in the West Indies, CURAÇOA (imports, £266,343; exports, £38,411; population 31,090) and five other small islands belong to Holland, having an area of 436 square miles, with a population of 21,979.

NICARAGUA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, José Santos Zelaya, born 1852, first elected June, 1893; re-elected 1906 for 4 years.

The largest State of Central America, with a long seaboard on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, situate between 9° 45′—15° N. lat. and 83° 40′—87° 38′ W. long., containing an area of 51,660 English square miles, including a large portion of the Mosquito Territory, and a population of about 400,000, of whom about three-quarters are mixed blood and the rest Indians, besides the Mosquitos, who are mostly in a savage state. There are 156 miles of railway open, and about 240 miles under construction, with 1,591 miles of telegraph, connected with the Pacific cable from Mexico to Peru. A ship canal to connect the Pacific with the Atlantic was commenced in Oct., 1890, but the company collapsed in 1899; in 1899 a new company obtained the concession, but failed to comply with the terms obtained, and the concession was revoked in August, 1900. The canal, which had been begun in 1890, is now almost entirely filled up, the machinery lying scattered about in all directions.

The interest on the foreign loan has been reduced to 4 per cent.

Norway, an independent kingdom, founded in 872 (fundamental law of 17 May, 1814), was united with Sweden under the same King from 4 Nov., 1814, to 7 June, 1905, when the union was dissolved. The Parliament of 123 members is called the "Storthing," which is divided into two sections, chosen by itself to discuss projected Bills, called "Odelsting" and "Lagting." The western and northern portion of the peninsula is about 1,100 miles in length, its greatest width about 250 miles. It is divided into 20 provinces, or amts, and comprises an area of 124,130 sq. miles with a population (1905) of 2,311,527. The coast-line is extensive, deeply indented with numerous fiords, and fringed with an immense number of rocks & islands. The surface is mountainous, consisting of elevated and barren table-lands, separated by deep and narrow valleys. The cultivated area is about one-thirtieth part of the country; forests cover nearly one-fourth; the rest consists of highland pastures or uninhabitable mountains. Agriculture, though pursued with some vigour of late, is unable to furnish sufficient produce for home consumption; hence it has been necessary to import considerable quantities of corn, meat, and pork. The fisheries give employment to a large part of the population throughout the year. The most important are cod and herring; the exports of these with other sea-products and fish-oil were valued at £3,177,863 in 1905. The mineral products are similar to, but far less valuable than, those of Sweden. Timber-dressing, mechanical engineering, textile manufactures, ship-building, and pulp-making are the principal departments of Norwegian industry. The exports of produce of the forests were valued at £3,610,628 in 1905, the value of wood-pulp alone being £1,520,925. The imports consist chiefly of the necessary articles of consumption. The chief exports consist of timber, matches, fish, oil, and other products of the fisheries, pulp, paper, skins and furs, nails, minerals, stone, ice, calcium carbide, condensed milk, butter, margarine, tinned goods, &c. The principal domestic exports from Norway to the United Kingdom in 1905 were paper and paper-making materials, timber, and condensed milk; and the principal domestic imports from the United Kingdom in 1905 were coal, steamships, Manchester goods, metals, and woollens.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy consists of 4 ironclads, 4 coast defence ships, 38 torpedo vessels, 14 gunboats, and a few smaller vessels, with 5,150 officers and men and as many in reserve.

Education (see p. 636).

Communications.—The total length of railways open in 1906 was 1,584 miles, of which 237 miles were private lines. The length of telegraphs and telephones belonging to the State in March, 1906, was 9,170 miles. The mercantile marine, 31 Dec. 1905, consisted of 7,269 vessels, of 1,486,502 tons.

OMĀN.

Sultan, or Sovereign, Seyyid Feysal bin Turki, G.C.I.E., born 1864, suc. 4 June, 1888.

Omān (area 81,000 sq. miles, pop. 1,000,000) is a Mohammedan State in N.E. Arabia with a coast-line of about 1,500 miles along the Persian Gulf, the Gulf of Omān, and the Arabian Sea. The small territory of Gwadar on the Mekran coast also belongs to it. The country rises from a bare and burning coast until in Jebel Akhdar it attains an elevation of 10,000 feet. The rainfall averages only about 6 inches annually. Among the Bedouins the authority of the Sultan is nominally recognised, but in the interior his authority is slight, and trade is hampered by robbery. The population is chiefly Arab, but includes also a considerable foreign element—Banians and Khojas from Western India, Persians, East Africans, and Nubians. The Sultan is in treaty relations with the Government of India, who have a political agent at his court. A joint Anglo-French declaration of 1862 guarantees his independence. Since 1798 the relations between Muscat and England have been friendly, and nine treaties and conventions have been made.

† Estimates for 1 April, 1906—31 March, 1907, are £5,250,551, and Expenditure £6,129,532.

British warships have upheld the Sultan's authority against rebellious tribesmen. The Sultan is pledged not to cede territory to any Power but the British Government. The Viceroy of India visited Muscat in 1903. Omān has no independent coinage except copper pice; the Indian rupee is the chief currency at Muscat and the Maria Theresa dollar in the interior. Muscat, the capital, with its commercial suburb of Muttra (pop. 25,000), has a good harbour, and a considerable trade, amounting in 1905-6 to £550,000. About 83 per cent. of the trade is with England and India, and 92 per cent. of the shipping is British. Indians (who numbered 1,300 in 1903) do most of the business. The French have little trade here. Dates are the chief export, and rice, arms, coffee, cotton and silk goods the chief imports. The imports from the United Kingdom were about £70,000 in 1905. An import duty of 5 per cent. is levied. There are three British steamship lines and a weekly mail service to Karachi and Bombay. There is a cable to India via Jask.

British Consul and Political Agent, Major W. G. Grey, I.A.

PANAMA, REPUBLIC OF.

President, H.E. Manuel Amador Guerrero, born 1833, assumed office in 1904, for four years.
Vice-President, José Domingo de Obaldia.
Secretary of Government, Foreign Affairs, and War, Ricardo Arias.
Treasury, Dr. F. V. de la Espriella.
Public Instruction, Lasso de la Vega.
Public Works, Señor Manuel Quintero.

Consul General, C. R. Zachrisson, 35 Chapel Walk, Liverpool.
Consul at Manchester, F. A. Cortez-Leigh.

One of the nine Departments of Colombia revolted in Nov. 1903, and established a separate Government. A treaty was concluded with the United States which guarantees the independence of the Republic, and also paid ten millions of dollars, in return for which Panama grants to the United States, in perpetuity, a zone of land for the construction and operation of a canal, of the width of ten miles, extending to the distance of five miles on each side, with sovereign rights within the strip. A new port has been established at Cristobal, in the Atlantic, and Port Ancon, on the Pacific, is also administered by American officials and laws. The area of the Republic is 31,890 square miles, the population (1904) about 330,000. There are 165 primary schools, at which 9,181 children attend; the present system of public instruction is to be thoroughly reorganised and reformed. The once famous pearl-fisheries in the Gulf of Panama yield now but little, but other beds are being worked along the North coast. The prosperity of the State depends upon its favourable geographical position, which facilitates transit from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The distance from Limon Bay to Panama on the latter is only 35 miles, and the highest elevation of the watershed does not exceed 278 feet. Until 1896 Panama and Colon were free ports. A general import duty is now levied at the rate of 10 per cent. gold on the value of all imports, except liquors, which are provided for separately. A special agreement between the U.S. and Panama was signed in December, 1904, establishing free trade between the Republic and the Canal Zone. Merchandise entering the zone for consumption pays import dues to the Panama Government identical with those levied on the importations into the Republic. All supplies imported for account of the Isthmian Canal Commission are exempted from all taxation. A railway 47 miles in length (fare, first class $2.40, second class $1.50) (luggage 2 cents a lb.) (U.S. gold) joins the two oceans. The imports in 1905 were valued at £845,000 (one-fourth from United Kingdom), and consisted chiefly of manufactured goods and foodstuffs. The exports (principally gold dust and bars, hides, rubber, mother-of-pearl shells, cabinet woods, bananas, and medicinal plants) at £200,000.

The Panama Canal.—A ship canal was commenced in 1879 by Ferdinand de Lesseps, the diggings being begun in 1881, but in March, 1889, work ceased owing to lack of funds. A French syndicate then assumed charge of the property and continued the works at the Culebra cut until the sale of the property to the U.S. for forty millions of dollars in 1904. A lock canal has been definitely decided upon, in 85 ft. level, with 6 locks; 3 will be located at Gatun, 1 at Pedro Miguel, and 2 at La Boca, all in duplicate. With the work already done it is estimated it can be completed in 9 years at an additional outlay of £28,000,000. Total length will be about 46 miles, and at surface of water 150 ft.; depth, 30 ft.

Panama—Consul, Claude C. Mallet, C.M.G. £800
Vice-Consul, £350 to 450
Bocas del Toro—Cons. Agent, Louis F. Ryan.
Colon—Vice-Cons., Edward F. Hudson.
Pedregal—Cons. Agent, T. C. S. Preedy.

PARAGUAY, REPUBLIC OF.

President, General Berrigno Ferreira, assumed office 25 Nov. 1906 (for 4 years) ..... £1,900
Vice-President, Emiliano Gonzalez Navero.
Foreign Secretary, (vacant.)
Minister Plenipotentiary to London and Paris, Señor Eusebio Machain.
Consul-General in London, Alfred James, 18, Eldon Street, E.C.
Consul in London, A. F. Baillie.

An inland State of South America, situate between 22° 4′—27° 30 S. lat and 54° 32′—61° 20′ W. long. Its area is computed at 145,400 square miles, enclosed within the rivers Parana and Paraguay; and contains a population (1900) of about 635,600. The chief crops are maize, rice, coffee, manioc, tobacco, sugar-cane, and oranges. Among its principal trees are several species of dye-wood, and many yielding juices or gums, as the caoutchouc or india-rubber; the Quebracho, used for tanning, and the "Yerba Maté," or Paraguay tea-plant; there are also hardwood and other timber trees and medicinal plants. Stock-raising is the chief industry. The chief articles of export are oranges, hides, tobacco, yerba maté, and timber. The army numbers about 30,000 men; there is no navy. A revolution, of several months' duration, came to an end in December, 1904. A railway, 155 miles in length, belongs to an English company.

Persia—called by the natives Irán—comprises 630,000 square miles. The Caspian Sea, with all the northern frontier from Tabriz to Meshed, is under Russian influence. The eastern frontier is in contact with Afghanistan and Baluchistan, and its ill-defined western frontier with Turkey. Disputes occurred regarding the Turco-Persian boundary in 1906. The Persian Gulf, on the south, is of great commercial importance to England and India (see p. 504). "We should regard the establishment of a naval base or a fortified port in the Persian Gulf as a very grave menace to British interests, and we should certainly resist it with all the means at our disposal."—(Foreign Secretary in House of Lords, 5 May, 1903.) The population, widely scattered, is estimated at 10,000,000. The country is mostly a bare and arid table-land, encircled, except on the east, by mountains, those in the north rising to 12,000 ft. The central and eastern portion is a vast salt desert. The only good navigable river is the Karun, which was opened to foreign navigation from Mohamerah to Ahwaz in 1888. Messrs. Lynch Bros., aided by a British-Indian subsidy, run a fortnightly steamer to Ahwaz, whence there is a new road to Ispahan made by British capital. The Upper Karun, navigable up to Shuster, is reserved to the Persian flag. There is one (Belgian) railway of eight miles running south from Tehran. The Shah bound himself to Russia in 1890, and again in 1899, not to allow the construction of railways in Persia for several years. Whenever construction is resumed, England has a right to build lines in S. Persia. Most of the telegraphs are managed by the Indo-European Telegraph Department of the Government of India. The main telegraph is from Julfa, on the Russian frontier, to Bushire, whence there is a cable to Bombay. The convention for this telegraph lasts till 1925. A new land telegraph has been constructed by British agency, from the Indian frontier viâ Yezd and Kerman, to Tehran. It is leased to the Persian Government, but maintained by British directors and staff. The chief routes to Persia are those viâ Batoum-Tiflis-Tabriz and Baku-Resht, constructed and controlled by Russians, and closed to non-Russian merchandise except tea; the Trebizond-Tabriz route, long and costly; the Bunder Abbas route to Kerman, Yezd, and Seistan, liable to robbery; the Bushire-Shiraz-Ispahan route, long and difficult; the Bussorah-Baghdad-Kermanshah route, suited for bulky or heavy goods; and the increasingly popular Mohammerah-Ahwaz-Ispahan route, shorter, cheaper, and better than the Bushire route. Several good cart-roads have been made or are in progress. The Kazwin-Hamadan road (Russian) was completed in 1905. Travelling is mostly by caravans, and transport by pack-animals. The cost of carriage is, therefore, very heavy. The chief products are cereals, cotton, gums, dried fruits, silk, tobacco, and opium. The minerals (little worked) are salt, iron, coal, copper, lead, sulphur, &c., with turquoises. Oilfields in Southern Persia have been successfully worked by an English capitalist since 1902. The only important manufacture is that of woollen carpets (mostly a domestic industry), but shawls, silks, and cotton fabrics are also produced. There are extensive forests in the north and west. Sheep and goats are numerous, and good wool is produced. The principal towns are Tehran (pop. 210,000), Tabriz (180,000), Ispahan (60,000), Meshed (80,000), Kerman (50,000), Yezd (60,000), Shiraz (50,000), &c. The Persians are mostly Shiah Mohammedans; there are also many Armenian Christians. The Shah has hitherto been an absolute monarch, subject only to divine law. The laws and popular education are based on the precepts of the Koran. An imperial order for the creation of a Ministry of Justice was issued in 1906. The Shah is assisted by a Grand Vizier and other ministers. Persia is divided into provinces, of which the principal are under Governors or Governors-General. Owing to increasing popular misery and to discontent with a corrupt and incompetent administration and an extravagant Court, as well as to the collapse of Russian power, a reform movement began in December, 1905, under the auspices of the Mohammedan clergy. In August, 1906, the Shah, admitting the need for reforms, granted a Constitution. The National Council (or Consultative Assembly) consists of 156 representatives of the princes, clergy, "kadjars" (the royal tribe), nobles, merchants and tradesmen, who are elected by their peers. The Council may deliberate on all important State affairs, and have a right to free expression of opinion on reforms. The results of their deliberations must be submitted for the Shah's approval. The first elections were held in October, 1906. The revenue, estimated at 1 to 1½ millions, is derived from land tax, Crown lands, customs, and lease of monopolies. Most of it has been spent on the Court, a worthless army, and a heavy pension list. Foreign trade is developing. The total imports of merchandise into Persia in 1904–5 were £6,033,000, and the exports £4,275,000. Russia had about 49 per cent. of the imports and 47 per cent. of the exports; the British Empire 34 per cent. of the imports and 11 per cent. of the exports. Turkey and France were the other chief participators. Proximity to the best cultivated and most populous provinces, railways in Transcaspia, bounties on sugar, &c., a preferential tariff, and new roads from the frontier, have extended Russia's trade and influence. Persia's trade with Russia is chiefly through ports on the Caspian (on which only Russian, and not Persian, steamers are allowed) or by the Trans-Caspian Railway, and with England and British India by way of the Persian Gulf. The sea-borne trade of Persia, which passes through the ports of Bushire, Lingah, and Bunder Abbas, and vid Bagdad, amounted in 1904 to over 2 millions. There are several English firms at Bushire, the chief port on the Gulf, and an entrepôt for trade with Shiraz, Ispahan, and Tehran, and many European business houses at Tehran, now the central exchange and money market, and at Tabriz, the entrepôt for European goods coming vid Trebizond. The shipping of the Persian Gulf is almost wholly British. A subsidised Russian line runs four steamers a year from Odessa. Persia's chief imports are cotton piece-goods (mainly from the British Empire and Russia) and sugar (from Russia and France), with woollen goods, silk goods, cotton yarn, tea, metal wares, gold and silver, petroleum, and indigo. The principal exports are dried fruits, raw cotton, pearls, opium, rice, wool, fish, carpets, and silk cocoons. A new specific tariff on imports and exports was introduced in 1903, when vexatious internal dues were abolished. The customs (as also the post-office) have, since 1900, been managed by Belgian officials. A commercial mission from India visited south-east Persia in 1904–5. Native dealers are reputed to be dishonest, and legal redress is hard to obtain. The (English) Imperial Bank of Persia has its head office at Tehran, with branches in the chief cities, and issues notes. There are also one Russian and two native banks. The foreign debt of Persia is about £3,400,000, at 6 per cent., borrowed in 1900 and 1902 from the Russian Banque d'Escompte for 75 years, and redeemable in 10 years. It is guaranteed by the Russian Government, and secured on the customs. Until it is redeemed no new foreign loan can be contracted, except with the consent of the Russian bank. It is rumoured, however (Nov. 1906), that a joint Anglo-Russian loan is being negotiated, and that British and Russian spheres of influence are being demarcated, without impairing the integrity of Persia. The number of British consuls has been increased in recent years.

Peru is a maritime Republic of South America, situated between 1° 31′ 29″ and 19° 13′ S. latitude and between 62° 6′ and 81° 20′ 45″ W. The territory between 17° 47′ S. and 19° 13′ S. is still occupied by Chili. The question of the provinces of Tacna and Arica is to be settled by a plebiscite, which will determine to which of the two countries these territories are to belong. It has not yet been possible to arrive at an arrangement for carrying out the stipulations of the Treaty of Ancon concerning these two provinces. Peru has a coast line of about 1,300 miles. It is bounded on the north by the republics of Ecuador and Colombia, as the latter claims a territory in the Amazonian basin; on the east by the Brazils and Bolivia, and on the south by Chile and Bolivia. Peru has boundary questions with all the neighbouring republics. It is customary to estimate the area of Peru at about 500,000 square miles, but if the extreme claims of Peru be taken into consideration, the area is, of course, infinitely larger. The population is estimated at 4,000,000 by the Lima Geographical Society, but no census has been taken since 1876. The country is traversed throughout its length by the Andes, running parallel to the Pacific coast. The coast region is sandy desert, except where watered by transverse mountain streams, but capable of cultivation in the highest degree by irrigation. The valleys running to the coast are very fertile, and the mountains are rich in minerals, among which silver, quicksilver, copper and coal (of inferior quality) are conspicuous; while in the department of Piura, along the coast, there are important beds of petroleum. Gold is found in many districts, but especially in the province of Carabaya, where mining on an important scale is carried on. An American syndicate has bought four-fifths of the whole mineral zone of Cerro de Pasco, and many others in neighbouring mining districts, and has constructed a railway from Oroya to Cerro de Pasco. The eastern provinces are of vast extent and fertility, with a tropical climate. The medicinal productions of that region are of great value, comprising cinchona, or Peruvian bark (of which little is now exported), sarsaparilla, copaiba, &c. India-rubber is an important product of the country. Coca, cocoa, and coffee are grown on a small scale. Sugar is the staple agricultural article of the country. The Lobos and other islands on the Pacific coast provide the guano.

The total length of the railways open (1905) was 100 miles. A railway from Guaqui, on the Bolivian side of Lake Titicaca, to La Paz, has been completed, and extensions are in hand on other lines, from Sicnani to Cuzco and from Oroya to Huancayo. There is also steam navigation on that lake and the River Desaguadero. The eastern rivers are also navigated to some extent by steam craft.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy consists of five vessels, two of which are in good condition. Two swift cruisers are building (1906) at Barrow. The principal imports are coal, cotton, woollen, linen, and silk goods, drugs, earthen and stone wares, machinery, explosives, metals, and manufactures thereof, oils, stationery, paper manufactures, timber, and wheat. The chief exports are sugar, copper and other ores, guano, gold, silver, cotton, llama and alpaca wool, and rubber. A small quantity of coffee is also exported. Excepting the coffee grown in Yungas, Bolivia, there is no better coffee in the world than that grown in the Perené Chanchamayo and Huanuco districts.

For Education, see p. 636.

Peru has no foreign debt. An arrangement was concluded in January, 1890, by the Peruvian Government for the cancelling of the external debt (which amounted, with arrears of interest, to over £50,000,000), under which the State railways, the guano up to 2,000,000 tons, certain rights in the Cerro de Pasco district, and vast tracts of land are vested in the Peruvian Corporation. There are disputes outstanding between the Government and the Corporation. A loan of £600,000 has been concluded with the German Bank, guaranteed by the salt tax.

The total amount of the capital of the interest-bearing funded debt is £2,660,645, bearing interest at the rate of 1 per cent. Claims of every kind upon the Government are being converted into a non-interest bearing funded debt, which is redeemed at a low rate, which fluctuates. For the year 1905 the capital of this debt was £806,000.

Peru has now a gold standard, the unit being of the same weight and fineness as the £ sterling which, with the $10 piece, are legal tender. Half-sovereigns and $5 gold pieces are in circulation. Exchange was steady in 1905 at 24*d.* to the $.

The most westerly Kingdom of Europe, and a part of the great Iberian Peninsula; it lies in 37° —42° 8′ N. lat. and 6° 15′—9° 30′ W. long., being 360 miles in length from N. to S., and averaging about 100 in breadth from E. to W. Continental Portugal contains an area of 34,254 square miles, with a population in 1900 of 5,016,267, exclusive of the colonies. The Azores and Madeira (1,237 square miles, pop. 406,865) form part of the kingdom, which thus has a population of 5,423,132. The chief products are wheat, barley, oats, maize, flax, hemp, and the vine in elevated tracts; in the lowlands, rice, olives, oranges, lemons, citrons, figs, and almonds. There are extensive forests of oak, chestnut, sea-pine, and cork, the cultivation of the vine and the olive being among the chief branches of industry; the rich red wine known to us as "port" is shipped from Oporto. Its mineral products are important—copper, lead, tin, antimony, coal, manganese, iron, slate, and bay-salt, which last, from its hardness and purity, is in demand. Its manufactures consist of gloves, silk, woollen, linen, and cotton fabrics, metal and earthenware goods, tobacco, cigars, &c. The exports consist to the extent of 50 per cent. of wine, which is the chief industrial product of the country; others are cork, cattle, copper-ore, fruits, oil, sardines and salt. The imports are manufactured goods—hardware, cotton and woollen stuffs, machinery, wheat, sugar, dried fish, coal, &c. There is a commercial marine (1903) of 82 steamers and 509 sailing vessels, about 120,000 tonnage. Railways 1,348 miles in extent were open for traffic in 1901, and there are 5,301 miles of telegraph wire in 1902. For many years the national income has been considerably less than the expenditure; this deficiency has added to the national debt.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy consists of 39 steamers and 16 sailing vessels, many scarcely seaworthy, and about 4,898 sailors.

COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES.

MADEIRA (imports, 1904, £431,556; exports, £171,793) and the AZORES are an integral part of Portugal proper; the CAPE VERDE ISLANDS, off the Cape of that name in Senegambia, consist of St. Antonio, St. Nicolas, Fogo, Santiago, Boavista, Sal, and some smaller islands, having a total area of 1,490 square miles, and a population of about 150,000; the capital is St. Vincent. In West Africa a portion of the GUINEA COAST, with the BISSAGOS ISLANDS, was acquired in 1885; the capital is Cacheo, and the territory has an area of 14,370 square miles with about 1,500,000 inhabitants. In the Gulf of Guinea the two islands of ST. THOMAS (direct and transit trade with mother country, 1904, £1,715,000; principal export, cocoa) and PRINCIPE were obtained in 1879; area 420 square miles (population about 40,000). Between the French Congo and the Free State are the territories of LANDANA and CABENDA, area about 2,030 square miles (population 30,000); and extending from the left bank of the Congo river to the right bank of the Cumene river is the vast province of ANGOLA (direct and transit trade with mother country, 1904, £2,163,000; principal export, rubber), with about 1,350 miles of coast-line and an area of 510,670 square miles (population about 4,000,000). The capital of Angola is St. Paul de Loanda; railways, 300 miles open, and about 250 miles of telegraph wires. LORENZO MARQUES and MOZAMBIQUE together constitute PORTUGUESE EAST AFRICA; area about 297,750 square miles, population 2,000,000. In the southern province are the ports of Lorenzo Marques (Delagoa Bay) and Beira, and in the northern, Quilimane, Mozambique, and Ibo: the exports of Portuguese East Africa amounting to £1,500,000 in 1903, and the imports to £750,000. Parts of Mozambique are leased to the Mozambique Company and to the Nyassa Company; Railways—Delagoa Bay Railway from Lorenzo Marques north-west to join the Transvaal system on the frontier, about 60 miles, and the Beira Railway, from Beira to Umtali on the borders of Rhodesia, about 200 miles. PORTUGUESE INDIA.—The territory of GOA contains an area of 1,080 sq. miles, and a population of 475,513 (1901). The city of NOVA GOA (New Goa or Panjim), capital of that territory, and of all the Portuguese possessions east of the Cape of Good Hope, is situated on the Malabar Coast, about 265 miles S.S.E. of Bombay. Old Goa, five or six miles inland, has fallen into decay, but is still remarkable for its cathedral and ancient buildings. The Portuguese West of India Railway (51 miles) connects the harbour of Mormugao with the Southern Mahratta Railway in British India. The chief products are rice, coco-nuts, and salt. The direct foreign trade is small, but there is a large transit trade with British India. Trade facilities were improved in 1906. Commerce is chiefly in the hands of natives of British India. A German steamship line plying between Bombay and Zanzibar, subsidised by Portugal, calls every three weeks. The principal imports are cotton piece-goods, rice, kerosene, sugar, tobacco, &c.; the principal exports are coco-nuts, fish, betel-nuts, &c. The other Portuguese possessions in India are DAMAUN (pop. 41,671, area 384 sq. miles), to the north of Bombay; and DIU, a town and fort on an island off the Gujarat coast (pop. 14,614, area 52 sq. miles). Of the total population (531,798) of Portuguese India, 262,648 are Catholics, 260,144 Hindus, and 8,431 Mohammedans. The revenue of the Portuguese possessions amounts to about £230,000.

* Budget proposals for 1905-6 were not passed by Cortes, and those for 1904-5 were therefore adopted provisionally.

Governor-General, Col. Novaes.

Portugal also possesses TIMOR in the East Indian Archipelago and MACAO, an island near the mouth of the Canton river.

The Kingdom of Rumania consists of the Moldo-Wallachian provinces formerly belonging to Turkey, but which by the Treaty of Berlin, 13 July, 1878, were recognised as an independent State, and the territory of the Dobruja added to them. On the 26th March, 1881, Rumania was raised to a Kingdom. The entire area is 50,702 square miles, with a population of about 6,150,000. The dominating religion is that of the Greek Church (5,200,000); Roman Catholics, 114,200; Protestants, 13,800; Jews, 400,000. The soil is among the richest in Europe, and, but for the fearful summer droughts, would be also the most productive. The climate is extreme, for summer heats and winter colds are intense. The agricultural produce consists of wheat, maize, millet, barley, rye, beans, and peas. Vines and fruits are abundant. The forests are of great extent and importance, but the riches of the country consist mainly in its cattle and sheep. Minerals and precious metals are said to be abundant, but only salt and petroleum are obtained. The imports are chiefly the manufactured goods of Western Europe; the exports consist principally of wheat, barley, maize, rock-salt, spirits, hides, wood and cattle. The total length of railways is 1,969 miles (1902), and there are 223 telegraph offices with 9,915 miles of wire.

An International Commission, created by the Treaty of Paris, 1856, and whose powers were enlarged by the Treaty of Berlin, 1878, has its seat at Galatz, and exercises sovereign powers over the navigation of the Danube; the British representative is Lt.-Col. H. Trotter, C.B., Consul-General. Its income, principally derived from shipping dues, amounts to about £60,000 per annum. On November 10, 1892, a large dock was opened at Ibraila (Brahilov), and in 1896 a canal through the "Iron Gates" rendered that hitherto dangerous part perfectly navigable.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). There is a small navy of 12 steamers.

An Empire comprising one-sixth of the territorial surface of the globe, stretching over a large portion of its northern regions, and approaching very nearly in extent to the dominion under British rule. In addition to Russia in Europe (exclusive of the Caucasus), situate between lat. 44° 28′—76° 33′ N. and 17° 40′—64° 23′ E. long., and embracing more than half of that continent, it comprehends one-third of Asia, and until 1867 included also a large section of North America. The empire comprises:

| | English Square Miles. | Population in 1897.* |
|---|---|---|
| European Russia: | | |
| Russia Proper (50 Provs.) | 1,859,195 | 93,467,736 |

| Russian subjects in Khiva and Bokhara | — | 6,412 |
| | 8,379,044 | 128,161,249 |

Of the total population 64,616,280 were men and 64,594,883 women, in 1897, and the population is 50·3 per sq. mile in European Russia, 51·2 in Caucasia, and 15·3 for the whole Empire.

In the European parts of Russia alone the population increases annually at the rate of nearly a million and a half. The largest towns are St. Petersburg (1,313,300), Moscow (1,173,427), Warsaw (756,426), Odessa (449,673), Lodz (351,570), Kieff (329,000), Riga (256,197), Kharkoff (197,405), Vilna (162,633), Saratov (143,431), Kazan (143,707), Ekaterinoslav (135,552), Rostoff (119,889), Astrakhan (121,580), Tula (109,279), and Kishineff (125,787); whilst Nijni Novgorod, Nikolaieff, Samara and Minsk have populations between 90,000 and 95,000. In Asiatic Russia the Caucasus contains two towns with over 100,000 inhabitants, Baku (179,133) and Tiflis (160,645); Turkestan contains five large towns, Tashkend (156,000), Namangan, Samarkand and Andijan; in Siberia Tomsk, Irkutsk, and Ekaterinburg have each about 50,000 inhabitants. Nijni Novgorod, though small, is a station on the Trans-Siberian Railway, and has annually the largest fair in the world. The various nationalities in 1882 were represented about as follows:—Russ, 69,770,000; Poles, 6,010,000; Lithuanians, 2,910,000; Germans, 1,120,000; Swedes, 270,000; Tajiks (Persians), &c., 1,125,000; Armenians, 800,000; Jews, 5,189,401; Caucasians, 2,850,000; Finns, 2,000,000; Turks and Tartars, 7,700,000; Mongols, 530,000; various, 584,000. The established religion of the empire is the Russo-Greek Church, officially called the Orthodox Catholic Faith. According to religions there were (1897):—Orthodox Church, 87,384,480 (or 70 per cent. of the whole population); Dissenters, 2,173,738; Roman Catholics, 11,420,927; Protestants, 3,743,209; other Christians, 1,221,511; Jews, 5,189,401; Mohammedans, 13,889,421 (or 11 per cent. of whole population); and other non-Christians, 645,503. European Russia consists mainly of an immense plain; the Valdai hills in the west rise only to about 1,000 ft., and the Lubliu hills in the south-west to about 1,500 ft. On the right bank of Lake Imandra, in the Kola peninsula, is an elevation of 3,300 ft. The Timanski range, in the province of Archangel, rises to about 3,000 ft., and Mount Lujaur-Ort in Finland to about 3,400 ft. In the Crimea and Caucasus various heights are over 4,500 ft., and the Obdorsk and Ural Mountains, which form the borderland between Europe and Asia, rise in many places to between 4,000 and 5,000 ft. In Siberia the principal ranges are the Altai, Sayansk, Baikal, Yablonoi and Verkhoiansk mountains, with a volcanic chain in Kamtchatka. In Russian Turkestan are portions of the Thian Shan range, and in Bokhara are the Pamirs, the "Roof of the World," and in all these ranges are heights of over 5,000 ft. The principal rivers are the Volga, Ural, Dnieper, Dniester, Don, Dvina, Duna, and Neva. The Volga is the largest river in Europe, and is navigable almost to its source. In Siberia, the Ob, Yenisei, Lena, and Amur are each larger than the Volga, with many important tributaries. The river Amur, dividing Manchuria from Eastern Siberia, is navigable from its mouth to Chita, in the Trans-Baikal province, by shallow draught steamers, and is of importance, together with the Trans-Siberian Railway, in spreading Russian influence in the outlying portions of the Chinese Empire.

A great portion of Russian territory is unfit for cultivation; in the north the tundras are almost constantly frozen, but in a short summer provide good pasture and certain berries fit for human food; in the south, round the head of the Caspian Sea, is an immense sandy desert steppe; whilst some of the interior provinces (to the extent of about 460,000,000 acres) and nearly the whole of Siberia are clothed with forests, in which the fir, pine, birch, oak, lime, maple and ash predominate. The country between the Baltic and Black Sea, however, is eminently fertile, producing abundance of grain. The chief cereal raised is wheat, of which Russia is the second largest grower in Europe, the average harvest in the period 1898–1902 being about 9,200,000 tons; other cereals are barley (4,600,000 tons), oats (9,800,000 tons), buckwheat, millet, and especially rye (18,500,000 tons), the staple food of the inhabitants. Hemp and flax are extensively cultivated, and of late years potatoes and tobacco, 38,000 tons of the latter being produced in 1901 (mainly in the Poltava and Tchernigoff governments, and in the Crimea). The Obdorsk and Ural Mountains contain very great mineral riches, and, with the Altai range, are the principal seat of mining and metallic industry, producing gold, platinum, copper, iron of very superior quality, rock-salt, marble, and kaolin, or china-clay. Silver, gold, and lead are also obtained in large quantities from the mines in the Altai Mountains. Russia is now the largest producer of petroleum in the world, the output amounting to 85,000,000 barrels (of 42 gallons) in 1901, as against 69,000,000 barrels, the output of the U.S. An immense bed of coal, both steam and anthracite, and apparently inexhaustible, has been discovered in the basin of the Donetz (between the rivers Donetz and Dnieper). The coal output for the whole of Russia in 1902 was 15,750,000 tons (against 15,922,000 tons in 1900); other mineral products in 1903 were cast iron (2,405,000 tons); gold (1,134,000 oz.); platinum (366 poods = 6 tons, being 95 per cent. of the world's output), steel and rails (1901, 1,198,000 tons), copper (8,350 tons in 1902), and quicksilver (351 tons in 1901 and 400 tons in 1902).

The principal ports are Petersburg, the naval depôt and fortress Kronstadt, Narva, Riga, Libau, Pernau and Vindau (Baltic), Hango (Gulf of Bothnia), Revel, Helsingförs and Wiborg (Gulf of Finland), Archangel and Ekaterinsk (Arctic and White Seas), Odessa, Nicolaieff, Sevastopol, Nova-Rossiisk, Berdiansk, and Batoum, Taganrog, Mariupol, Rostoff and Kertch (Black Sea and Sea of Azov), Astrakhan, Derbent and Baku (Caspian Sea), and Nicolaieffsk, Vladivostok, and Petropaulovsk in Kamtchatka (Pacific).

TRADE AND COMMERCE.—With metallurgical and engineering factories, Russia possesses many extensive manufacturing establishments for weaving, tanning, fur-dressing, &c. Linen is largely manufactured by hand-looms, the chief operations consisting in spinning and weaving flax and hemp. Woollen and worsted stuffs, fine cloths, and mixed fabrics are also produced. The industrial production increased in the 9 years 1892–1900 as follows: Coal, 424 million to 985 million poods; cast iron, from 65 million to 177 million poods; wrought iron and steel, from 61 million to 124 million poods, and cotton goods, from 8·7 to 14·4 million poods. The chief imports are cotton, tea, and other colonial produce, iron and machinery, wool, wine, fruits and vegetables, oil, &c. The chief exports are grain (56 per cent.), raw and dressed flax, linseed, timber, hides and skins, hemp, tallow, wool, spirits, tow and bristles. The trade of Russia in 1903 was divided among the principal commercial nations as follows (in millions of £'s):—

DEFENCE (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy (for which £12,345,000 was allowed in 1905) consisted in December, 1905, of 15 battleships (including 4 building and 6 very old), 10 coast defence ships (very old), 12 first-class cruisers, 12 second-class cruisers, and 120 gunboats and torpedo craft. Of the above, 10 battleships (3 building and 5 very old) and 3 cruisers are in the Black Sea.

EDUCATION (see p. 637).

RAILWAYS, &c.—The total length of lines open for traffic on 1 January, 1904, was 35,939 miles, including 6,023 miles in Siberia and Manchuria, but exclusive of 2,106 miles in Finland. The Southern portion of the Manchurian Railway is no longer under Russian control.

In 1901 the mileage and revenue were :—

| Line. | Mileage. | Gross Revenue. |
|---|---|---|
| European Russia. | | |
| State | 18,477 | rs. 366,917,368 |

In 1903 the gross revenue amounted to £72,000,000, and working expenses to £48,600,000. The gross revenue from the State railways is estimated at £49,800,000 in 1905, showing a net revenue of £5,400,000 after deducting expenses of working, improvements and purchase of rolling stock. The interest payable by the Government on railway bonds amounts to nearly £14,000,000.

There were (1901) 10,967 post-offices, carrying 996,379,947 letters, &c. Of telegraphs there were (1901) 6,096 offices, with 106,913 miles of line.

The sea-going commercial marine consisted in 1903 of 2,489 sailing vessels and 810 steamers, with a total tounage of 668,550; the ocean shipping of the Russian Empire is comparatively insignificant, but the internal (lake and river) shipping is considerable.

REVENUE.—The main source of revenue is the liquor traffic. The gross revenue from the Government spirits monopoly (which has now been introduced practically throughout the Empire) is estimated at £59,000,000 (1906), and the net revenue at £42,000,000, exclusive of revenue from excise (£3,000,000).

* Budget estimates.

† War expenditure is not included in the Budget for 1905. It is stated to have amounted to £65,800,000 in 1904. It has been met by loans, the issue of Treasury bonds bearing interest at varying rates, and the issue of paper currency against gold deposited in the State Treasury. The total note circulation has been increased from £66,000,000 to £127,000,000. Foreign loans were placed at Paris and Berlin to a nominal amount of £56,000,000 (interest 5 and 4½ per cent), realising about 95 per cent.; and two Internal loans (interest 5 per cent.) were raised in 1905 of the total nominal amount of £42,328,000, issued to the public at 96 and 96½. Thus the permanent indebtedness of the Empire has been increased during the war by £98,000,000, of which £31,750,000, placed in Paris, is redeemable in 1909. Very little additional revenue has been raised by taxation. A new loan may, however, be necessary for the redemption of Treasury bonds issued during the war to the amount of £43,000,000.

THE GRAND DUCHY OF FINLAND.

Grand Duke, The Emperor of Russia.
Governor-General, M. Gerhard.

A Grand Duchy on the gulfs of Finland and Bothnia, which was conquered by Russia from Sweden, and finally annexed in 1808. The area is 144,254 square miles, with a population of about 2,851,000 in 1903, of whom about 2,432,000 are Finns, 395,000 Swedes, 20,000 Russians, 3,000 Germans and 2,000 Laps, leading a nomadic life in the north. Nearly all the inhabitants are Lutherans. There is a university at Helsingfors, with 2,697 students, of whom 563 are women. The leading crops are rye, barley, oats, potatoes. The iron mines provide the chief industry, and the forests are a great source of wealth, immense quantities of timber being prepared for export. There are 2,106 miles of railway; and a merchant fleet of 2,589 vessels (mostly small), of which 334 are steamers.

The Diet consists of four estates, nobles, clergy, burgesses, and peasants, and is convoked triennially, and the country is chiefly governed by the Imperial Finnish Senate, of 22 members. This form of government will give way on Jan. 1, 1907, to a new Constitution involving a single Chamber elected by universal suffrage of both sexes. Women are likewise eligible for election to the Chamber. Finland is thus the first country to concede true equality of the sexes; and it is noteworthy that it has been gained without recourse to "Suffragette" agitation. The Finnish troops have now been incorporated in the Russian army, and Finland has been made part of the Petersburg Military District. The revenue in 1903 was £4,582,067, and the expenditure £4,197,254; the debt amounts to £5,367,312. The imports in 1904 were £10,648,000 (of which 60 per cent. was timber), and the exports £8,552,000. The capital is Helsingfors; population, 116,000 (including Russian garrison).

Consul-General, M. J. Kelly, 8 Idol Lane, E.C.

Salvador extends along the Pacific coast for 170 miles, with a general breadth of 43 miles, and contains an estimated area of 13,177 square miles, with a population estimated at 1,000,000. It is divided into 14 departments, and has four ports, Acajutla, La Libertad, La Union, and El Triumfo. The principal exports are coffee, indigo, tobacco, sugar, silver, balsam (known as balsam of Peru), rice, hides, cedar, and fustic. *A railway nearly 100 miles in length connects Acajutla with the capital and Santa Ana, the coffee centre. Earthquakes are frequent, and the capital (now rebuilt) was entirely destroyed by one in 1873; but the country has of late years suffered comparative immunity. There are 85 post-offices and 168 telegraph offices, with 2,800 miles of wire.

SAMOS.

Prince Governor, Costaki Caratheodory Bey.
Senators, Th. Sofoulis, M. Chadjidaki, S. Ioannides, and D. Constantinides.

A principality of the Ottoman Empire, more or less independent under the guarantee of Great Britain, France and Russia (1832), is one of the Anatolian Islands, with an area of 180 sq. miles and about 50,000 inhabitants, the capital (Vathy) having a good harbour. The whole island is fertile, and wine, raisins, olive-oil, and tobacco are produced and exported. The imports are valued at about £200,000 (of which about 25 per cent. are British), and the exports at the same figure, of which nearly four-fifths is wine. The revenue for 1905–6 was £27,500, and expenditure £26,000; there is no debt. Antimony, silver-lead, manganese, emery, and copper are known to exist in the island.

CAPITAL, Vathy. Pop. circ. 25,000.

SAN MARINO.

A small Republic in the hills near Rimini, on the Adriatic, founded, it is stated, by a pious mason of Dalmatia in the 4th century, and governed by a Council of 60 (20 nobles, 20 townsmen, and 20 peasants), of whom two are elected as Regents for six months (1 April and 1 October), being thereafter ineligible for office for three years. The area is 33 square miles, the population 11,000. There is an army of about 100. The village of San Marino (pop. 1,500) occupies the slope of Mount Titan, and has an impregnable castle, where King Berengar of Lombardy took refuge in 950 A.D., a fine church and Government palace, and a theatre. Agriculture and viticulture flourish. By a treaty concluded in 1872 the Republic has placed itself under the protection of Italy.

A Kingdom of Eastern Europe, separated from Hungary by the Danube and Save. By the constitution of 1889 a "Skupstchina," a parliament elected by ballot, represented the people; this constitution was re-established by the present king. By the Berlin Treaty, 1878, it received a large accession of territory, and now has an area estimated at 18,757 square miles, with a population in 1901 of 2,500,000. The surface of the country is mountainous, containing the remains of formerly extensive forests and uncultivated heaths. Agriculture is carried on in a somewhat primitive fashion. The principal crops are maize for home consumption, and wheat for export; flax, hemp, and tobacco are also grown, and silk-culture is carried on to a limited extent. The imports consist mainly of cottons, sugar, and colonial goods, hardware, woollens, &c.; the export, of dried prunes (11·6 per cent.), pigs, and wool, besides wheat, wine, hides, cattle, and horses. The bulk of the trade is with Austria. There were (1902) 369 kilometres of railway, and, in 1894, 3,174 kilometres of telegraph, with 111 post-offices and 392 kilometres of telephone.

The Kingdom of Siam (estimated area, 220,000 square miles) is a buffer State between British Burma and French Indo-China. The boundary of Burma and N.W. Siam was demarcated in 1891. By the Anglo-French agreement of May, 1896, the main central part of Siam, including the basins of the rivers Menam, Petchaburi, and Petriu, was neutralised, the two Governments agreeing not to send troops or obtain any exclusive advantages in it. The two Powers retained freedom of action in the portions of Siam west and east of the neutralised zone. The western portion, adjoining British territory, includes the Malay States dependent on Siam. The eastern portion, the Mekong Valley, including Battambang and Angkor, adjoins Cambodia and the territories acquired by France under the treaty with Siam in 1893. By the Anglo-French Agreement of April, 1904, both Powers disclaimed any intention of annexing the Siamese territory in their respective spheres of influence. By an arrangement with Siam France abandoned Chantabun and the 25-kilometre neutral zone of the 1893 treaty; but the port of Krat became French, thus giving Cambodia access to the sea, while France received trading concessions on the right bank of the Mekong and power to make railways where navigation of the river is impossible. The provinces of Melupre and Bassac were recognised as French. The population, according to the first census (1905), numbers 6,686,000. Besides the Siamese there are many Chinese (largely engaged in trade and industry), the rest being Shans, Laos, Malays, Burmese, and Cambodians. The principal religion is Buddhism, and education is mostly conducted by the Buddhist monks. Bangkok is the only much-frequented port. About 80 per cent. of Siamese sea-borne trade, which centres at Bangkok, is with the British Empire, and is largely in the hands of British firms or of Chinese trading from Singapore and Hong Kong. German shipping now largely exceeds British through the purchase of certain British steamship lines. Norwegian shipping also exceeds British. The chief products of Siam are rice and teak. The area under rice is being much enlarged by irrigation. Bangkok has over 50 rice mills. The teak industry in the great forests of N. Siam is mainly in English hands. Rice constitutes 80 per cent. and teak 14 per cent. of the exports; while pepper and marine products are also exported in considerable quantities. Among imports are treasure, cotton goods and yarn, silk goods, provisions, gunny bags, kerosene, sugar, opium, metal wares, machinery, &c. The general tariff rate is 3 per cent. ad valorem. In 1905 the total imports were £3,994,000, and the exports £5,989,000 (rice £4,600,650, and teak £817,400). Burma imports teak and cattle overland from Siam, and exports thither cotton and silk goods, &c. Except tin, rubies and sapphires, there are no important mineral products. The King is an absolute monarch. He appoints his successor. There is an Executive Council of Ministers with a general European adviser, and, since 1895, a Legislative Council of State, consisting of the Ministers, six royal princes, and from ten to twenty members appointed by the King, who has an absolute power of veto. A number of English, Germans, Italians, Danes, and Japanese are employed as departmental advisers. The administration of the revenue and of justice and the police has been improved. The revenue is derived from opium and spirit monopolies, land and capitation taxes, customs, &c. Gambling monopolies have been abolished, and increased land and fishery taxes and customs duties substituted. The first Siamese loan was raised in 1904 at 95, £1,000,000 being required for railways. Siam has an army of 8,000 men, and a few small gunboats. About 400 miles of railways (mostly State-owned) are now open for traffic. Bangkok is connected by rail with Petchaburi (95 miles), and with Korat (165 miles). A State line that is being constructed from Ban Phagi to Chiengmai (pop. 50,000), the second town in size, has reached Paknampho (162 miles). A line to Tachiu was opened in 1905. Good roads are few. There are 3,000 miles of telegraph lines.

The currency is the tical, of which the value was fixed at 1*s.* 6*d.* on Nov. 1, 1906. The Mint was closed to the free coinage of silver in Nov., 1902. The Mexican dollar is largely the currency of commerce. In N.W. Siam the Indian rupee is current. The Government issues notes. A gold currency is proposed.

A Kingdom situate in the south-west of Europe, between 36°—43° 45′ N. lat. and 4° 25′ E.—9° 20′ W. long., bounded on the south and east by the Mediterranean, on the west by the Atlantic and Portugal, and on the north by the Bay of Biscay and France, from which it is separated by the Pyrenees; and occupying the larger portion of the great Iberian Peninsula. Its coast-line extends 1,317 miles—722 formed by the Mediterranean and 605 by the Atlantic. It was formerly divided into 14 kingdoms (now forming 49 provinces); the ancient Provinces still best understood are New Castile, La Mancha, Old Castile, Leon, Asturias, Galicia, Estremadura, Andalusia, Murcia, Valencia, Aragon, Catalonia, Basque Provinces, with the Canary and Balearic Isles, comprising an area of 196,173 English square miles, and a population (at the census of 1900) of 18,607,674. The principal towns are Madrid (pop.; 540,000), Barcelona (533,000), Valencia (214,000), Seville (150,000), Malaga (130,000), Murcia (112,000), and Saragossa (100,000); and there are also twelve other towns with over 50,000 inhabitants. The Constitution upon which the present government is formed is dated 30 June, 1876. The interior of the peninsula consists of an elevated tableland, surrounded and traversed by mountain ranges—the Pyrenees, the Cantabrian Mountains, the Sierra Guadarrama, S. Morena, S. Nevada, Montes de Toledo, &c. The principal rivers are the Douro, the Tagus, the Guadiana, the Guadalquiver, the Ebro, and the Minho. Spain is rich in iron, copper, and lead; its mineral resources are only partially exploited, and principally by foreign capital under foreign direction. The country is generally fertile, and well adapted to agriculture and the cultivation of heat-loving fruits—as olives, oranges, lemons, almonds, pomegranates, and dates. The agricultural products comprise wheat, barley, maize, oats, rice, with hemp and flax of the best quality. The vine is cultivated in every province; in the south-west, Jerez, the well-known sherry and tent wines are made; in the south-east, the Malaga and Alicante. The principal articles imported are raw cotton, spirits, fish, wheat and flour, sugar, coal, timber, woollen manufactures, machinery and railway materials, hides, &c. The principal exports are wine, copper and copper ores, lead, iron ores, olive oil, cattle, raisins, oranges, cork, esparto grass, wool, salt, quicksilver, grapes, &c. Trade was for many years mostly confined to France and Great Britain, but Germany and the United States are now competing for a share. Home manufacture is rigidly protected by high customs duties.

The mercantile marine in 1905 consisted of 157 sailing vessels over 100 tons, and 515 steam vessels of a total tonnage of 711,509; during 1904 vessels of 14,847,363 tons entered, and of 15,742,322 tons cleared at Spanish ports; 3,912,359 tons of cargo were landed, and 10,938,878 tons were shipped.

Nearly all the 49 Provinces are now connected by railways, of which about 8,206 miles have been completed, and there are 18,000 miles of telegraph.

The principal exports to the United Kingdom in 1905 were:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Copper | £1,264,057 | Pyrites | £830,720 |
| Cork | 246,936 | Olive Oil | 137,726 |
| Fruit, Preserved | 158,122 | Quicksilver | 237,492 |
| Grapes, Raw | 504,428 | Esparto, &c. | 217,560 |
| Oranges | 1,588,876 | Onions | 473,762 |
| Iron Ore | 4,125,919 | Silver Ore | 133,057 |
| Lead | 1,413,950 | Tomatoes | 100,695 |
| Nuts (inc. Almonds) | 422,904 | Wine | 437,213 |
| Raisins | 432,532 | | |

And the chief domestic imports from the United Kingdom in 1905 were:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chemicals | £238,487 | Manure | £634,562 |
| Coal and Coke | 1,224,779 | Metals, all sorts | 382,702 |
| Cotton Manufacts. | 244,866 | Wool, &c. | 114,936 |
| Machinery, all sorts | 486,426 | Yarn | 123,819 |

The Navy was almost entirely destroyed during the war of 1897 with the U.S.A., and there now remain one second-class battleship of 10,000 tons, the Pelayo (1886); a cruiser of 10,122 tons, the Carlos V. (1895), and three of 7,000 tons, the Cardinal Cisneros (1897), Cataluña (1900), Princesa de Asturias (1896); two old armoured coast defence ships of 7,300 tons, Numancia (1863) and Vitoria (1865); the royal yacht Giralda, 2,057 tons; four cruisers of over 1,000 tons, four destroyers, three training ships, and small craft.

SPANISH OVER-SEA POSSESSIONS.

The over-sea possessions are regarded as an integral part of Spain, the head-quarters of the local administration being Teneriffe, in the Canary Islands. In the Gulf of Guinea, the island of FERNANDO PO, and ANNOBOM, CORISO and ELOBY islands off the coast of French Congo. On the mainland CAPE SAN JUAN and the right of navigation over the rivers Benito and Muni, with the district bounded on the north by the German Cameroons, on the east by the 9th meridian E. of Paris, and on the south by the Muni river, while the district between Capes Bojador and Blanco is under protection. To the north-west are the CANARY ISLES (area about 3,000 square miles, population 334,521), the capital being Santa Cruz (Tenerife). In Morocco are several "Presidios"; *IFNI, near Cape NON, TETUAN and CEUTA (30 square miles, population 16,000), opposite Gibraltar, and the coast towns of Gomera, Alhucemas, Melilla, and the Zaffarin Islands. The total area of these possessions is about 244,000 square miles, with a population of about 135,000.

* At his trial at Gibraltar, Major Spilsbury, relying (a) on the Treaty of Tetuan, 1858, and (b) on "common knowledge" as demonstrated by the above entry in Whitaker's Almanack, pleaded that Ifni was a Spanish Possession. The court-martial decided, however, that Ifni was part of the dominions of the Sultan of Morocco.

The Kingdoms of Sweden and Norway were united under one sovereign from 1814 until the dissolution of the union in 1905.

Sweden comprises the eastern half of the Scandinavian peninsula, and, except the capital, is divided into 24 governments, "Län," with an area of 172,876 square miles, and a population, 31 Dec., 1905, of 5,294,885, nearly all Protestant. Nearly 54 per cent. of the population are devoted to agriculture, about 246,000 being owners and 44,000 tenants of the land they cultivate. The country for the most part is flat, with pleasant undulations, rising in the north-west to the Kölen Mountains, which separate Sweden from Norway; and may be divided into three separate districts—the northern, forest; central, mining; the southern, agricultural. The lakes cover about one-twelfth of the surface. The climate in the south is favourable for producing grain. The principal articles of cultivation are the various cereals—oats, rye, barley, wheat—and potatoes. The forests are very extensive, covering one-half of the surface of the country, and consisting of pine, birch, fir; these are of great importance, supplying timber, pitch, and tar, and also the chief fuel. The mineral products are extremely rich; iron of excellent quality, that known as the Dannemora iron being converted into the finest steel; gold and silver in small proportions; copper, lead, nickel, zinc, cobalt, alum, sulphur, porphyry, and marble. There is a railroad opening up the rich iron-ore districts of Lapland, and mineral trains run from Gellivare and Kiruna to Luleå on the Gulf of Bothnia and to Narvik on the Atlantic. Considerable mines of coal are being worked in Scania. The chief imports are coffee, wine, tobacco, and other ordinary colonial produce, coal, cloth, yarn, wool, cotton, hides, manure, iron, fish, oils, wheat, rye, pork, and machinery. The chief articles of export are timber, butter, iron, steel, wood pulp, paper, matches, stone, iron and zinc ores, &c. The chief domestic exports to Great Britain in 1904 were butter, iron, paper and paper-making materials, and timber; and the chief domestic imports from Great Britain in 1904 were coal, machinery, metals, wool and woollen manufactures.

Commercial travellers in Sweden are compelled to take out a licence, costing 100 crowns a month, or they incur the risk of being fined.

Railways 7,896 miles in length (of which 2,612 are the property of the State) were open at the end of 1905; and 5,962 miles of telegraph (exclusive of 4,802 railway telegraph), 172 stations, and 1,535 railway and 676 other telegraph stations (1904). There were at the same date about 139,700 miles of telephone wires.

Defence (for Army, see p. 632). The Navy consists of 79 fighting vessels (457 guns), 24 being ironclads, with some training ships, &c.

The Helvetia of the Romans, a Federal Republic of Central Europe, situated between 45° 50′—47° 84′ N. lat. and 5° 58′—10° 30′ E. long. It is composed of 22 Cantons, of very dissimilar size, united under a Constitution dated 29 May, 1874, and comprises a total area of 15,469 square miles, with a population of about 3,313,000 in 1901, who are divided between Roman Catholics, 40 per cent., and Protestants, 59 per cent., Jews numbering 7,400 and others 11,000. The population is formed by three nationalities, distinct by their language, as German 71 per cent., French 21 per cent., Italian 6 per cent., and Romanshe (in the Grisons), 1½ per cent. The most important cities are Zürich, pop. (1901) 150,000, Geneva 105,000, Basle 113,000, Berne 64,000, and Lausanne 56,000. It is the most mountainous country in Europe, having the Alps, covered with perennial snow and glaciers, rising from 5,000 to 15,213 feet in height, not only along its southern and eastern frontiers, but throughout the chief part of its interior; and the Jura mountains in the north-west. Agriculture is followed chiefly in the valleys, where wheat, oats, maize, barley, flax, hemp, and tobacco are produced, and nearly all English fruits and vegetables are grown. The forests cover about one-sixth of the whole surface. The manufactures consist chiefly of silks, cottons, linen, lace, thread, woollens, &c.; clocks and watches have long been the staple products of Geneva and Neufchâtel, while leather, gloves, pottery, tobacco and snuff, cheese, &c., are made. Being an inland country, the direct trade with the United Kingdom is comparatively small. In 1899 there were 2,396 miles of railway in working order, and 4,384 miles of telegraph.

The legislative power is vested in a Parliament, consisting of two Chambers, a National Council of 147 members, and a Council of States of 44 members; both Chambers united are called the Federal Assembly, and the members of the National Council are elected for three years, an election taking place in October. The executive power is in the hands of a Federal Council of 7 members, elected by the Federal Assembly, presided over by the President of the Confederation. The President has a salary of £720; the Vice-President and other members of the Federal Council £480 each. The members of the Federal Council are elected for three years; each year the Federal Assembly elects from this council the President and the Vice-President; they are elected for one year, the five other members for three years. Not more than one of the same canton may be elected member of the Federal Council. (For Defence, see p. 632; for Education, see p. 637.)

TRIPOLI.

Governor-General, Field-Marshal Rejeb Pasha, appointed August, 1904.

A Vilayet, or Province of the Ottoman Empire, on the northern coast of Africa, and the most easterly of the Barbary States, extending from the frontiers of Tunis to those of Egypt, a distance along the coast line of nearly 1,100 miles, and inland to the south a distance of about 800 miles. Formerly (1713–1835) it was under a native (Karamanly) dynasty, and passed under direct Turkish control in 1835. It comprises the four sub-provinces or Mutessariflicks of Tripoli, Khoms, Jabel-el-Gharb and Fezzan, and also of Benghazi or Cyrenaica, the latter being under the direct government of Constantinople since 1875. It has an area of 410,000 square miles, and a population of over 1,000,000 in Tripoli proper and Cyrenaica. There are no rivers in the country, and, the rainfall being precarious, a good harvest can only be reckoned on every four or five years. The military force of the country now numbers 10,000 men. The revenue is chiefly raised by a poll-tax, regulated according to the wealth of each individual, and by tithes, but steps are being taken to co-ordinate the incidence of taxation with that obtaining in other parts of Turkey. Barley, dates, olives, oranges, lemons and vegetables are produced, and the principal imports are metals, British and other European manufactures, tea, beads, wine and spirits, besides a number of articles for barter in Wadai, Bornu, and the Western Sudan, whither caravans proceed from Tripoli; but the caravan trade, once the mainstay of the country, has seriously diminished of late years. The principal articles of exports are ostrich feathers, ivory, skins, sponges, hides, esparto grass, cattle and horses. The ancient ruins in Cyrenaica, i.e., at Cyrene, Ptolemais, and Apollonia, are interesting to explorers, as well as those at Leptis Magna, which is close to Khoms, or 70 miles from the city of Tripoli; agricultural colonies of Cretan Moslem refugees are being formed in the neighbourhood of Cyrene and Apollonia (Marsa Susa). The town of Benghazi has a population of about 21,000, consisting of Arabs, Greeks, Maltese, and a few Levantines. The commerce in cereals, wool, cattle for Malta, and other agricultural produce, is considerable, when a sufficient rainfall causes good harvests.
